VIEWS STEEL STRIKE WITH WORKER'S EYES

Reporter Gets a Job for Inside Facts on Conditions.

A Tribune reporter was assigned to obtain a job in the Gary works of the steel corporation and learn from actual experience something of the existing conditons. He did so, and his story, with some conclusions he reached after a few hours' stay, is given herewith. His conclusions are obviously his own and are given for what they may be worth.

BY FRANK D. HOLMES.

For holding out for shorter hours and one day off a week the striking steel workers cannot be blamed. I obtained a job on Friday in the Gary works of the steel corporation and quit it the same day. It was, of course, an incomplete test, but it demonstrated to me the grind the average steel worker has to endure.

I put in three hours as an oiler on two of the huge 2,800 horse power gas engines and when they wanted me to work an all night shift again Friday night I balked. Likely the shortage of men, due to the strike, adds to the long hours for those men who are working. They expected me to work fourteen hours at night for a week and then work ten hours by day the next week, swing back on nights the third week, and so days the fourth. During those twenty-eight turns of day and night work I would be off two twenty-four hour periods. To offset this, I was expected to work two twenty-four hour continuous periods.

$1.26 for Three Hours.

I made $1.26 at my three hour job. I know it all seemed harder to me than to a man inured to such work, but I am a hardy person and have been used to manual labor.

Dressed in some old clothing, I went to the employment office at 6 o'clock Friday morning to seek a job. I found a room full of strikers who had cast aside their badges and buttons and were seeking their old places back. Foremen were darting in and out lining up their former crews, trading workers with each other, and trying to get their departments started.

A discussion arose between some of the clerks and a number of men over the fact that the latter did not have their first citizenship papers.

This was fixed up after the former strikers signed some sort of papers and swore their statements were true and after signing a poll tax record they were given their new employment slips and hurried off to punch the time clock and get back on their jobs.

Gets Job Easily.

After waiting two hours my turn came and one of the clerks asked me if I had ever worked in the mills before or had any experience at that sort of work. I told him "No," and he then asked me if I had been in the army. When told I had been he held a short conference with another one of the clerks and then came back and told me they could give me a job.

Under the name of "Frank Dixon" I was hired as an oiler for gas engine house No. 1 at wages of $5.64 for eight hours' work, the same the common laborer in the mills finds on his pay check.

"Take this man over to Hampton at the gas house," said the clerk to me, handing over a time card and an employment slip which held the answers I had given to a few questions. I started out, and after a half an hours' search, I found the office of William Hampton, superintendent of gas engine house No. 1, and inquired for him.

Passed from Man to Man.

I met a man named Hammond, who is evidently an assistant to Hampton, and he took me down to another man named Andrews, one of the chief engineers. Andrews turned me over to another man whose name I could not learn and he in turn handed me over to a first engineer, whose name was Seegard.

Seegard passed me on to William Cleary, one of his oilers, who was instructed to "break me in." Cleary was a young fellow wearing greasy overalls and carrying a greasy piece of cotton waste.

"Well, come on with me and I will

NO OPERATION FOR PRESIDENT, EXPERT'S BELIEF

Too Ill, However, to Receive Belgian King and Queen.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—(Special.)—At 10:15 p. m. the following bulletin was issued at the White House:

"The president has had a comfortable day. He is taking abundant nourishment and he is somewhat stronger. The improvement in the prostatic condition has been maintained very satisfactorily and no change in the simple treatment employed is contemplated.

"GRAYSON, FOWLER,
"DERCUM, RUFFIN,
"YOUNG, STITT."

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—That it will not be necessary to operate on President Wilson for correction of a prostatic trouble, which has been holding back his recovery from nervous exhaustion, was the opinion of his physicians tonight after a long consultation late in the afternoon.

The bulletin issued at 10:15 o'clock was signed by six physicians, including Dr. Grayson, Dr. F. X. Dercum, the neurologist, who saw the president today for the fourth time, and Dr. Hugh Young of Johns Hopkins university, the specialist called in to determine whether an operation would be necessary.

Simple Treatment Wins.

Yesterday Dr. Young thought that an operation could be averted and that a simple treatment prescribed would be adequate to relieve the prostatic phase of the president's illness. But he wanted to be sure and arranged for a second examination today in consultation with the other experts and regular physicians.

Tonight the bulletin for the White House stated that the president's prostatic improvement had been maintained satisfactorily and that no change in the "simple treatment employed" was contemplated.

That means that there will be no operation at this time and none at all unless the trouble should take a turn for the worse. If the troublesome condition should again become aggravated, physicians say, an operation could not be long delayed.

Good Appetite Good Sign.

The fact that the president's appetite has returned and that he is taking abundant nourishment is regarded as a favorable sign and an indication of returning strength which is absolutely necessary for any marked restoration of his shattered nerves.

Although everything now looks encouraging, it cannot yet be stated that the president is past the danger point or that he can resume active work for a long time. It will be weeks and perhaps months, even if his improvement continues progressively, before Mr. Wilson can be given unrestrained liberty to do as he pleases, it is believed.

Cancels Welcome for King.

The gravity of his case was emphasized at the White House early in the day, when it was officially announced that he would be unable to receive the king and queen of Belgium when they come to Washington Oct. 27.

In making the announcement that the president would be unable to be host to the royal visitors from Belgium, who will remain here until Oct. 30, Secretary Tumulty said:

"During the visits of their majesties and his royal highness in Washington the vice president and Mrs. Marshall will act in the place of President and Mrs. Wilson as hosts for the government of the United States.

"Their majesties and his royal highness, during their visit to Washington, will occupy the residence of the third assistant secretary of state."

The king will be received on October 28 by the senate and house, both of which will recess for the purpose.

U. S. Short, 22,000,000 Lbs. of Sugar Sold to France?

New York, Oct. 18.—Simultaneously with the prediction today by Arthur Williams, federal food administrator, of a sugar famine in New York by next Tuesday, unless the longshoremen's strike is settled, the Harriman National bank published an advertisement in an evening paper. It asserts that the surplus war material recently sold by the United States to France included 22,000,000 pounds of sugar.

"It is obvious," said the advertisement, "that inquiry need go not far to discern that the high cost of living is, in a great measure, due to the inefficiency of official Washington."

CAPITAL-LABOR "BARGAINING" NEAR SOLUTION

Majority in Shops Must Deputize Its Speakers.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The committee of fifteen of the industrial conference reached a tentative agreement late today on an amended collective bargaining provision which they hope may close the breach between the capital and labor groups on this issue.

The committee decided to amend the resolution which they submitted originally so that selection of a representative of the wage earners in a given shop shall be made by a "majority" of the employés in the shop. The resolution originally proposed that wage earners be represented by members of "their own choosing." The proposed amendment is that these words be changed to provide that the representatives of the workers be "chosen by a majority of their own number."

Three Groups Must Approve.

The suggestion, of course, has not been accepted yet, and must be submitted for approval to the three groups in the conference—capital, labor and public. If they accept it, of course, the collective bargaining problem will be solved.

Whether it will be accepted is a question, although "Uncle Charley" Russell, spokesman for the committee of fifteen, said tonight he thought the sentiment of the committee was practically unanimous that it would be well received by all three groups.

The central committee members do not think that labor can object, its position having been that employers must not oppose any representative selected by the men, whether a union man or not.

Means Chiefs in Own Shop.

Employers have contended that it would not be fair to be forced to deal with a representative who is not even a member of the shop. The amendment, it is urged, would make it reasonably certain that the labor representative chosen in a given case would be a member within the shop as he must be selected by a majority of the workers within the shop.

Whether the proposal wins or not, it may be asserted that the small manufacturers, the "little fellows" who own 98 per cent of the 275,000 industrial establishments in America and employ less than 250 workers each, now occupy the spotlight in the industrial conference.

Members of the capital group today played up these small shops and factories in which more than 53 per cent of the country's work force is employed, as the units most essentially concerned in the controversy over collective bargaining.

Little Plants Protected.

To adopt the resolution of the labor and public groups, they maintained, without amending it to define thoroughly the right of management and men in any establishment to have their own shop government would at once work havoc in the little plants.

It would throw them open, they declare, to visitations from the walking delegate and give "militant minorities" of agitators a toehold on small industry.

The general view is that as soon as the conference makes a declaration regarding group bargaining there will be a general movement to make it effective which will prove disturbing unless there is thorough definition of terms.

Big Employer Backs View.

Even supporters of the labor-public resolution support this view. A. A. Landon of the American Radiator company, with 90,000 employés, one of the strongest advocates of the resolution in the conference, says:

"As to collective bargaining, I think when this thing goes out that there is going to be a rush to take advantage of it, and I am ready to predict that you will probably have more strikes in the next six months of a small character numerically than you have had in the past.

"Out of it all, however, you will trade and you will fight. I don't think anybody is going to give up any of his rights, and I don't think anybody in the conference is asking for a right that he has not always had, and if it

GUARD $130,000 AFTER "TIP OFF"; ARREST MADE?

Treasury Protected During Paying of Election Clerks.

A special squad of detectives was rushed to the county treasurer's office in the county building last night when a tip was received to the effect that a daring attempt was to be made to hold up the office and steal $130,000 which was being used to pay off some 10,000 judges and clerks at the recent registration of voters.

Two police characters are known to have been seen in the line of persons that filed through the corridors of the county building and it was reported they had been taken into custody, but the police refused to verify this.

Gibbons on the Job.

More than the usual number of uniformed policemen were stationed about the building to keep the line of applicants for pay vouchers moving. County Treasurer Harry R. Gibbons personally superintended the stationing of nine special guards about the money cages, but this protection was not considered sufficient to avert the threatened holdup.

Lieut. Luke Garrick and Sergt. David Flynn, in command of a special squad of seven men, who practically know all the holdup men and bank characters who are forbidden to cross the dead line in the loop, hurried to the county building and assigned their men to vantage points in the aisle ways between the characters.

George Mayer, county auditor, also was present and gave directions to the nine guards in the county treasurer's office.

Each Man Scrutinized.

The line of clerks and judges was kept continually on the move. They were allowed to enter only by the Clark street entrance and to leave by the Randolph street entrance. As each man passed he was scrutinized by the uniformed men and then was forced to pass the battery of eyes of Lieut. Garrick's squad before he was permitted to approach the pay windows or the cages in which the money was stacked.

Two Men Yanked Out.

Two men were plucked from the line by the plain clothes men and hustled out of the building over to the detective bureau, where they were said to have been questioned in First Deputy Alcock's office.

Whether the police made a mistake or whether they had rounded up two of the men believed to have been implicated in the rumored plot and are holding them for further examination they refused to say.

Echo of Old Case.

Threats to rob the county and the city treasurer's office have been heard from time to time ever since George Raymond and Harry Emerson, now serving time in the Joliet penitentiary for the slaying of Dennis Tierny, a special policeman in the employ of the Illinois Central railroad, engaged in a gun battle with Sergt. John Norton and other detectives in the loop. Raymond was killed in the fight, but Emerson later confessed they had planned a daring holdup of the city treasurer's office at the time the police came upon them.

HOT RACE AT SOUTH SHORE; RESULT IN DOUBT

They were still counting the ballots at the South Shore Country club election at 2 o'clock this morning, and the judges positively refused to give out any indication as to how the battle was shaping.

The election has been described as "the hottest club election in Chicago," and from the interest shown and the votes cast it was all of that. J. Clarke Dean and John G. Campbell are contesting for the presidency, Everett C. Brown having quit the race. Mr. Dean is running on the regular ticket and Mr. Campbell on the members' ticket.

And nobody will have to work at all, except such little odd jobs as cannot be performed by machinery——

And the league of nations has abolished all war from the world and there are no more armies or navies, except enough to fire salutes to high officials——

And spiritualism has become so common that you can go into a booth and call up the departed and inquire where he put the missing will or pass the time of day——

DEATH FOR THOSE WHO OPPOSE ME, D'ANNUNZIO SAYS

FIUME, Oct. 18.—[By The Associated Press.]—Gabriele d'Annunzio has announced that the most rigorous martial law will be invoked in dealing with persons suspected of being unfavorable to the Fiume cause.

"The City of Fiume will be considered as a fortress in time of war," the announcement says. "Whoever professes sentiments hostile to the cause of Fiume will be considered a public enemy and the penalty of death will be immediately carried out."

Taken literally, it is pointed out in some quarters, the decree would automatically make the Croats enemies of the d'Annunzio cause, but the belief is expressed that only those who actually carry on a campaign against the d'Annunzio regime will be affected.

Maybe You Won't Care for Any That Isn't "Fresh"

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Demand of the public for new paper money to replace that which has lost its fresh crackle has become so great that government officials are determined to stop it. The demand now has amounted to the enormous sum of $11,000,000 daily, as compared with the $7,000,000 capacity of the bureau of engraving and printing.

'ALL DEMANDS OR WE WILL STRIKE,' EDICT OF MINERS

Operators Are Just as Adamant, So Watch Nov. 1.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—There seemed little hope tonight of averting the strike of half a million bituminous coal miners called for Nov. 1.

After a series of conferences with labor leaders here and telephone talks with others in the central coal territory John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, announced that the miners would go out unless all demands, including the five day week, were granted.

The operators, standing by their decision not to consider any proposal looking to a shorter weekly schedule and refusing to open negotiations unless the strike order was withdrawn, charged that the miners were trying to freeze the country into submission by insisting upon acceptance of "impossible demands."

Here's How Rivals Stand.

"The strike will not be called off," Lewis declared.

"We will not arbitrate while the strike order stands," said Thomas T. Brewster, chairman of the operators' scale committee.

Meanwhile pressure was being brought to bear on both sides from many quarters to adjust their differences and save untold distress. Taking mental stock, Lewis said there would be enough coal on hand Nov. 1 to keep the country warm thirty days.

Secretary of Labor Wilson, at whose invitation the scale committees of the miners and operators will meet with him here Tuesday, declined to comment on the negotiations and continued to hope that he would be able to bring about peace.

Big Profits for Operators.

In a statement tonight President Lewis said a recent report by the federal trade commission revealed "that never before in the history of the mining industry have the operators been making such astounding profits upon coal produced."

Discussing the war time agreement, Lewis said:

"The claim of the operators that the miners are guilty of repudiation of contract is totally unfounded and has no basis in fact. The Washington wage agreement read that it was to continue in force and effect 'until the ending of the war or until March 31, 1920.' In substance and form the war has ended, the mine workers have no contract; the contract expired upon the 11th day of November, 1918, when hostilities ceased."

MAYNARD WINS 5,402 MILE AIR RACE; BEATS 62

Plans 1 Stop Flight; Smith Is Winging Way to West.

BULLETIN.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 18.—Capt. Lowell H. Smith, who beat Lieut. Maynard by thirty minutes on the first lap from coast to coast, arrived here from Sidney, Neb., at 5:18 p. m. He left Sidney at 4:35:45. His motor was working badly and it was with difficulty that he affected his landing. He expected to get away for the west Monday morning early.

Lieut. Queen broke all records for distance in one day's flight, flying 1,046 miles from Bryan, O., to Cheyenne, Wyo., today. This is said to be 160 miles further than Lieut. Maynard's best day's flight.

Mineola, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Lieut. Maynard, having flown 5,402 miles, reached here at 1:50 p. m., completing the twice transcontinental race and winning from a field of sixty-two starters the greatest air derby ever attempted. He finished more than 600 miles ahead of his nearest rival.

Lieut. Maynard flew the 142 miles of the last stage in his great flight from ocean to ocean and return at a speed of nearly two miles a minute. Several minutes before he landed his plane was visible, flashing across the cloudless sky in the brilliant sunshine of a perfect autumn day.

Pastor's Tribute to Sergeant.

The first words uttered by Lieut. Maynard when he put his foot on mother earth again were a generous tribute to Sergt. N. E. Klein, his companion on the flight.

"Sergt. Klein deserves the greatest credit," said the lieutenant.

"It is all up to the lieutenant," promptly retorted the sergeant. "He is the greatest pilot on earth."

Between Lieut. Maynard and his wife, however, it was not a question of words. Mrs. Maynard was at the side of the airplane almost before it had come to rest, and her husband leaned from his seat and embraced her silently. His two little daughters, with a big red apple for their "daddy," were then lifted up one after the other to kiss their triumphant father. Hundreds cheered the scene.

Trixie Is Doggone Happy!

The most joyous member of the party, at least as far as demonstration went, was Trixie, the Belgian police dog, who accompanied the flying parson as his mascot.

Trixie's delight at feeling the solid earth under her once more knew no bounds and she dashed around and around the plane joyously barking.

A message from Maj. Gen. William T. Menoher of the army air service praised Lieut. Maynard for his courage and skill.

In recognition of his exploit, Maynard has been recommended by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell of the air service for rating as a military aviator. This rating carries with it an increase in pay amounting to 75 per cent above his pay now as a first lieutenant in the air service. Maynard smiled when he heard of his recommendation.

Wants Aviation Cabinet Chief.

Responding to questions regarding the air service, Maynard explained that he favored the creation of a separate department of aviation in the government, and expressed the opinion that many of the regular army officers who had been transferred to executive places in the air service did not know enough about the science of aviation.

Lieut. Maynard announced within an hour after he had landed that within a few weeks he would attempt a one-stop flight from Mineola to San Diego, Cal., with Dallas, Tex., the only stopping point.

A modified type of the De Haviland plane, somewhat similar to that he used in the cross country race, has been fitted up for him. Lieut. L. D. Bradshaw, who has been flying since 1912, and entered the army as an enlisted man, will be his companion on his attempted one-stop flight.

24 Hours and 45 Minutes.

Although the actual flying time for the second trip had been unofficially computed early this afternoon as about 23 hours flat, it was announced late onight by Col. E. J. Younger, vice hairman of the contest committee of he American Flying club, that careful checking of available figures had made the unofficial time 24 hours 45 minutes and 8 seconds. This is about 15 minutes better than the time on the westward flight.

Lieut. and Mrs. Maynard posed good naturedly for a score of photographers and then the little family was escorted through a wildly cheering line of spectators to a tent, where luncheon had been provided for them.

FLYING PARSON'S STORY

"From the standpoint of pleasure," said Lieut. Maynard, describing his round trip, "we had quite a bit out of it, flying over a number of states and getting into touch with people in different parts of the country.

"Our hardships were scattered over the continent. The first day was not so bad. We were tired out at night, very tired, when we reached Chicago on the way to San Francisco. The Aero Club had sleeping quarters for us on Ashburne field.

"They offered to take us in town, but it would have taken us a couple of hours to get back in the morning, so we decided to stay on the field. We didn't get much sleep. We had straw pillows and straw mattresses and it was not very comfortable.

"Next morning we started out and encountered the roughest weather of the trip. We got to Omaha and the weather got better. The wind was against us, but we finally made Cheyenne. We were delighted at the amount of ground we had covered at that time.

Freezing at Cheyenne.

"It was freezing at Cheyenne. We were ready to start before sun-up next morning. Four minutes before the sun appeared we started our motor. We were pouring water into the radiator and some of it fell into the overflow pipe and froze.

"We had to thaw the pipes out, and in so doing we thought we had blown the radiator to pieces. We took it off, brought it to town, and had it repaired, got it back, and were ready to leave by 12:30.

"We got to Salduro at sunset. The people there gave us a great reception. We got away shortly after sunrise next morning and made San Francisco at 1:12. The enthusiasm was manifested by the great number of people that turned out, the congratulations, and the numerous invitations to receptions.

"We had three days in San Francisco and got away about 1:20 in the afternoon on Tuesday. We found Battle Mountain, Nev., about the most enthusiastic town in the west.

"Battle Mountain is the home town of Capt. Lowell H. Smith. The whole place turned out at the schoolhouse that night and they gave a dinner and dance in our honor. I did not dance.

Snow Covers Sidney Field.

"We made record time from Rawlins to Cheyenne and landed at Sidney that night, finding the field covered with snow. I don't believe I could have found it if I had not been there before. We left the next morning while it was snowing, but we flew out of the storm.

"At North Platte we met ten or eleven westbound fliers held by the storm. When we were flying from St. Paul to Omaha the motor quit without warning, 2,500 feet in the air, but we landed without difficulty.

"The first thing we did was to jump out and laugh. We thought we were through; that we were out of the flight. The control commander informed us that the machine of Capt. Francis had come down disabled about ten miles from where we were, at Wahoo. We wired to Washington for permission to use the motor and proceeded to take it out without waiting for the answer.

Runs Into Billy Sunday.

"We found rough weather after passing Des Moines. At Rock Island we met Billy Sunday, Mrs. Sunday and Homer Rodeheaver. We had pictures taken together and Billy autographed one of them: 'He leads; others follow.'

"From Rock Island to Chicago was the roughest country over which we had to fly during the entire round trip. From Chicago we flew over Lake Michigan on our way to Bryan, O., to save time.

LESSONS OF THE TRIP

"I believe that landing fields should be established all over the country. At Battle Mountain, a town of 500, the people constructed a flying field in ten days at a cost of $10,000.

"What the flight has brought out concerning the aerial defense of the country shows that it would be possible for a squadron of fighting machines to cross from coast to coast in three days. If I did not have to stop at each control station I think I could have made the trip in two and a half days, flying from daylight to dark.

"It would be very easy to shift a fleet of battle planes from coast to coast within three days. This is one of the most significant things in connection with the race."

Safe as Brooklyn Bridge.

Speaking of accidents, he said:

"In any kind of a machine there is always danger that the pilot may wreck it. As long as he keeps his head there is only one thing that can cause an accident—that is motor trouble.

"The airplane is built just as safe as the Brooklyn bridge. The personal element has something to do with the flying of a plane.

"In time it will be as easy to be a pilot as it is to be a chauffeur.

"It is unquestionable that this flight has demonstrated the commercial possibilities of aircraft. It is hardly fair to draw a comparison between this race and commercial flying.

"I am going back to the ministry after getting out of the army. I intended to get out this fall but could not get quarters in time at the Wake Forest college, Wake Forest, N. C., where I have two years to put in before being graduated. I expect to quit about Christmas time. I would fly after I quit the army if I could afford it."

Ten Lives Toll of Contest.

The grim specter of death winged its tragic flight with the army's great transcontinental air derby. Ten lives had been the toll to the time Lieut. Maynard crossed the finish line. Seven had died actually in the contest and three in connection with it.

From New York to San Francisco the route of the flight was dotted with disabled planes, which were forced to land and quit the race, or crashed to destruction from the air. Many flyers were injured, and the twenty control stations between terminal points saw first aid work from day to day as the derby progressed.

Sixty-two contestants started the big race—the most adventurous peaceful air competition the world has known. Forty-seven took the air from Mineola and fifteen from San Francisco, on Wednesday, Oct. 8, for the 5,200 mile round trip, high speed aerial journey.

Smith Has Fastest Records.

Maynard's actual flying time from Mineola to San Francisco consumed little over twenty-five hours and the flying time of Spatz and Kiel came within the twenty-seven hour limit, they said. Army air service authorities computed Smith's actual flying time, however, at thirty minutes better than Maynard's.

Lieut. Paul Richter, with Lieut. J. B. Patrick as passenger, arrived here at 4:06 o'clock this afternoon, completing the first leg of the transcontinental air race.

'FLYING PASTOR FORERUNNER OF FLYING DISASTER'

America, Wake Up; Face Perils Bared by Race, Gen. Mitchell's Plea.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Completion of the transcontinental air derby "plainly demonstrates that the isolation of the United States with respect to Asia and Europe is completely broken down," Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, chief of operations of the army air service, declared tonight.

"The airline distance covered," Gen. Mitchell said, "is 5,402 miles, in less than fifty hours of actual flying time. It is as far as from Constantinople to New York; from Berlin to Denver; from Tokio to San Francisco, and twice the distance from Europe to America.

Air Control Is World Rule.

"From a military aspect there is no longer any doubt that a complete control of the air by any nation means military control of the world.

"From the standpoint of distances, Asia is only divided from America by twenty-one miles of water across the Bering strait, while the greatest distance that has to be covered over water between the American continent and Europe is scarcely over 300 miles, if the route through Canada, Greenland, Iceland, the islands north of Great Britain, to Great Britain, itself, is followed.

The rapidity with which the airdromes were established in this test shows that they can be established with equal rapidity for long stretches by any other nation. A rigid dirigible airship can carry ten tons of cargo, besides its crew, fuel for a long trip, and armament for its defense—ten tons of material will keep a thousand airplanes working for one day.

How U. S. Foes May Act.

"If an Asiatic or European country desires to attack America, a system of airdromes could be established, successively, a defense organized against land or sea elements, and the airplanes concentrated on them successfully, while their supply could be insured by the great rigid dirigibles working with their own countries.

"This is not only possible, but almost a sure accompaniment of the next war and will be resorted to by the nation gaining control of the air. This manner of procedure will practically negative navies, so far as their ability to deal the first blow is concerned.

America Far behind.

"All the great nations of the world are now applying themselves strenuously to the development of an air service. America, which has the best natural advantages in the world, is probably the last of the great nations at the present time in her actual development of air power—military or commercial."

N. Y. GOVERNOR ON TRAIL OF HEARST FOR PRESS ATTACK

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Gov. Alfred E. Smith today roundly scored William R. Hearst for the attacks the Hearst newspapers have made on the governor, and challenged Mr. Hearst to met him on the platform anywhere, at any time, each man to be permitted to ask the other any question he likes about both the public and private life of his opponent.

The fact that the governor has thrown down the gauntlet to the editor-politician is regarded as joining the issued between Hearst and Hylan on the one side and the governor and the Democratic party on the other. The Tammany allegiance is divided.

Gov. Smith's speech was made at the so-called breakfast given by the Woman's Democratic league to the women workers of the organization. There were 2,000 or more women present and one of them in the course of Gov. Smith's speech shouted, referring to Hearst:

"He's the most dangerous man in the United States."

Adopting tactics that would be followed only by a "mean man, a particularly low type of man," Gov. Smith charged Mr. Hearst, through his newspapers, had attacked him for not doing something which it was legally impossible for him to do in connection with the milk question. The attack, he said, arose because he refused to be subservient to Mr. Hearst. He recalled that just a year ago the Hearst papers were being burned in towns around New York because of the doubt of Mr. Hearst's loyalty. Hearst, he said, was loyal to no one, "not even to his own."

FLYING TO 'SHOW,' CAPT. DONALDSON HERE IN AIR RACE

Third Place Competitor Hops Off Promptly for New York.

With Lieut. Belvin W. Maynard, the "flying parson," safe in New York, and Capt. Lewell Smith, who is running second in the twice-across-the-country air race, well on his way west, interest lagged in Grant park yesterday. The only thrill came when Capt. J. O. Donaldson, who is third in the race, flew his scout plane in from the west and landed.

Capt. Donaldson came in from the west just after two planes had hopped off for the Pacific. He came in a deep fog and was not discovered until directly above the field. The S E-5 was set on the ground in a perfect landing.

Blames "Pilot's Luck."

"You know, this race would have been mine were it not for this rotten stuff called pilot's luck," said Donaldson. "Pilot's luck breaks both ways—good and bad—and that preacher had the good and I had the bad.

"I think I can fly faster than the parson's big D-H. This ship of mine certainly knocks off the miles—it's a scout plane, a battle plane, and his is a great big old oil can that was built for bombing purposes."

The De Haviland is probably twice as big as the SE-5, but it travels along at 130 miles an hour.

Says He'll Be Third.

"Lieut. Maynard got away from New York on the first lap before I did and he missed all the bad weather. It was uncanny—the storms were always just ahead or just behind him. Well, I'll get a third anyway," and Capt. Donaldson climbed into his cockpit. Official landing time for Donaldson is 9:00:24 a. m., and he departed at 9:31:50 a. m., promising to reach New York by night, which would give him second place in the race.

Lieuts. E. C. Kiel and H. E. Queen, both flying De Haviland planes, came in from the east early yesterday morning on their return trip. They remained the thirty minutes required and hopped off.

Capt. Lowell Smith, after spending the night as a guest of the Hamilton club, departed at 7:15:57 a. m. for the west.

Six more flyers are expected in Chicago. They will probably arrive early Monday morning. And then Chicago's end of the race will be over.

Hydrophobia Kills Girl, 5, Bitten on Lip by Dog

Josephine Van Duis, 5 years old, who was slightly bitten on the lip by a dog a week ago, died last night in the Washington Park hospital from hydrophobia. Her case was unusual, inasmuch as the bite was inflicted by an animal showing no sign of rabies. Josephine was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Van Duis of 6159 South Park avenue.

Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner, during the day, as a result of her case, urged that physicians report promptly to his office all cases of dog bites.

The Van Duis girl's case is the first instance of this disease in Chicago in two years and the fourth since 1914.

FOUR SEIZED AS MEN WHO KILLED PAY ROLL GUARD

Homicide Squad Believes First Case, Bucker's Murder, Solved.

In rounding up the members of the Gloriana gang, an organization of north side burglars and holdup men, the members of the newly formed "homicide squad" believe they have cleaned up their first case—the capture of the slayers of Merl Bucker, secretary of the Downey-Farrell company, 509 North Union street. Bucker was shot down by three holdup men several days ago while protecting the firm's $3,000 pay roll.

Two of the men in custody are said to have been partially identified. The motive for the attempted holdup, the police say, was to obtain "fall money" to fend members of the gang against burglary charges pending against them.

Question Four Suspects.

First Deputy John H. Alcock, Sergt. John Norton, in charge of the homicide squad, and Assistant State's Attorney Walter Stanton were still questioning four of the suspects late last night, but stated no confessions had been obtained as yet.

"We may have a big story for you by tomorrow night," was the only comment Alcock would make.

Meanwhile members of the squad were searching the north side Italian colony in search of three or four women who, it is believed, will be able to shed some light on the case.

The roundup of the gang occurred while funeral services for Bucker were being held in his home at 1406 Summerdale avenue under the auspices of the Masonic order. Practically all the employés of the Downey-Farrell company, which has offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of the slayers, attended. Bucker was buried at Rose-hill.

Seize First Suspect.

The first member of the Gloriana gang to be seized was Carlo Moretti, 1354 Sedgwick street, arrested on June 17 on a charge of burglary, but discharged. Miss Mary Wiegand, 4700 Magnolia avenue, cashier of the company; Miss Lillian Brunner, telephone operator, and five other girl employés were asked to stop at the detective bureau on their way back from the funeral and see whether they could identify him.

While they were there the detectives brought in Charles Gloriana, 1101 Townsend street, alleged leader of the gang arrested on June 5 on six charges of burglary and released in bonds of $5,000.

While the employés differed in trying to identify Moretti, it is said several were positive in the case of Gloriana.

The two other members of the gang still being held are Michael O'Malley, 1401 Wieland street, and Victor Rizzo, 1315 Larrabee street. O'Malley was arrested on June 12 on three charges of burglary and released on $15,000 bonds. Rizzo, taken on similar charges on June 23, was compelled to furnish $10,000 bonds.

George Carson, said to be a fifth member of the gang, was released after being questioned.

Court Refuses Writs.

No sooner had the men been taken into custody than an attorney appeared in Judge Hugo Pam's court and asked for writs of habeas corpus for their release. The detectives hurried their prisoners into the court room and informed the judge they expected to identify the men as the murderers of Bucker. The writs were refused.

Miss Wiegand said last night there were some points she wished to clear up in her mind before she would say identification of the suspects had been positive.

"Some of the girls saw one man and some saw another," she said. "Then, too, we saw the men from different angles. We wish to be positive before we commit ourselves."

Several other suspects are being held in connection with the murder, but the police are confident they have the right men. The only question, they say, is that of picking out the right three.

Slew Policemen Also?

Scores of detectives are working to clear up the murders of Detective Sergeants George Burns and Bernard Lenahan in Mulheran's saloon on the night of Oct. 3. They are not sure that what the murderers of Bucker and of the policemen will turn out to be the same men.

Another $1,000 reward for the capture of the men was added by the Chicago Association of Detective Sergeants yesterday. One of a similar amount already has been offered by the city council.

Girl Outwits Robber.

Miss Celia Holmes, 5746 West Huron street, cashier for the Whittaker Manufacturing company, 409 South Green street, was on her way to the offices of the company yesterday morning with a package containing $900, the pay roll, under her arm. Her leather satchel swung from her left hand.

"Give me that money," said a man at her side as she turned to enter the office. A revolver emphasized the command.

"Money? Why certain," answered Miss Holmes coolly, and handed the bandit her bag, which contained $83. The bandit grabbed the bag and fled. Miss Holmes triumphantly entered the office and placed the $900 on the manager's desk.

A sneak thief entered the cashier's office of Almer Coe & Co., 78 East Jackson boulevard, yesterday afternoon and took $120 from the cash drawer. Miss Mary Sick, the cashier, was absent from the cage for a few minutes.

Chester Sweicher, the manager, saw a man leaving the cage and gave chase. He was pursued into an alley by several other persons, but escaped.

24 TENANTS ARE ONE IN FIGHT FOR 24 APARTMENTS

Jam Court to Halt Ban on Leases Made by Receiver.

Twenty-four leaseholders, husbands, and wives, their children, and their relatives and neighbors, jammed their way into Judge Denis E. Sullivan's branch of the Superior court yesterday to fight and listen to a snappy case of landlady against tenant. The plaintiff was Emma Panco Behrens. The suit pending is, in effect, one of ejectment, although all of the two dozen defendants hold what they contend are perfectly good leases.

The building in question is a twenty-four apartment structure at Glenwood and Arthur avenues, an aristocratic section of Rogers Park. It was built by the late Martin T. Corby and the property has run on the rocks of two or three mortgages, winding up with a court receivership, which the present owner would be pleased to have vacated by the court.

Judge Continues Case.

Owing to the complicated nature of the muss, Judge Sullivan yesterday asked for further light and continued the hearing until next Tuesday, when it is expected the occupants of the building and their neighbors will again be on hand. In this decision he met the argument of Attorney Hugh O'Neill, representing the tenants, although Attorney Thomas F. Monahan acting for the plaintiff, sought an immediate decision by which it was hoped to dispossess the tenants of their places of abode.

It appears that the existing leases were made by the receiver, Harold Henderson, a real estate agent. The tenants, who refuse to move, insist that the new owner hopes to advance the rents. They insist that their leases are perfectly valid, having been issued to them by the court, through the receiver. Following the issuance of the leases the property was sold under foreclosure proceedings and a deed issued by a master in chancery now is held by Mrs. Behrens, who, it is contended, picked up the property at a bargain and enjoys a monthly rent roll of $1,033, paying a return of nearly 20 per cent on her investment.

Cast of Characters.

The cast of characters:

Emma Panco Behrens, 1318 North Shore avenue, the new owner.

Harold Henderson, H. E. Henderson & Co., real estate agents, 6610 Sheridan road, who was appointed receiver of the building by Judge Sullivan in 1916.

Thomas F. Monahan, 74 Washington street, attorney for the new owner.

Charles Williams, now Judge Williams, Municipal court, attorney for receiver.

Judge Denis E. Sullivan, Superior court, before whom case is pending.

Twenty-four tenants.

Hugh O'Neill, 111 West Washington street, attorney for tenants' organization, who defies them to oust his clients.

The records appear to show that the new owner of the property procured the deed from Master in Chancery Hummer Sept. 18 last, and shortly thereafter, appeared at the building and announced that existing leases were without legal effect. It is the contention of Attorney Monahan that there is nothing in the original order of court, appointing Mr. Henderson receiver, which gives him the right to make leases on the apartments and that there has been no court approval of the same.

The Tenants' Case.

Attorney O'Neill said, in substance, to the court:

"Can a landlord who has come into the possession of an apartment building by the purchase of a redemption certificate get a master's deed in a foreclosure suit and oust the tenants from the structure or raise the rents where they have written leases running for two years which were made by the receiver?"

Following are the aggrieved tenants who object to being tossed out on the brink of winter:

W. Looney, P. Boehme, H. Griffith J. J. Downey, V. E. Russun, T. H. Harper, W. C. Fox, C. H. Wagoner, A. E. Ryan, N. E. Levy, G. S. Roberts, J T Scanlan, Harry Wolff, H. H. Schoenlank, F. E. Holts, T. F. Scharkopf, W. J. O'Brien, Wm. Reed, W. Thompson, W. Tracy, C. G. Thayer, W. A. Dobson, E. J. Murphy, M. McDermott.

Loses $2,000,000 to Wed; Now She's Sued for $38,000

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Former Mrs. Beatrice M. Pratt, granddaughter of the late Henry H. Rogers, former vice president of the Standard Oil company, and who married Preston Gibson, the playwright on Friday, owes Herman W. Van Senden $38,713, which the latter is trying to collect through court proceedings.

It is alleged Mrs. Gibson forfeited an inheritance of $2,000,000 by her wedding to Gibson.

Mr. Van Senden says Mrs. Gibson borrowed the money on nine promissory notes, which she failed to pay when they matured. Van Senden sued and Mrs. Gibson confessed judgment. Execution against her property was issued to Sheriff Knott, who returned the execution unsatisfied.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S illness was gravely emphasized today by the official announcement from the White House that he would be unable to receive the King and Queen of Belgium when they come to Washington Oct. 27. The king and queen will be received on behalf of the government of the United States by the vice president and Mrs. Marshall.

SENATORS HITCHCOCK AND POINDEXTER staged a redhot clash in the senate today, Poindexter undertaking to show that if Hitchcock had had his way Germany would have won the war, asserting that the Nebraska senator not only had advocated an embargo on all munitions to the allies, but had "condoned the German atrocities against these allies." Senator Hitchcock surprised his colleagues by defending his stand for "peace without victory," and insisting that it would have been a wise thing for the United States to have maintained neutrality.

THE senate interstate commerce committee reported a railroad bill today with an anti strike clause in it that has sharper teeth than were originally bargained for, it being designed not only to prevent railroad strikes or lockouts, but also prescribes severe penalties for any one who even advises railroad strikes.

A BILL to reduce the tax on butter substitutes from 10 cents to ½ cent a pound was introduced in the house by Representative Sabath of Illinois. He said he offered it because butter has reached the highest price since the civil war. Under the bill the name of oleomargarine is changed to butterine.

Only a fortnight's cereal supply is reported on hand. The temperature for four days has been just above freezing, with high winds.

Back from Siberia, Yanks Hint Prison Scandal There

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 18.—Carrying 1,278 members of the 27th and 31st infantry, who were returning home after fifteen months' service in Siberia, the transport Logan arrived here today from Vladivostok. It was the third boat arriving here to date with returned Siberian expeditionary troops. The men complained about prison stockades and general conditions surrounding the American occupancy in Siberia.

There were sixteen bodies of Americans killed in battle with the bolsheviki.

CONVICTS EAGER TO RENEW YOUTH BY OPERATIONS

San Quentin Tests Are Said to Prove a Success.

San Quentin, Cal., Oct. 18.—[By United Press.]—Stories of ambition restored, new outlooks on life, and tired old men brought back to youthful vigor were told here today by inmates of San Quentin prison who have profited by the transfer of interstitial glands from prisoners who have been executed.

One man, aged 73, to be known as "D," entered the prison two years ago an aged man in every respect. His shoulders stopped, his skin was like parchment, and his voice and eyes were weak.

He now appears to be about 50. His voice has been restored and he walks with a firm step and erect body.

He is one of the prisoners whose outlook on life has been changed by the surgeon's knife.

Expects to Live "Forever."

"I feel a spring in my tread and I am as vigorous as a young man," he said. "Why, bless you, I feel that I shall live forever."

His voice was resonant. He said he could now sing in a range from F to A high falsetto, and that he has lost the quaver of age. He attributes this to the operation.

Another man known as "B" has dropped the glasses he had worn for twenty-two years. His bent body also has straightened. He can run and jump. The wrinkles in his face have disappeared to a great extent, and he is ready to start life again.

First Trial Year Ago.

The first operation of this nature was performed here in 1918. Dr. Leo Stanley, the prison physician, has performed nine such, and Dr. C. David Kelker, his assistant, performed the one yesterday that became known to the public.

The operation in 1918 followed closely upon the hanging of a young Negro for murder. One interstitial gland was quickly removed from the warm body of the Negro and grafted to the body of a man of 25 of dull mentality, who walked with hanging head and sleepy eyes.

Three days after the operation the prisoner had improved mentally, according to Dr. Stanley, and ten days later he walked with head erect and had a look of intelligence. His mind was functioning better and he had more vitality.

Shows Immediate Gain.

The next patient was a man of 50, who was given a gland from a Mexican, aged 27, who had been executed. The patient almost immediately showed improvement. He changed gradually, according to the doctors, from a slow moving, dull, sad faced man to one of decision and hope.

Whenever a hanging is scheduled if the victim is young and vigorous, the doctors are flooded with applications of men who wish to be restored to youth. The prisoners seem all to have complete faith in the operation.

URGES WIDER USE.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dr. Serge Voronoff, who claims he can postpone old age by grafting interstitial glands, points out in an article in the Journal today that the internal secretion of glands such as the thyroid and supra-renal continue alive for three hours after the death of the body and therefore advocates that bodies of young and healthy persons killed in accidents should be rushed to special hospitals where patients are suffering from curable maladies.

He says the grafting glands could be grouped and put in cold storage where they can be kept indefinitely.

"Unfortunately," writes Dr. Voronoff, "prejudices and law now prevent this. Our secular customs require that our perishable bodies be consigned to the earth, where they slowly and uselessly are consumed."

COURT REFUSES PLEA FOR COUNTY JUDGE ELECTION

Ousts Demand for Scully Death Certification; May Save a Million.

Cook county tax payers may be saved $1,000,000 through the refusal of the Illinois Supreme court yesterday to consider a petition filed by Attorney Meyer J. Stein to compel County Clerk Sweitzer to certify Judge Scully's death, thereby necessitating a special election to fill the vacancy.

Through the appointment of Judge James T. Burns of Kankakee county to fill out Judge Scully's unexpired term, the cost of a special election has so far been avoided. To have resorted to the direct primary would have cost $1,000,000, experts estimated.

Declined to Certify Death.

Following Judge Scully's death, Judge Henry Horner was temporarily appointed to fill the vacancy. County Clerk Sweitzer, as the result of a conference of Democratic leaders, announced that he would not officially certify the jurist's death to Gov. Lowden.

This action, he pointed out, would save the taxpayers the cost of a special election. Because of Judge Horner's refusal to assume permanently the bench of the county court, Judge Burns was given the appointment.

Mandamus Case Still Pending.

Almost immediately after the vacancy arose steps were taken by certain political factions to compel a special election to fill it. As the first step in this course Attorney Stein, in behalf of John Nangle of Oak Park, the petitioner of record, filed mandamus proceedings in the Circuit court to compel Sweitzer to certify the Scully death to Gov. Lowden. This case is still pending.

Another action was started in the Supreme court, where yesterday it was given a final quietus. The court refused to assume jurisdiction in the case, declaring the point at issue to be one of local interest.

RECEDING HOME LIFE DEPLORED BY U. S. SENATOR

New York, Oct. 18.—The United States has fought all her wars to "preserve the home" and yet probably 60 per cent of her people are tenants. This was the text selected today by United States Senator Calder in an address before the New York Real Estate association's convention urging the necessity of a national campaign for the creation of homes.

"It has been pointed out that the United States has been at war on an average of once in twenty years since the constitution was adopted," the senator said, "and that the object of each of these wars has been, in the last analysis, to preserve the home. Yet we find that to the majority of people in this country 'home' means little more than a dwelling for which they are paying rent.

"This situation is bad enough, but what is worse in the situation is that the percentage of these rent payers is growing with each enumeration. In 1890 we were advised that 52 per cent of the people in America lived under the rental system, in 1910 that the percentage had increased to 55, and probably the census of 1920 will show that fully 60 per cent of the people will be classed as tenants."

REDS HANG ON TO PETROGRAD, LATE NEWS INDICATES

Wild Rumors Circulate; Denikine Keeps Up Advance.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Two reports received today—one from the Paris bourse and another from the Stockholm Swenska Dagbladet—that Petrograd had fallen could not be verified at a late hour tonight.

A wireless message sent last night from the bolshevik wireless station at Tsarskoe Selo stated that the work of the station would be interrupted "time," owing to "necessary repairs," and that the bolsheviki would use the Moscow station.

The fact that the bolsheviki up to Friday were sending messages from Tsarskoe Selo would seem to dispose of many early rumors that Petrograd had been captured.

Reports Not Verified.

If there was any truth in the reports that the Reds' stronghold had capitulated, the British war office would receive an official notification of the White Russian victory. It was stated at the war office tonight that there was no confirmation of the Paris and Stockholm reports.

It did give out, however, an official statement that Gatchina had been captured by forces under the command of Gen. Yudenitch.

Doubt Kronstadt Capture.

A Helsingfors dispatch says that the White flag was hoisted over the fortress of Kronstadt, but there are many doubting Thomases in London. The reports of the surrender of the fortress are regarded in private military and naval circles here as merely "intelligent anticipation."

The admiralty informed the Associated Press this morning that absolutely no reports had been received there regarding an allied bombardment of Kronstadt. Since a British admiral commands the allied operations there it was pointed out that it would be obvious that official notification of such an event would have been forwarded to London.

HERE'E THE REAL DOPE

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

IN THE FIELD WITH THE RUSSIAN NORTHWEST ARMY, via Copenhagen, Oct. 16.—Delayed.—The Russian northwest army tonight is only fourteen miles at the most advanced point from Petrograd. It is four and one-half miles from Peterhoff and nearing Krasnoe Selo. Gen. Yudenitch's message this afternoon that he would be in Petrograd in a few days started a great jubilation among the Russians, for the general seldom makes predictions. The Russian staff say the situation looks now as if Yudenitch had decided to pass by Gatchina, which is strongly fortified, cut it off on every side, and let the bolsheviks there surrender when they get hungry enough.

Strikes at Red Railroad.

It is believed Yudenitch's plan is to strike straight east from Krasnoe Selo with one column of his army until it reaches the Nicolai railroad, which connects Moscow and Petrograd. Cutting this railroad will prevent all food and military supplies reaching the bolsheviks from Moscow and the south, which are the principal supply points of Petrograd. Russian army strategists believe Yudenitch will take strong positions, have his men dig in, and that the people of Petrograd, weary of bolshevik rule, will do the rest.

But nobody knows what Yudenitch has made up his mind to do. His message that he will be in Petrograd in a few days is sufficient for everybody that knows him. All strategists, myself included, were certain Yudenitch would attack Gatchina, but he fooled us by calmly walking around the town, leaving it severely alone. But it probably will drop all by itself like a rotten apple in a short time.

Sees End of "Reds."

It looks very much as if the soviet republic of Russia was nearing its end. I saw reserves of the northwest army, composed mainly of men who a few days ago were fighting for bolshevism, going to the front today happy as schoolboys. I never saw soldiers in finer spirits than the White guards I saw fighting at Jamburg, and the staff officers who had been all along the front said that was characteristic of the entire army. The Russian northwest army has staked everything in this drive. "Petrograd or bust!" and it's going to be Petrograd.

SUCCESS FOR DENIKINE.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—An account of the rapid success gained by the army of Gen. Denikine over the bolsheviki in central Russia is given in an official communique issued from the war office today.

A bolshevik offensive campaign on an extensive scale against Tsaritsyn, on the lower Volga, was opened, it states, on Oct. 11. Operations were conducted on both banks of the Volga and also to the westward of the Volga as far as the Don river.

In two days, it is stated, the bolsheviki gained considerable ground. Then volunteers under Gens. Wrangel and Ulaggia delivered a sharp counter attack, recovering all the ground which had been lost and inflicting severe losses on the bolsheviki.

Cross Don on Wide Front.

Farther to the west the Cossack forces crossed the Don on a wide front and cleared the triangle of ground between Novo-Grigorievskaya, fifty-five miles northwest of Tsaritsyn, and Ust Medvieditsa, 100 miles northwest of Tsaritsyn, taking 1,200 prisoners with many guns.

Still farther westward the Cossacks occupied the line of the Khoper river, one of the northern tributaries of the Don, from its junction with the Don to Tisharskaya, taking the towns of Kalatoh and Pavlovsk, which lie westward of the Khoper, between that river and Veroneszh.

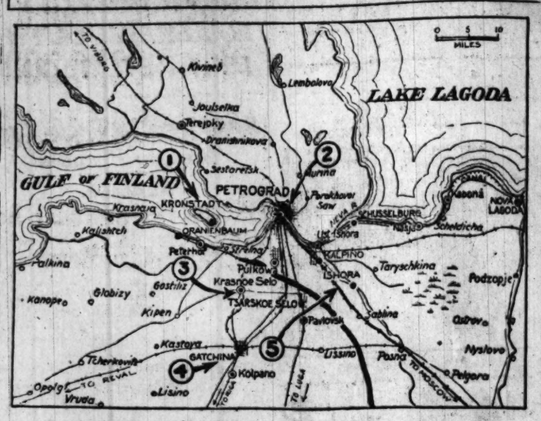
A bolshevik wireless communique claims the capture of Fastov, a railway junction forty miles southwest of Kiev, on the road to Odessa.

An earlier bolshevist announcement reported that Kiev was captured Wednesday by a surprise attack. Gen. Denikine has not reported the loss of this town, one of the most important in southern Russia.

Take 9,000 Bolsheviki.

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 18.—A wireless from Taganrog, Russia, on the sea of Azov, announces that the Don Cossack troops captured 9,000 bolsheviki in the vicinity of Voronezh, recently occupied by Gen. Denikine after hard fighting.

THE ADVANCE ON PETROGRAD



1—Kronstadt, the great Russian naval base dominating the Gulf of Finland approach to Petrograd, is reported to have capitulated to the allied navies.

2—Reports of the fall of Petrograd have not been confirmed. Paris claims to have definite information of its capture. The latest dispatch from Richard Henry Little, The Tribune correspondent with the White Russian army, states it expects to be in Petrograd in a few hours.

3—Krasnoe Selo, twelve miles from Petrograd, has been captured by the White Russians.

4—Gatchina either has been taken or completely isolated by Gen. Yudenitch's advance on Petrograd.

5—By cutting the Nicolai railroad between Petrograd and Moscow Gen. Yudenitch will prevent all food and military supplies reaching the former Russian capital. It is reported workingmen from Petrograd have pleaded with the northwestern army to spare the city from bombardment.

LETTS STILL WINNING

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

RIGA, Oct. 18.—Fire of the British warships yesterday resulted in the Lettish troops capturing the important fortress of Duenamunde near the mouth of the Dvina river, and also the little village of Tioldera on the Lettish right flank.

Troops early this morning had pushed on as far as Ilzezem. On the left flank up the river successful Lettish operations resulted in the capture of 500 Germans and many machine guns.

Mangin to "Get 'Em Out."

PARIS, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Mangin, the French member of the interallied commission to superintend the evacuation of the Baltic states by the troops of Gen. Goltz, will leave Paris immediately for the Baltic, it was decided today by the supreme council. Brig. Gen. Sherwood A. Cheney, U. S. A., and representatives of the other great powers will follow in a few days.

RED CROSS MISSION SAFE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—A cablegram from Paris today informed the American Red Cross that Col. Edward W. Ryan of Scranton, Pa., its commissioner to the Baltic states, who has been reported missing in the fighting at Riga, has wired from Riga that he and all other members of the Red Cross mission are safe.

Reports to the Russian embassy today indicated that 134,000 square miles of Russian territory had been freed of the bolsheviki since Sept. 20 and that the advance of the anti-Red forces had cut the route over which the bolshevik propaganda might spread to India and Afghanistan from Moscow.

The capture of 85,650 prisoners, 700 machine guns, ninety cannon, and four armored trains by the Kolchak forces also was reported.

CELLS EMIT WOE AS REDS TAKE TO THE TALL GRASS

Embrace and Kiss Whites When Freed from "Deliverers."

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

IN THE FIELD WITH THE RUSSIAN NORTHWEST ARMY, via COPENHAGEN, Oct. 17.—[Delayed.]—We are so close to Petrograd now that I am beginning to listen for the sound I like to hear best—the creaking hinges of jail doors swinging outward to let wretched victims step again into the sunlight.

More than 1,200 prisoners were reported released yesterday by the Russian northwestern army in villages captured from the Bolsheviks and more will be added once the army gets into Petrograd, which should be within a few hours.

Weird War, Dick Says.

This is a weird war. The bolsheviks proclaimed themselves the liberators of humanity and especial protectors of the downtrodden proletariat, while the Reds call the White Guards the hirelings of the old imperialistcl régime. Yet every town the northwest army captures from the Reds the first job of he White guards is to storm the jails and give freedom to prisoners who have committed no crime.

At Jamburg I saw 300 prisoners turned loose from the jail, all proletariat—most of them peasants. The majority were cooped up in crowded basements and dungeons because some relative was accused by the bolsheviks of having counter revolutionary notions but had faded away when the bolsheviks tried to arrest them. The liberated prisoners said that almost daily the bolsheviks took people from the jail, stood them in front of the nearest wall and shot them because some relative or friend, over whom they had no control—perhaps had not seen for months—was declared by the bolsheviks to have disappeared and joined the White guards.

Perhaps these people weren't glad when the "inventors of liberty" beat it for the tall grass and uncut timber and the "imperialistic" hordes came in and dug them out of their cells. They tried to kiss everybody in sight.

Don't Like Red Government.

I could only restrain the men prisoners with long gray whiskers from kissing me by having an interpreter tell them that the American gentleman wished to know how much they love Lenine, Trotzky, Carl Marx, the rights of man, and economic liberty. The interpreter had to talk quick, explaining I was joking, to save me from being thrown into the river by the frantic mob.

I saw some of the homes to which the liberated people return. The bolsheviks are poor housekeepers. Everything was appallingly dirty. Jamburg and dozens of other towns and villages I have seen just after the bolsheviks have scampered out makes me hope with great sincerity that the Reds will never capture my little flat in Chicago.

U. S. Loans to War Allies Reach $9,347,419,494 Total

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—A credit of $1,000,000 to Italy was announced today by the treasury, making $1,620,922,872 advanced to that country and a total of $9,347,419,494 to all the allies.

TROTZKY SPEAKS VERY HIGHLY OF FOES; YES HE DOES!

LONDON, Oct. 18.—[By The Associated Press.]—The following description of the situation in the Baltic is attributed to Leon Trotzky, the bolshevik minister of war, by a wireless message from Moscow:

"A pack of bourgeois curs is worrying the body of soviet Russia on all sides. Polish knights are gnashing their teeth. The German general Von der Goltz, under instructions by the stock exchange and the offscourings of all lands, is seizing the Baltic country with the help of monarchist bands in order to attack Moscow from there.

"In the northwest, the blood drunken trio, Yudenitch, Balakovitch and Rodzianko, are advancing on Petrograd. The Esthonian peace negotiations served as a means to lull the Red Petrograd troops, and as a soporific.

"The army defending the approaches to Petrograd failed to withstand the first blow, and danger has again come to Petrograd. The English and French radio stations announce with joy the fact of our failures on the road to Petrograd. The stock exchange and the press of the whole world are sharing the joy and predicting the speedy fall of Petrograd. But they are wrong this time. Petrograd will not fall. It will stand. We shall not surrender Petrograd.

"For the defense of the first town of the proletarian revolution sufficient strength will be found in the peasants and the workers of the land. Yudenitch's successes are those of a cavalry raid.

"Troops are being sent to the assistance of Petrograd and the Petrograd workers, who rose first of all. We must break the skulls of Yudenitch's bands and the Anglo-French imperialists."

Pershing Gave More than 6,000 Medals in the A. E. F.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—More than 6,000 members of the American expeditionary forces received decorations from Gen. Pershing. Medals of honor, the highest award provided by this government, were conferred on seventy-eight, distinguished service crosses on 5,271, and distinguished service medals on 941.

TROTZKY, LENINE, ET AL. NEARING END OF THE ROPE

Closing Act of Red Drama Already Under Way, Experts Aver.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—"The final crash of the Trotzky-Lenine regime may be delayed some weeks, but it is inevitable."

Only the "inertia" of the anti-bolshevik groups has permitted the present Moscow government to remain alive beyond Sept. 15, one official, who has made a special study of the situation, said. The bolshevik organization, the reports say, has been so poor at the foundation—the confidence of the masses—that only a push was necessary to start the fall.

This push has been lacking because there was no efficient cooperation between the anti-red leaders and in the absence of initiative or ability on the part of any one of them to start the forward movement.

Gen. Denikine's advance toward Moscow, the campaign of attrition waged by the northwest Russian volunteers and the stiffening of Admiral Kolchak and his Cossack allies, the reports say, have finished more than the hoped-for pressure.

"A continuation of this pressure by any one of these forces for one week will finish the matter," declares one military expert. "The British alone, through their assistance to the northwestern group operating in the Esthonian sector, can turn the trick."

HOLD 2 WOMEN IN WOLF LAKE MOTOR TRAGEDY

Hammond Hearing in "Death Car" Maze Set for Oct. 25.

THE DAY'S AUTO TOLL

Chicago's automobile toll yesterday:

KILLED.

JOSEPH SCHNEIDER, 8 years old, 1301 Washburne avenue.

VICTOR ANDREZEWSKI, 3 years old, 1747 Lincoln street.

INJURED.

Joseph Jumbo, 44 years old, 1127 Cambridge street.

Morris Goldberg, 17 years old, 1877 Milwaukee avenue.

The mystery of the little white flivver racer that bumped an automobile into Wolf lake Friday night, causing the death of two persons, moved a step nearer solution yesterday when Miss Evelyn Bowman of 408 South Kilbourn avenue and Mrs. Bonnie Sanger of 4340 South Mozart street were taken to Hammond and arraigned before City Judge Theodore Klotz.

Though both denied being involved in any accident, they were ordered held—Miss Bowman as driver of the flivver racer and Mrs. Sanger as a material witness.

Broke Auto Law, Charge.

The charge on which Miss Bowman was booked was violation of an Indiana statute, which provides that automobilists involved in an accident shall stop, give aid, then report their names and license number to the police. Miss Bowman's car carried no license number Friday night. The only identification sign was the name Evelyn across the front of the radiator.

Miss Bowman's bonds were fixed by Judge Klotz at $3,000 and Mrs. Sanger's at $500. They arrived in Hammond about 5 o'clock, were arraigned, and at 7 o'clock surety had been found in the person of E. N. Bunnell, Ford agent at Hammond, who scheduled property valued at $10,000. The women then departed for Chicago.

Face Trial on Oct. 25.

Date of the trial was set for Oct. 25. Deputy Prosecutor Clyde Cleveland of Lake county announced he would produce a number of eye witnesses of the accident. If Miss Bowman is found guilty, she will be arraigned on a charge of manslaughter, he said.

Because of the serious condition of the two survivors of the automobile accident they were not asked to view Miss Bowman or Mrs. Bowman yesterday. They will confront them at the inquest which Coroner J. A. Graham will hold next Wednesday, Oct. 22. Funeral arrangements for the victims, Mrs. Harry Stingley, 42, and Elizabeth Tonks, 15, has not been completed.

When arraigned before Judge Klotz, both Mrs. Sanger and Miss Bowman admitted they were in Hammond Friday, that they returned to Chicago in the flivver racer, and that they passed the scene of the accident about the time of its occurrence. But they insisted they [illegible] in no mishap of any nature.

Is [illegible] Is Absent.

They refused to talk to newspapermen. They had been advised to do so by their attorney, W. J. McAleer of Hammond, they said.

Arthur E. Tanner, 53 North Wood street, on whose information the police located Miss Bowman Friday night, did not appear in court.

Neither of the women was questioned as to the information given to Capt. Strong of the Hammond police by a garage owner that "a woman in a white flivver racer was introduced to me as Mr. Tanner's sister."

Neither Miss Bowman nor Mrs. Sanger could be reached by telephone last night. The telephone directory lists 666 South Mozart street, the address at which Mrs. Sanger lives, as that of Gustave Sanger.

Inquest Held Over Girl.

The death of Johanna Mynihan, 3½ years old, of 5749 South Peoria street, was the subject of a coroner's inquest during the day. Earl Geyer, agent of the American Life Insurance company, and Policeman Thomas Connors of the Englewood station, who were riding in the car that killed her, were questioned.

Connors was driving the car at the time of the accident, he testified. He already has been suspended, and will have to face the civil service commissioners because he did not arrest Geyer for driving an automobile while intoxicated.

The inquest was continued. Geyer was returned to the Englewood station.

THE WOLF LAKE AUTO MYSTERY

Girl Whom Police Suspect of Driving White Racing Car Which Sent Two to Death Following Crash; Her Car, and Her Companion on Motor Trip. Both Women Deny Figuring in Any Accident.

but obtained his release on bonds late at night. Connors was not held when Capt. James Madden promised to produce him when wanted. Testimony disclosed that both men had been drinking, Geyer being in a stupor.

Autos Kill Two Boys.

Three year old Victor Andrezewski of 1747 Lincoln street was playing at Bloomingdale road and Lincoln street when he ran in the path of an automobile truck driven by William J. Pachelski of 4236 West Iowa street. He was killed. Witneses said the accident was unavoidable. The police questioned Pachelski and released him.

Joseph Schneider, 1301 Washburne avenue, was fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile owned and driven by Louis Henry, 1048 South Springfield avenue, at Polk and Throop streets. He was taken to the Presbyterian hospital, where he died a short time later.

The boy was crossing Throop street when he ran from in front of an automobile owned and driven by A. Lanjella, 25 South Market street, into the car driven by Henry. Both men stopped their cars and called another automobile in which they took the boy to the hospital.

Two Men Meet Injury.

Joseph Jumbo of 1127 Cambridge street was struck by an automobile driven by Albert Nelson of 2631 North Talman avenue, at Elston and Armitage avenues. His right leg was crushed and will have to be amputated. Nelson was not held.

Morris Goldberg of 1877 Milwaukee avenue sustained a fracture of the right thigh when struck by an automobile driven by George H. Schulz of 400 North Clark street. Schulz was not held.

New Chinese Premier for Peace; No Secret Treaties

FAKE DOC GETS BITTER PILL AT HANDS OF STATE

P. J. Krackowski of 2339 West Twenty-first street is a watchmaker, according to the sign over his door.

He didn't make any money making watches, however, so, he hied downtown to a wholesale drugstore, laid in a supply of pills, gathered some bottles of bitter fluids, and set himself up as a doctor sans degree or license. And then he prospered.

Tales of his medical prowess began to spread through the neighborhood. It was said he could cure anything, paralysis to a boil on the neck.

His list of clients grew and grew, until he bought his talcum powder by the barrel and his bitter root extract by the gallon.

Then came his downfall.

The other day a little man walked into his house.

"I'm sick," he said plaintively.

"Fine," said Krackowski, rubbing his hands. "Where?"

"In my back."

"I'll cure you. Come into the back room."

A minute later the little man slipped from the rear room and locked the door—with P. J. inside. Whimpers of astonishment grew to howls of distress as the watchmaker discovered he was in a trap.

The little man, Charles Zuraj, inspector of the Illinois department of registration and education, called the police.

Krackowski is now awaiting trial on a charge of practicing medicine without a license.

ITALY TO FALL, LENINE TO RISE, MINOR ASSERTS

War Writer and Speaker Analyzes Outlook in Europe.

Robert Minor, American artist and lecturer, spoke to a large audience in Carmen's hall, Ashland and Van Buren, last night. He spoke of conditions in Russia and in Germany as he knew them.

Yesterday afternoon in his room at the Morrison hotel Minor talked freely for two hours to a TRIBUNE reporter. After many months in Russia and in Germany as a war correspondent Mr. Minor was arrested by military authorities on a charge of spreading bolsheviatic propaganda among American troops and was released through circumstances which have been more or less mysterious. The U. S. army commander was said to have a good case against him, and Col. House, a friend of his father's, was said to have effected his release without trial.

Doubts Petrograd's Capture.

"I have just been reading the late reports of the alleged success of the armies closing in on Petrograd," he said. "They say Petrograd has been captured. I don't believe it. I don't believe that Petrograd will fall. I don't believe that the bolshevik armies can be defeated by any such handfuls of troops as are now operating against them.

"France and England are not in an economic condition today to stand the strain of a campaign great enough to crush the bolsheviki. And the Italian army is worse.

"The Italian kingdom, at the utmost, can last but a few weeks longer. The spirit of change which has been growing in Italy for months has become too great to block the masses in overturning the kingdom. And all such changes, as in the Kerensky revolution in Russia, will move farther on—until the ultimate desire of the mass is accomplished.

"There is a dispute between Lenine and Trotzky. The situation is that which exists between any sane, conservative temperament and a firebrand. Trotzky is far more fiery than Lenine. Lenine is trying sincerely to quiet the internal political and economic situation in Russia to a stage where it will harmonize with foreign governments.

Lenine in Control.

"Lenine has the balance of power in Russia. The people call him 'our teacher.' In a test of strength with Trotzky he would easily emerge the victor.

"The bolsheviki are greatly in the minority in Russia, taking the population as a whole. But there are only three parties in Russia, and of those the bolsheviki is the strongest. The anarcho-syndicalists, the Socialists of the left, are far more radical than the bolsheviki, and are in active political and economic combat with them on many issues."

"How did you like being in jail in Coblenz?" the reporter changed the subject.

"In a way, do you know, it was very interesting. It was my first experience in a jail."

"What is all this mystery regarding your arrest—why hasn't it become public?" was the inquiry.

"There wasn't any mystery about it as far as I'm concerned. I was not guilty of the offense charged. My accusers failed to provide proof, and I was turned loose.

"As a matter of fact, this charge of associating with revolutionists was simply what any one would have done in my case. I had gone from Dusseldorf to Essen upon receipt of telegraphic instructions from the New York World to get a story on the spread of bolshevism. I knew that the mayor of the city was a bolshevik. I did exactly what any other reporter would have done. I went to the mayor and to the other officials and talked the matter over with them. It was just a coincidence that while I was there a large amount of bolshevik propaganda made its appearance.

Suspected in Paris.

"In Paris I was suspected because I associated more or less with a group of labor leaders that I had known well since my student days in the Quartier Latin."

SEIZE PAIR IN FLAT; ECHO OF SHELL SCANDAL

Detective Sergeants Barden and Abel early yesterday morning arrested a man and woman in a flat at 4640 Clarendon avenue. They gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Slooter. The man said he was 34 and the woman 22. He said he was a salesman and she said she was a nurse. They were booked on a disorderly flat charge—the man as keeper and the woman as inmate.

Since the receipt of an anonymous letter on Oct. 6 the police have been watching the flat. About 2 o'clock yesterday morning an auto with a man and woman drove up. The auto was placed in the garage and the couple went inside. The arrest followed. The detectives called up the vehicle bureau and identified the car as that of Jules H. Benjamin, who was an official of the American Steel Springs company when, several months ago, it was mixed up in a scandal in which it was charged the government had been furnished with defective shell casings.

The couple were held to the Morals court and released on bonds furnished by Charles Shotl, a professional bondsman.

"SUICIDE" FAILS TO GET $250,000 OF INSURANCE

Hidden for Two Years, He Is Found in Mountains.

New York, Oct. 13.—[Special.]—An attempted life insurance fraud, involving $250,000, in which the "dead man" was living as a hermit in the Central American mountains, was revealed by insurance officials today. They claim that the chief figure in the plot was Narciso Arellano, member of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Nicaragua. They say that after attempting to get policies on his life for $1,000,000 and succeeding in getting $250,000 risks from American and Canadian life companies, Arellano simulated suicide and concealed himself for nearly two years, until a New York investigator ferreted out his hiding place.

Robert L. Baynes, a former army man of Washington, who caught Arellano, has brought back a written confession from Arellano and a story of his man hunting trip in the wilds of Nicaragua that amazed insurance officials.

First Reports Favorable.

In February, 1917, insurance companies here and in Canada received applications simultaneously for large amounts of life risks on the person of Narciso Arellano, A. J. Pickford of the law department of the New York Life Insurance company said today. The investigations the companies then made resulted in very favorable reports of the applicant.

The numerous policies finally issued aggregated $250,000. Some of the policies and amounts were: New York Life, $10,000; Equitable Life Assurance society, $45,000; Travelers', $100,000; Fidelity Mutual of Philadelphia, $50,000, and the Imperial Life of Canada, $20,000. The policies were made payable to his wife and son and to his estate.

Death Is "Confirmed."

It became known that Narciso Arellano had come to New York to collect a claim for $100,000 for fire insurance on his business property, which he ultimately compromised for $26,000. Some months afterward reports reached insurance officials that Arellano had disappeared. Then came what purported to be official confirmation of his death.

Arellano had paid about $10,000 in premiums. His production alive by the investigator relieves the insurance companies of the policy risks, which have lapsed for nonpayment of premiums while Arellano was in hiding. For this reason the companies, it was said, will probably take no further action against him.

Reed Meeting in New York Draws "Boos" and Hisses

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—United States Senator James R. Reed of Missouri, Democrat, stirred an audience of 10,000 persons in Madison Square garden tonight to outbursts of applause, "boos," "hisses," and shouts of commendation in a long attack on the league of nations and the peace treaty.

In his speech he heaped invective on the president, ridiculed his Democratic colleagues of the senate.

Genuine Alaska Seal

Because Hudson Seal has advanced so sharply in price within the past year Genuine Alaska Seal now costs but very little more.

This is because the government has removed its protection from the seal herds, and a good supply of skins is now in the market for the first time in several years.

John T. Shayne & Company secured a rich store of seal skins when they were placed on sale in Saint Louis this year, and these are now shown in a profusion of styles in ready-to-wear coats and coatees, and in the original skins for those who prefer garments made to measure.

COMMUNIQUES OF 4TH WEEK SHOW STRIKE IS PUZZLE

Children of Workers in Court Make Too Much Din for His Honor.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Octl 18.—The fourth week of the strike in the steel mills of the Pittsburgh district ended tonight with the employers declaring their men were returning to work in increasing numbers every day, and the strike leaders insisting their figures showed that steel production in the Pittsburgh district is "only 10 per cent of normal."

Say Furnaces Are Opening.

Reports from the leading corporations were that gains in the number of men employed during the week had been pronounced, and blast furnace activity was showing steady improvement.

On the other hand strike headquarters gave out the statement that men who had returned to a number of plants, notably at Clairton, Pa., and Wierton, W. Va., were quitting in large numbers.

No official statements of tonnage, the real barometer of furnace and mill operation, were given out by either side.

Dozen Arrests Made.

The only disorder reported during the day was the arrest of a dozen women and eight men in Pittsburgh, charged by the police with annoying workmen in the Second avenue mills and attacking policemen. Each was fined $10 with the alternative of a jail sentence of ten days.

Some of the women were accompanied by their children and the din in the court room became such that the magistrate ordered all the children sent to their homes.

AMNESTY ASKED FOR MUTINEERS IN FRENCH ARMY

PARIS, Oct. 18.—Discussing the amnesty bill in the chamber of deputies this afternoon, M. Painleve urged clemency for those who mutinied in the spring of 1917 after the failure of the French offensive.

It was brought out that 150 death sentences had been imposed and that twenty-five of the mutineers had been executed, the others being sent to Algeria.

M. Painleve declared that the morale of the troops at that time was so bad and the situation so precarious that order had to be restored at all costs. Thus the executions. He asked now, however, that mercy be shown to those who were in penal servitude.

M. Painleve was minister of war in the Ribot cabinet at the time of this offensive, later becoming premier.

READY TO BREAK DOCKERS' STRIKE IF PEACE FAILS

New York, Oct. 18.—Strike breakers will be used Monday in an effort to break the strike of longshoremen, which has practically paralyzed shipping in New York harbor, if the union pier workers remain away from work, it was announced today, following a conference of private steamship owners. United States shipping board officials indicated that soldiers would be used on boats and docks controlled by the government.

The police have been called upon to guard the private ships and docks. The government piers will be protected by troops from nearby army camps, it was said.

The longshoremen's strike continued to spread today. Hundreds of men who had returned to work at the Bush terminal, Brooklyn, walked out again. Police and strikers clashed several times in the vicinity of piers where workers appeared for duty.

Names Conciliation Board.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Secretary Wilson announced tonight the appointment of Mayor Hylan of New York, F. Paul Vacarelli of New York, and James L. Hughes, immigration commissioner at Philadelphia, as a special conciliation commission to attempt to settle the longshoreman's strike at New York.

DIRECTOR HINES URGES RAIL MEN TO REMAIN CALM

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Director General Hines ta day addressed a letter to "officers and employes" urging fair and impartial observance of the national agreement covering the 500,000 shop employes, effective Monday.

"It is highly important that misunderstandings be avoided," Mr. Hines said, "but, where such misunderstandings do arise, I direct attention to the existence under the agreement of adequate means of investigation and settlement."

Mr. Hines' references to the means for adjusting disputes amicably, attracted attention because of recent unrest among the shop employes, who have voted to strike for higher wages unless the government succeeds in bringing down the cost of living.

Rumors that the four big brotherhoods had notified the administration that a vote to strike Dec. 1 would be taken immediately were denied officially today.

REPORTER VIEWS STEEL STRIKE AS ONE OF WORKERS

Gets Job in Mill and Seeks for Facts on the Conditions.

show you the job," he said. I followed him a short distance and stopped at one of the 2,800 horsepower gas engines, one of a battery of nineteen housed in the building. Together with the same number of engines in two other buildings, they generate the power that runs the Gary mills and furnishes light and power to the city.

Explaining the Job.

"She is just like a Ford—four cylinders and four pistons," said Cleary. "You will have to keep her oiled up and also the one next, and you may get a third engine to take care of. You are to look over the oil feeds on the two of them once every hour."

He then started explaining to me the various parts of the engine, which was built in two sections with a dynamo between them. Each one took floor space of about 50 by 100 feet and the roar they were making was terrific. Nine of the nineteen were running and I could imagine the racket that all of them would make, for they are the largest engines of their kind in the world.

"You have got to watch the oil all around them, seeing that they are getting the right amount, and you are also to feel the water pipes for hot and cold water," continued Cleary, as he was making the rounds.

We came to a door in the side of the flywheel house and Cleary slapped his hand in against part of the revolving disk wheel. "You will have to feel to see if she is getting hot and also see that the oil is flowing right," he said, withdrawing his hand dripping with oil.

Warns to Be Cautious.

"Put your hand in and just touch it," continued Cleary. "Keep your arm to this side of the door and you will be all right.

We then came to another door, which Cleary opened, and I found the oiler had to reach in and touch part of the drive shaft to see if it was being oiled and was not getting hot. He showed me how to touch it.

"You want to feel the bearings to see if they are getting hot," said Cleary, clapping his hand on one. "If they are, or anythig else appears to be wrong, get hold of your second engineer and tell him at once.

After the round of the first engine we started around the second. I looked over all the oiling systems and water pipes while Cleary followed me. Two places I overlooked which he corrected me on, but it was apparent that the job did not require any more than average laborer intelligence.

"You want to watch your step around here," he then cautioned me.

We next started the rounds of the first engine, turning up moving grease cups, and after this was done on both engines, during which we had to climb on top of them, we went down in the "basement," a pit under the engine, containing huge gas intake pipes and moving machinery, reached by a steep, short ladder. More moving grease cups to work on.

The place was slopping in grease and oil, and Cleary told me to get a pair of old shoes, as the ones I had on would soon rot. I had never been in such a place before, and soon had oil all over me. It was impossible to keep away from it, and I was glad to clamber out.

"The job is all right, and one may get used to it and like it, but the hours are long, and sometimes you can hardly keep awake at night," said Cleary. "I have worked the hours in different mills the last seven years and I don't mind them.

Oilers Not Organized.

"Then you did not strike?" I asked him. "No, I did not. Most of the oilers went out, but it is not going to get them anything," he replied. "They have no union, but they just went on a strike with the rest of the bunch."

On the way to gas engine house No. 1, I met one of the striking oilers, whose name was Charles Conners. He told me he had got permission to come in and get some clothes he had left in his locker, and expected to come back to work soon.

"What did you strike for?" I asked him. "I don't know," he replied. "I just went out with the rest of the bunch. The job is all right with the exception of the long hours and no time off. I am going to try and get a job in the machine shop as soon as I finish some work I have to do at home. I went in with him to gas engine house No. 2 before going to my job, where we met a first engineer named Murphy. "Are you back with us?" said Murphy to Conners, and the latter explained.

Get Meals Free.

"Well, that bunch, the Gary steel council, tried to call us fellows out, but we would not go." Murphy broke in. "They were calling me a 'little scab,' but I made up my mind to stick to the job. Why, we get four meals free and a place to sleep."

They asked me what I was to do and I told them I had a job as an oiler. I had two hours with Cleary, and later the second engineer, a man named Potter, took me in charge and showed me some more work around the engines, which he told me I was to do. After we were through, I started a conversation with him.

"You did not go out on strike, did you?" I asked. "No, I did not," he said. "Those guys do not know what they are striking for and I heard they are trying to get back. The engineers had no complaint and the international union would not let them join."

It was getting time to quit for lunch and Seegard, my first engineer, came over and told me to punch my time clock at 12 noon and come back on the job prepared to work the night shift at 5:30. He also gave me my temporary "check" bearing the number 6249, as I had to have some identification to get back in.

"You'll get a brass check tonight with the same number on it," he said. "If you want to stay here you can get a bunk and can also eat up at the lunchroom in the next building." I told him I would decide what I would do when I came back, and then I went to wash up with Cleary.

After a scrub in a tot of gasoline, I got most of the oil off my hands and face, and decided then and there that I would not come back to that place again. Of course, I wasn't used to it. There was too much racket, long hours, danger of slipping on the greasy floors and ladders into the machinery to suit me. However, I know the men who are used to it haven't so much to contend with.

Time for Lunch.

"Come on over and eat with us," said Cleary and I agreed. On the way over he told me that pay day was on the 21st, but as I had started after the 15th, I would not have anything coming. "You can make a touch if you need it," he said. We went to the improvised lunchroom and I found we had to get into line for the "chow" just as in the army. It was waiting on yourself and my tray was filled with a dish containing roast beef, another of spaghetti, and boiled potatoes, a plate with bread and butter, an apple, and a cup of coffee.

I sat down between two Negroes and went to eating, but I didn't eat much of the meal. Telling Cleary that I had to catch a train, I left the mess hall and started to look around and over the steel corporation's plant. I'll write something about that tomorrow.

ROBERTSON ORDERS ANOTHER SMOKING FACTORY CLOSED

HEALTH COMMISSIONER ROBERTSON'S anti-smoke campaign, which had hibernated all week while the commissioner made a 650 mile inspection trip of city institutions, was revived in a hurry when the commissioner saw yesterday's list of smoke violations. Dr. E. Vernon Hill, acting head of the sanitary bureau, was called in.

"I don't wish to be drumming at your staff continually," the commissioner declared, pounding his desk. "I wish you to come to me every day, if possible, with recommendations for summary action against violators."

Dr. Hill pointed to a twenty-eight minute violation by the Continental Candy company, 212 East Austin avenue. A twenty-four hour notice was served on the concern a week ago.

"Close it up this afternoon," said Dr. Robertson.

When last seen, Dr. Hill was leaving the city hall with a policeman to enforce Dr. Robertson's order.

STEEL STRIKERS MEET AND 'DIG IN' FOR FIGHT TO END

200 Delegates Adopt Plans for a Long Battle.

Several resolutions necessary to a continuation of the steel strike were passed yesterday afternoon by the 200 delegates from various unions in and around Chicago who were called to the meeting by the Chicago District Council for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers. It was the first assembly of its kind since the steel strike was called on Sept. 22.

The more important resolutions are:

Indorsement of the commissary plan for feeding strikers all over the country.

Organization of a legal department to handle all union cases.

Organizing a personnel and intelligence department of their own to oversee and govern, to a large extent, the operations in each city.

Adopting a plan to "stick to the finish."

Objection to importation of colored laborers.

Denouncing all Reds and all connection with radicals.

Plan All Winter Fight.

In short the resolutions mean that the strikers have dug in and say they are going to battle through a long, hard winter, and even longer than that if necessary.

"We'll never quit—there hasn't been one single suggestion of quitting by any one of our members," said John H. de Young, secretary of the council. "We are united more strongly than ever and you can bet that we'll never break. Any story that we have asked for an armistice is wrong."

Commissaries, kitchens, and stores will be established in Gary, South Chicago, Indiana Harbor, Whiting, Milwaukee, Joliet, Waukegan, and Evanston. Strikers will be able to purchase supplies at wholesale price.

A law department to care for all arrests, all injunction suits, all legal matters will be appointed Monday. This has been made necessary by the large number of arrests during the last week, the union officials assert.

"Then we are going to have an intelligence man in every town who will not only look out for the union's interests but will also keep the headquarters informed as to radicals and so on," continued De Young. "These men will make reports every day and they will keep the pickets and strikers from violence, although there has been none to date."

Race Question Grows Serious.

The Negro labor question has become serious, say the officials. According to their figures, 75 per cent of the labor going on in the mills at present is being done by Negro labor and 95 per cent of the Negroes have never worked in steel mills before.

"If a great racial feeling is to be averted the company officials will have to discontinue parading these Negro laborers before the union men," declared De Young.

The 200 delegates went on record denouncing all Red propaganda.

"There has been some of it going on," said De Young. "Red papers and handbills and notices have been found in barns and secluded corners in great quantities. We want it known that the union has nothing to do with this—why the I. W. W. have even denounced this program and have removed their organization from two of the cities."

Five delegates who represented the Milwaukee unions in the conference were reported to have urged that the council seek an armistice in the strike on the ground the steel companies are daily gaining in strength, recruiting new men to fill the places of the strikers, welcoming former employés back, and putting the mills into a constantly increasing state of production.

Union officials declared that not more than 10 per cent of the men who walked out on Sept. 22 had returned to work.

The meeting was held at 180 West Washington street. Another will be held at that address next week.

Says 10,000 Laborers Will Leave.

Ten thousand alien laborers will be lost to the steel industry of the Chicago district if the strike runs through another month, according to John Popper, revenue inspector in charge of the alien income tax department in Chicago.

"Applications for passports are coming in at the rate of from 150 to 200 a day," he said yesterday.

Gary Mills Gain Workers.

Col. Thomas B. Hamilton, superintendent of the Gary Street Railway company, reported that more men were carried to the mills yesterday than on any previous day since the strike started.

"The mill traffic was exceptionally heavy," he said. "In fact, it was almost normal."

It was learned that Benjamin F. Cooper, 4448 South Wabash avenue, a 17 year old worker in the mills, was killed on Oct. 11 when a mold fell on him. His death had not been reported previously to the military authorities.

Sixteen Raids Recorded.

Sixteen raids were conducted late Friday night and early yesterday morning by four automobileloads of soldiers. Most of them occurred in Tolleston.

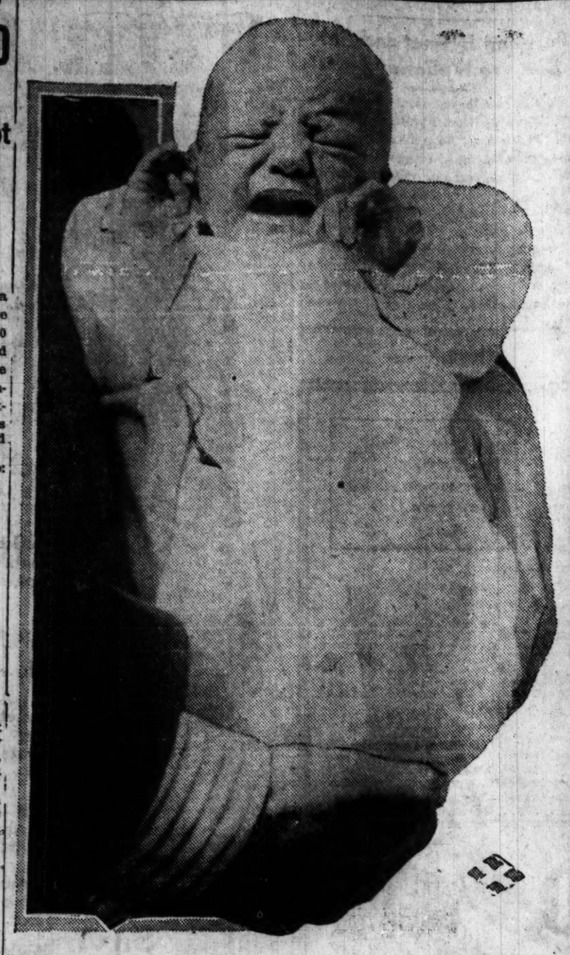
The seven radicals who face deportation sentences have not been brought to Chicago, as announced by the military authorities on Friday. This was learned yesterday when Paul S. Glaser, attorney for the strikers, obtained bondsmen for six of the men.

Col. W. S. Mapes refused to accept any bonds. He said the men would not be released by the military authorities and that as soon as they were turned over to the immigration authorities Glaser could take the matter up with them. Glaser threatened to obtain writs of habeas corpus.

Fifteen men were arrested in Indiana Harbor when they began hurling stones and bricks through the windows of the home of loyal workers in Butternut street. All but two were later released, however.

SHE NEEDS A HOME

Baby Whose Girl Mother Must Give Her Up.



WHO HAS A HEART LARGE ENOUGH TO SHELTER A BABY?

Doctor Seeks Home for Infant Young Mother Must Give Up.

Babies usually bring happiness with them when they come.

But it was not so when the stork stopped at a small farm near Brookfield, Ill., in the early hours of last Thursday morning to leave a girl baby with a child mother. No, it was different, for into this little mother's heritage there crept the misery of knowing that she must part with her little mite.

Dr. Hartford Sweet of Brookfield the physician who attended, told THE TRIBUNE about it yesterday, requesting that this newspaper find the baby a home, a father, and a mother who would love it.

Comes of Good Stock.

"It is out of the question for the mother to keep the baby," he said. "She realizes this and has agreed, much as it hurts her, to part with the child. But she wants the baby to have a good home. I know all about the child's history. It comes from good sound mental and physical stock on both sides. Will you ask persons considering adopting it to communicate with me either direct of through THE TRIBUNE?"

Coincidentally with Dr. Sweet's request there came to THE TRIBUNE a letter from Mr. and Mrs. George S. Wann of Wanatah, Ind. They are seeking a baby "up to 4 years old."

Want a Baby Girl.

"Inasmuch as you are the paper that does big things," they wrote, "we are asking you to aid us in our effort to locate a baby that needs a mother's care and a real home.

They specified they wish to adopt a "baby girl." Efforts to communicate with them yesterday failed.

FIVE DROWNED IN FAR NORTH.

Prince Rupert, B. C., Oct. 17.—Louis Powell, his wife, and their three sons, natives of Metlakatla, near Ketchikat, Alaska, are believed to have been drowned from their small boat off the mouth of the Naas river.

TALK OF MURDER DELAYS INQUEST IN GARY DEATH

Claims by relatives that the recent death of Alexander J. Smith, 1521 East Seventy-third street, in the yards of the Illinois Steel mills, Oct. 8, might have been murder, caused a postponement of the inquest yesterday by Deputy Coroner Peter Seese.

Smith was a locomotive engineer. At 8:30 in the morning of Oct. 8 he was sitting on a cot in a cement storehouse at the mills, used for temporary sleeping quarters during the strike.

Fred G. Neubert, yardmaster at the mills, sitting close by him, saw Smith clean a revolver and then reload it. Neubert went to sleep, and was awakened shortly after by a shot. He saw Smith doubled up on the cot, the revolver lying on the floor. Smith died before the ambulance arrived.

Three brothers of the deceased appeared at the inquest yesterday. They brought forward the fact that Smith, a nonunion man, was seated close to two windows at the time of his death, and that it would have been possible for some one to reach through the window, seize the revolver and shoot him.

Donald and William Smith, brothers of the dead man, said that Alexander was in excellent health, had never been despondent, and that there was no reason for suicide.

A post-mortem examination recovered the bullet, which was from Smith's revolver, and which passed straight through the heart. The shirt was powder burned.

The hearing will be reopened on Nov. 8. Police promise further investigation.

COUNCIL PUTS "SOLID 9" BACK OVER SCHOOLS

Mayor's Appointees Win by 59-0 Vote; Board Muddle Is Ended.

By a vote of 59 to 0 the city council yesterday reconfirmed nine members of the "solid six" school board.

Its action is believed to have straightened out the board of education tangle "for good."

"I congratulate the school children," said Mayor Thompson as he announced the vote.

Here's the New Board.

Under Judge Scanlan's decision affirming the right to office of Jacob M. Loeb and Mrs. F. E. Thornton, and with the council action yesterday, the board of education will be made up as follows:

Edwin S. Davis, Albert H. Severinghaus, Dr. Sadie Bay Adair, Lulu M. Snodgra.*, Boleslaus Klarkowski, James B. Rezny, Hart Hanson, Francis E. Croarkin, George B. Arnold, Mr. Loeb and Mrs. Thornton.

Several of these were sworn in immediately after the council meeting.

Judge Scanlan is expected to enter his ouster order against the board tomorrow morning, and the plan is to have the reconfirmed members all sworn in by that time, leaving no opportunity for the old Loeb board to take over the board of education offices.

City Hall Is Elated.

The mayor and his city hall family were elated at the vote of the council. They had scarcely dared to hope enough aldermen would be present to suspend the rules, allowing confirmation by majority vote.

Opening of the meeting was delayed fifteen minutes while administration leaders took stock of the attendance.

The roll call showed just the necessary fifty-six aldermen to be present, but Ald. Crowe, Clark, and Schwartz showed up later, which gave fifty-nine votes on the motion to confirm.

The mayor's friends took the action of the council as "a vote of confidence in the mayor and the school board," but a slightly different explanation of the vote is given in the remarks of Ald. Watson, who made both the motion to suspend the rules and the motion to confirm the appointees.

Watson Gives Reasons.

He said:

"I am not making this motion because I think these appointments are the best that could have been made. I am not making it because I voted to confirm these appointees last May; I didn't. But I believe, as the mayor points out, that no school board can do justice to the school children unless it is given the right to believe it is to be a permanent organization."

Ald. Fetzer made the point that Judge Scanlan should enter the ouster order creating vacancies before the mayor made appointments. He said to stave off further litigation and assure the board of permanency in office the council should await the judge's order.

Court Edict Is Factor.

Ald. Louis B. Anderson, however, silenced this criticism by reading from a decision of the judge given just before the council meeting.

In this decision the judge declared that any one who would attack the mayor's appointees on the point made by Ald. Fetzer would be doing so on "the flimsiest of technicalities." The judge added that there would be "no merit in such a position," and that such an attack "would be a wanton effort to injure the school system."

Ald. Fetzer and Ald. Guernsey, both of the Seventh ward, endeavored to make Corporation Counsel Ettelson admit to the council that the judge's decision coincided with Mr. Ettelson's opinion. This the corporation counsel refused to do, declaring the decision is the law to be followed, regardless of private legal opinions.

Mayor Shoulders Burden.

In searching for a way around Ald. Fetzer's legal point, Ald. Richert suggested that the mayor seek the resignations of the nine "reappointees," dating from yesterday, so vacancies could be said to have existed when the council acted yesterday.

"I will take the responsibility for that, if it is deemed necessary," said the mayor.

In delaying the entry of his ouster order until tomorrow Judge Scanlan announced in his opinion all of the acts of the ousted board are illegal. He set next Tuesday for the hearing of ouster proceedings against Supt. Mortenson in behalf of former Supt. Chadsey.

The usual Saturday afternoon quiet prevailed at the board rooms yesterday. The seventh and eighth floors were open, as is customary, but the sixth, on which are situated the offices of the president and secretary and the meeting rooms, was locked.

Chief Garrity announced the police detail assigned to the board rooms Thursday night would be kept there "until further orders."

UTAH DEVELOPS RARE NEW GERM, DOCTORS ASSERT

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—An investigation just completed by Surgeon Edward Francis of the United States public health service adds another to the list of disease germs afflicting mankind. The germ, which bears the name of bacterium tularense, was first isolated by Drs. McCoy and Chapin of the health service as the causative agent in a plaguelike disease of rodents. It was not then known that the same germ also infects man.

Dr. Francis now finds that bacterium tularense causes "deer fly fever," a disease occurring among the rural population of Utah and initiated, according to popular belief by a fly bite on some exposed portion of the body. The site of the bite and the neighboring lymph glands become tender and inflamed, and commonly suppurate. A fever like that in ordinary blood poisoning develops and lasts from three to six weeks. The patient is confined to bed. The first case known to have ended fatally was reported in 1919.

Something like two dozen cases of this disease have occurred in Millard county, Utah.

DANIELS' NAV RESERVE HAR FIND IN REC

Congressmen, Ho Inclined to See Cause for Alar

[BY A STAFF CORRESPO Washington, D. C., Oct. ...dal.)—Secretary Daniels' that he could call out 350,0 reserve sailors and man eve the navy in a week, and that of the navy at the present cause of lack of personnel i not alarming, is not entirely by naval records.

Inquiry today shows that a est peak just before the arm number of enlisted men in who had actually seen serv was 204,843. Some of those still in the present cripple having never been released. them were discharged and re a small percentage—and some undoubtedly would be found respond to service if called.

The Wartime Figure

Commander Foote, aid to Daniels, furnished the figu 204,843 figure represents th number of men who actually service during the war. W true that the navy had an strength of more than 500,0 than 125,000 of these men we training when the war ended went to sea. Another 100, engaged in various duties ov ship bases, in aviation, and ot and many thousands more we the various naval districts in ed States.

In the light of these figures ent that in the event of an e alling for fleet action, Daniels' call for reserves m meet with response from trained sailors, but in realit sponse could come from less 000, and experts much doubt jump from civil life back to could be accomplished within or anywhere near that limitat

Daniels Not Wholly to B

Members of congress on t affairs committees are not in blame the navy nor Secretary entirely for the present rundo dition of the navy. DANIELS' NAVY RESERVE HARD TO FIND IN RECORDS

Congressmen, However, Inclined to See No Cause for Alarm.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Secretary Daniels' statement that he could call out 350,000 trained reserve sailors and man every ship in the navy in a week, and that the plight of the navy at the present hour because of lack of personnel is therefore not alarming, is not entirely borne out by naval records.

Inquiry today shows that at its high-est peak just before the armistice the number of enlisted men in the navy who had actually seen service at sea was 204,543. Some of those men are still in the present crippled service, having never been released. Some of them were discharged and reënlisted—a small percentage—and some of them undoubtedly would be found unable to respond to service if called.

The Wartime Figures.

Commander Foote, aid to Secretary Daniels, furnished the figures. The 204,543 figure represents the highest number of men who actually saw fleet service during the war. While it is true that the navy had an enlisted strength of more than 500,000, more than 125,000 of these men were still in training when the war ended and never went to sea. Another 100,000 were engaged in various duties overseas at navy bases, in aviation, and other fields, and many thousands more were held in the various naval districts in the United States.

In the light of these figures it is evident that in the event of an emergency calling for fleet action, Secretary Daniels' call for reserves would not meet with response from 350,000 trained sailors, but in reality the response could come from less than 200,000, and experts much doubt that the transfer from civil life back to the ships could be accomplished within a week or anywhere near that limitation.

Daniels Not Wholly to Blame.

Members of congress on the naval affairs committees are not inclined to blame the navy nor Secretary Daniels entirely for the present rundown condition of the navy. Senator Lodge, who has been for years a member of the naval committee, and Senator Page, its chairman, both attach blame for the lack of personnel to the shipping board on the basis that something must be done to head off desertions from the navy to the more attractive merchant marine. Members of the house committee, Republicans among them, absolve Daniels from blame for the wholesale exodus of sailors after the war, maintaining that the country demanded it and that there would have been trouble if the boys had not been released.

Senator Lodge said today that the pay offered by the shipping board was double and sometimes triple that paid for the same work in the navy.

"Secretary Daniels' statement that he can call upon 350,000 reserves may be true," said Senator Lodge, "but what I am concerned about is keeping enough men in the navy to prevent the deterioration of the ships, particularly in the attention to the machinery. I have been told that if we were to have war tomorrow we would have only one ship fit to go to sea."

Increased Pay a Solution.

Senator Page of Vermont, chairman of the naval committee, said he agreed with Secretary Daniels that the only solution was to increase the pay of enlisted men in the navy. After the senate acts on the league of nations, he said, action to place the navy upon a definite peace time basis should be taken. He was anxious to see how large a navy would be necessary to fulfill America's obligations under the league covenant before he committed himself to any fixed size for the navy.

"If there is any censure due it should be upon congress," said Representative McPherson of Missouri, a Republican member of the house naval committee. "I do not believe, however, that either congress or Secretary Daniels is subject to censure. That at the present time many ships are undermanned seems to be a necessary condition during this readjustment period."

SAYS LINOTYPE SOON WILL JOIN THE UNEMPLOYED

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 18.—The linotype will be a thing of the past within ten years, it was predicted tonight by Harry Andrews, managing editor of the Los Angeles Times. The statement followed the experiment of the Times in which it appeared yesterday with one page printed from photo engravings of typewriter copy.

"The system we used is not only practicable but is immensely so," he said. "We see improvements that will be made when it is done again, but I am ready to predict that within ten years the linotype will be a thing of the past."

Those who produced the page said they can repeat the process at a saving in cost from linotype methods.

G. Henry Scull, who had charge of the photo engraving, said he can at the cost of $7,000 install a plant capable of turning out a twenty-four page newspaper in four hours.

"INDIANA BEAR" TO PROSECUTE NEWBERRY CASE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Charges of fraud and large unlawful expenditures in the nomination and election of Truman Newberry as United States senator from Michigan will be laid before a grand jury at Grand Rapids, Attorney General Palmer announced today.

Frank C. Dailey of Indianapolis, who prosecuted the Terre Haute and Indianapolis election fraud cases, has been assigned by Palmer to take charge. As the United States district attorney for Indiana he prosecuted the mayor of Terre Haute, the judge of the Circuit court, the sheriff and more than 100 others, including high county and city officials. All were convicted and sent to prison. He also procured conviction of the superintendent of police of Indianapolis and more than eighty others.

Senator Newberry, when informed of Palmer's announcement tonight, said he did not care to make any comment.

SETS TRAP FOR 'FOSTERS' URGING RAIL WALKOUTS

Senate Committee Is for Prison Clauses on Strikes, Lockouts.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The senate interstate commerce commission today, instead of modifying the anti-strike clauses of the Cummins railroad bill, decided to put more teeth in them in the form of provision for fine of $500 or six months in prison or both.

The bill is to be reported out early next week and placed in position for senate debate immediately after disposal of the treaty of Versailles, with leaders planning its passage next month.

Would Reach Radicals.

The prohibition against aiding railroad strikes was inserted, committee members said, to reach both radicals and labor leaders who "aid, abet, counsel, command, induce, or procure" action toward a strike.

One senator said it was "to catch the Fosters." Under the rule lockouts also are illegal and punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.

The anti-strike feature of the Cummins bill threatens to throw the labor issue wide open in congress and precipitate the struggle which members of both houses have been striving to avoid for years. The temper of congress now is such that it is believed the anti-strike proposal will be carried in some form.

Some Object to Proposal.

Three members of the committee, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, Relican; Senator Stanley of Kentucky and Senator Wolcott of Delaware, Democrats, opposed the bill. It probably will meet with stubborn opposition in both houses.

Many senators are preparing to take the position that the anti-strike provision is ineffective and unworkable, and that it lays down a principle which, if followed to its logical conclusion, will result in the forbidding of strikes in all industry.

The proposal, they will contend, completely reverses the principles laid down in the anti-trust legislation exempting labor from the penalties for combinations in restraint of trade, and the constitutional prohibition of involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime.

The "Teeth" of the Bill.

Here are the new sections which the committee will recommend next week:

"Section——It shall be unlawful for two or more persons being officers, directors, managers, agents, attorneys or employés of any carrier or carriers subject to the act to regulate commerce, as amended, for the purpose of maintaining, adjusting or settling any dispute, demand or controversy, which, under the provisions of this act, can be submitted for decision to the committee of wages and working conditions or to a regional board of adjustment, to enter into any combination or agreement with the intent substantially to hinder, restrain, or prevent the operation of trains or other facilities of transportation for the movement of commodities or persons in interstate commerce, or in pursuance of any such combination or agreement and with like purpose substantially to hinder, restrain or prevent the operation of trains or other facilities of transportation for the movement of commodities or persons in interstate commerce, and, upon conviction, any such persons shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment not exceeding six month, or by both such fine and imprisonment: Provided, that nothing herein shall be taken to deny to any individual the right to quit his employment for any reason.

"Section ——Whoever knowingly and with like intent shall aid, abet, counsel, command, induce or procure the commission or performance of any act made unlawful in the last preceding section hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

Outlines Future Systems?

Creation of not less than fifteen nor more than twenty-five competitive regional railroad systems by the transportation board is proposed in the bill. The interstate commerce commission would be authorized to fix rates to make certain a return of at least 5½ per cent on the actual value of the railroads in the regional systems, plus ½ of 1 per cent for improvements. Earnings above 6 per cent would be divided between the carriers and the baord.

had not been brought up again everybody would have gone right on with the rights stated under the resolution."

See Agreement Tomorrow.

Meanwhile the committee of fifteen today strove to reach an agreement. On adjournment Chairman T. L. Chadbourne and Charles Edward Russell, official spokesmen, expressed confidence that an adjustment will be evolved by Monday. Bernard M. Baruch, head of the public group, was similarly confident. But Secretary Lane, who has been the star optimist of the sessions, appeared a trifle doubtful.

Some members of the employers' group, too, indicated a disposition to modify their positions. To safeguard against a situation such as in the steel strike, where extremist "outsiders" organized the unskilled workers and then pulled a strike against the sentiment of conservative leaders, they suggested an agreement providing that where "outside" agents are called in by employés to deal with the companies, these agents must be men actually chosen by the men by secret ballot, whenever disputes arise.

Eye on Walking Delegates.

This is intended to meet the objection that "walking delegates" should be granted no right to come into a plant and stir up trouble where the men have no grievances.

An effort is under way for the presentation of a program to be considered jointly with collective bargaining, with a view to clearing up cloudy issues and leaving the declaration of the principle open to many interpretations. It is to embody questions such as the "open versus closed shop" and other interlacing and interlinking issues.

Dispute in a Word.

To boil the situation down it takes this aspect:

Both sides, labor and caiptal, are for collective bargaining, but as to its definition they are disagreed.

Labor is for bargaining between trade unions and employers or associations of employers. It wants recognition of union officials as representatives of the men in the trade.

Capital throws the stress on "industrial democracy" through shop councils and joint boards in a plant on which both workers and management are represented. Men may join unions or not as they see fit.

Capital wants the individual plant recognized as the productive unit; labor is for dealing with the industry as a whole—it points out that organizations of employers control some of the basic industries, and that labor should be dealt on similar scope.

In essence the issue is what part shall trade unionism play in collective bargaining.

Harmony Up to Labor.

The labor group in the committee of fifteen did not indicate today what its attitude would be on whatever compromise is formulated, but yesterday they declared they had yielded as much as they intended to. It is still an open question of whether a bolt would occur, as has been threatened.

So far in the conference capital has been on the defensive and labor has had the support of the public group.

If labor should reject a reasonable adjustment the tables would be turned, labor would be on the defensive, and the public might transfer its support, and if the conference should disintegrate the onus would follow on the labor bloc.

KICK WIVES FOR LACK OF KICK IN HOMEMADE RUM

Reforming Is Bad for Husbands' Tempers, Court Finds.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

When the saloons closed the wives who frequent the Court of Domestic Relations thought they would have new dresses, full pantries, and a less irritating winter. But there is no relief yet.

James A. Kearns, chief clerk of the municipal court, announced yesterday that now the chief trouble at these homes is caused by infuriated husbands who find that home made booze is without the customary kick. They want their kick, and they are making life miserable for their wives because they can't get it.

"Most of the men brought to our court did not have money enough to put in a winter supply of liquor," Mr. Kearns said. "They bought a few small bottles and prepared for the worst. Their supply exhausted, they have begun making their own, and it is weak. They are wild men.

Hard Work Getting Drunk.

"Last month the court gave eleven men to the Law and Order league for being drunk, but they all confessed that they had such a difficult time getting that way that they had almost rather be sober than try it over again.

"The wives that come into this court now are better dressed than they were before we had prohibition, and the children have enough clothes. It is a hopeful sign. But the dispositions of these men who are destined to become sober citizens in spite of themselves keep the court's complaint department busy."

Asks Wives to Be Patient.

Mr. Kearns asks that the wives be as patient as possible with husbands who are going through this period of forced reformation, and, if possible, listen to them without throwing flatirons and chairs.

$1,600,000,000 in Contracts for War Still Pending

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The war department still has on its hands 5,724 emergency contracts awaiting liquidation.

The sum involved aggregates more than $1,600,000,000, but the official schedule estimates that these contracts can be liquidated at a cost of $300,000,000.

Since the armistice 22,611 contracts have been settled with a total valuation of $3,000,000,000, for which contractors were paid $309,000,000 in the final settlement.

A MERMAID BRIDE

Chicago Girl Swimmer Who Figures in New York Elopement Romance.

Mrs. William K. O'Connor

This is the story of a mermaid who was married to a sailor. Last summer Miss Anita McDermott visited in the east with her mother, Mrs. Mary McDermott of 4841 Vincennes avenue. While in New York she met William K. O'Connor, then in the navy.

After a courtship of three weeks the couple decided to be married, but they disliked the idea of a big wedding. So they just slipped quietly away on Sept. 9 and were married.

They intended to keep the marriage a secret for a long time, so everybody would be surprised, but Anita told her mother, and formal announcement soon followed.

Mrs. O'Connor is a sister of Mike McDermott, world's champion breast stroke swimmer. She also is noted in the aquatic world, having won several swimming medals.

Mr. O'Connor is a New York insurance man. The couple will make their home in Rye, a suburb of New York.

Order Dr. Nance to Defend Atty. Mulligan's Libel Suit

Dr. Willis O. Nance, sanitary district trustee, must defend the $50,000 libel suit recently filed against him by Attorney George F. Mulligan, according to a decision handed down late yesterday afternoon by Judge John J. Sullivan of the Superior court. The suit is an outcome of an attack made by Dr. Nance on the conduct of the sanitary district affairs. Acting as his own lawyer, Mr. Mulligan bitterly characterized Dr. Nance's public attack upon him as having been made "without basis in fact." The court overruled a technical pleading filed by Dr. Nance's attorney, Marquis Eaton, and entered an order requiring Dr. Nance to file an answer in the case preparatory to going to trial.

5 CENT CAR FARE FADES AS COURT DROPS APPEAL

Hearing on Legality of 7 Cent Fare Set for December.

Hope of immediate resumption of 5 cent street car fares through action of the state Supreme court faded yesterday when the city's motion to dismiss the appeal of the surface lines was ordered stricken from the records.

In taking jurisdiction of the appeal from Judge Smith's decision which held the public utilities commission's 7 cent fare order illegal the high court set the case down for hearing at the December term. Attorneys for the city asked the court to dismiss the appeal, which would have thrown the question back in the Sangamon county court, where, it is believed, Judge Smith would have ordered a resumption of the 5 cent fare.

"There is more than one inning to a ball game," said Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester E. Cleveland when he heard of the Supreme court's action. "The merits of the case have already been decided in favor of the city, and I believe the Supreme court will uphold Judge Smith's decision, though we had hoped for prompt action through the dismissal of the appeal.

"There may be many more skirmishes in the legal battle to bring back the 5 cent fares, but in the end the city will win, for the companies are up against the provisions of their own contracts. It may take time to teach them, but sooner or later the companies will learn that they must give good service for 5 cents or junk their properties and get off the streets."

The next brush between the city's lawyers and the car company attorneys will be before the public utility commission tomorrow when the question of impounding excess fares and the issuance of receipt slips for the extra 2 cents collected comes before the commission.

MISS EVANGELINE BOOTH TO GET A D. S. MEDAL

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Miss Evangeline C. Booth, commander in chief of the Salvation Army in America, will be presented a distinguished service medal tomorrow at New York by Maj. Gen. David C. Shanks, commanding the embarkation port at Hoboken, who will act as the personal representative of President Wilson and Secretary Baker.

Miss Booth's citation, made public today by the war department, said:

"For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service as commander of the Salvation Army in the United States. She has been tireless in her devotion to her manifold duties. The contribution of the Salvation Army toward winning the war is conspicuous and the results obtained were due in marked degree to the great executive ability of its commander."

Prominent Subdividers and Their Subdivisions

(Reprinted from Realty World, September, 1919.)

The central idea around which the Britigan properties have been selected and developed is that of selecting and preparing property that is suitable for homes and all that go with them—good schools, churches, stores, shops, theatres, banks, etc. They select property which is suitable for that sort of development, and they carry on that development as far as it is possible for them as an organization.

The Britigan way of building a subdivision is to make it ready for the home-builder, to leave no necessary thing undone that will help immediate development. All necessary improvements, such as sewer, water, gas and sidewalks, are attended to so that purchasers can begin to build at once and not delay till the city sees fit to make the improvements. They do that for the buyers of lots and these improvements are included in the price. The Britigan way assures buyers that the property they buy is real Chicago city property, ripe for building. That's why values in their subdivisions are always preserved and improve with building operations.

Sensible restrictions protect the Britigan subdivisions, including such things as a 15-foot line on residence streets; no frame buildings; no business on residence streets; stipulated price for structure, etc. Such restrictions are beneficial to each lot owner, assuring every purchaser that the character and value of his property will be properly protected.

You Need to Act Quickly—Now—Today

Only 300 persons can profit in the 4 STAR SALE—the first of its kind ever put on in Chicago. The time is right, conditions are right, the property is right—and Britigan is the right man to conduct such a stupendous enterprise. Italian Renaissance Credence in antique walnut finish $242

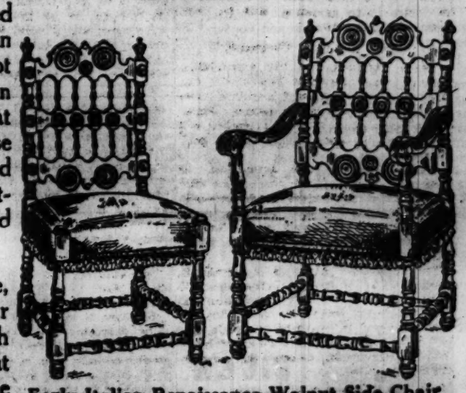
Late Italian Renaissance High Back Chair in Italian red velvet, $164

IF you've moved recently, or, perhaps, rearranged the furniture in your home and find the need of one or two pieces to fill certain bare places, you'll be interested in the furniture shown in the illustrations of this advertisement.

Early Italian Renaissance Walnut Fireside Bench in taupe velvet applique $102

Usually the ordinary chair, table or sofa isn't "just the thing"; it looks as though it was borrowed from some other place to be put in the bare spot. Unusual pieces not only fill the spaces, but they give an air of distinction and good taste that carries through to everything else in the home; the pieces illustrated are examples of quite a large assortment of such furniture to be found always at our store.



Early Italian Renaissance Walnut Side Chair and Arm Chair in taupe velvet applique. Side Chair, $81 Arm Chair, $98

While this is unusual furniture, there is nothing unusual about our service to you when we sell such furniture; our idea of a fair profit applies here just as much as to the more matter of fact articles, and our willingness to permit you to return or exchange them until you are satisfied is the same at all times, no matter what you buy.

Rugs

With such furniture there may be a need for the unusual in rugs. There's almost nothing in fine domestic or oriental rugs that you won't find here. Come and see.

ENGLAND TO LET IRELAND SETTLE ITS OWN FUSS?

Report That Definite Decision Soon Will Be Forthcoming.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, Oct. 18.—England is determined this time to settle the Irish problem. I make this statement on the authority of an official who is probably as close to Premier Lloyd George as any man in England. England is determined that Ireland shall have home rule, and the whole problem is the working out of a plan that will satisfy her.

As to what that plan will be no man can tell at present. Lloyd George himself does not know. He will not make up his mind until a report of the cabinet committee now exploring the problems is received, and then he may put it aside in favor of some better plan.

"We're Out—Go to It."

I can say, however, that the desire of the most influential group in British politics is to say to Ireland and Ulster: "We're getting out. Fix it up among yourselves. If Ulster wants a little tinpot show of her own we won't coerce her. It's up to her and Ireland."

Areas to Decide.

The desire is to arrive at a settlement on the lines of a peace conference, which means that the majority in definite areas should decide their political fate. This is complicated by English pledges to Ulster and by undeniable fact that Ulster was entirely loyal during the war, while Sinn Fein intrigued with Germany. England is willing to forget that, however, and grant Ireland the fullest measure of home rule possible, having regard to the question of defense.

DEMOCRATS IN SENATE SPEED UP IRISH CAUSE

Seek to Counteract the Vitriolic Speech of Williams.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Striving to counteract the effect of Senator Williams' speech against the Irish Thursday, Democratic leaders today tried to force prompt action on the resolution of Senator Walsh of Massachusetts to carry Ireland's case before the league of nations as soon as the United States became a member.

Senator Walsh of Montana called up the resolution shortly after the senate convened. Sharp debate ensued, Republican spokesmen contending that the resolution was merely an effort to "bunko" the Irish.

Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, Republican, asked Senator Walsh if he didn't think the United States would be able to present Ireland's case more convincingly if it had as many votes in the league as the British empire. Senator Walsh said he didn't think so.

Perils Our Domestic Questions.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, Republican, took the position that if the case of Ireland could be presented to the league by the United States it was equally logical to argue that other nations could bring American immigration and tariff laws into question before the league.

"If, under article XI., jurisdiction can be taken of the Irish question," Senator Lenroot said, "cannot like jurisdiction be taken of the immigration question in this country, the tariff question, or almost any other domestic question?"

"If any such question is raised," Senator Walsh replied, "it would be a domestic question and the nations would take no action."

League Merely Forms Forum.

"Then does the senator take the position that if Great Britain should raise the point that the Irish question is a domestic one, it could not take jurisdiction under article XI.?" Senator Lenroot asked.

"If the league finds that a question is domestic it does not act in the matter at all," Senator Walsh replied. "The league of nations simply affords a forum before which a cause can be presented. It is well that this provision was made in the treaty, because if the cause of Ireland should be presented there and the council or the assembly had authority to act it might take action against Irish independence."

"Why wasn't there a forum for immigration?" Senator Lenroot asked.

"In my view the Irish question is not a purely domestic question," Senator Walsh answered. "Gen. Smuts did not so regard it. He gives it an international, as well as domestic, aspect. When Cuba endeavored to establish its independence, our government declined to recognize that it was a purely domestic question, within the jurisdiction of Spain."

Walsh Is Adamant.

Senator Lenroot insisted the same reasoning would make immigration an international question, but Senator Walsh refused to concede this point.

"This resolution," he went on, "is not offered in any spirit of hostility to the British empire or to England. It is offered in the hope that an irritating factor in the relations between these two governments may be removed. I have no doubt that the overwhelming sentiment of the country favors granting the Irish at least an opportunity to present their case before a world forum."

Senator Poindexter of Washington, Republican, said he failed to see how Senator Walsh "could escape the conclusion that the presentation of Ireland's case to the league would be anything less than external aggression."

"Irish Bunkoed Again."

Senator Penrose interrupted to remark that "the Irish people have been accustomed for 100 years or more to be bunkoed and gold bricked."

"The crowning and most insolent effort to bunko the Irish is this resolution of the senator from Montana," Senator Penrose said. "I should like to ask him what show Ireland would have with six hostile delegates from the British empire, and, perchance, a statesman like the senator from Mississippi appointed to represent the American government as the crowning distinction of his illustrious career."

The resolution did not reach a vote and went to the calendar under the rules. It probably will be called again next week.

ATTORNEY WARD'S SAFE BLOWN IN HUNT FOR WILL

Forty-five minutes were occupied yesterday by a pastmaster in the use of drills and other implements of the "yeggman's" trade in "blowing" the safe of the late James R. Ward, attorney for the aged and eccentric "millionless millionaire," Edward W. Morrison, who some time ago turned over to Ward $2,000,000 or $3,000,0000 in realty and other property.

Ward's vault in the Reaper building, Clark and Washington streets, was attacked at the instance of Gordon A. Ramsay, public administrator. None but Ward knew the contents of the vault. Only one tin box was examined in the search for Ward's will. The public administrator then sealed the vault until 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when a further examination will be made. Meantime two operatives detailed by O'Brien's secret service, 17 North La Salle street, are on guard.

Mr. Morrison occupied a room in the Ward suite while the administrator and his men were at work. He declined to make any comments. A representative from the state inheritance tax office was a spectator.

U. S. NEED NOT RATIFY TO GET ON COMMISSION

Supreme Council's Decision Not Liked by the Senate Leaders.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The supreme council today adopted a resolution that delegates of the great powers may sit on the various commissions created under the German peace treaty and may vote upon questions before these commissions, whether or not their governments have ratified the treaty.

If the United States senate does not object, it is stated to be probable that American delegates will take the places assigned to the United States on such commissions.

Germany is anxious to have the commissions begin their work fully organized, it is declared, and is particularly desirous of American representation on them.

Decision to leave the settlement of the Fiume question to direct negotiations between Italy and Jugo-Slavia has been reached by the peace conference, according to the Excelsior.

Senators Oppose Suggestion.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Associated Press.]—Republican leaders declared emphatically today that the senate would not consent to participation by American reperesentatives in the league of nations or other international commissions until the peace treaty had been ratified by the senate and specific laws enacted later by congress authorizing such representatives and providing for their expenses.

Opposition to premature participation of American representatives, these leaders said, is so pronounced that a new reservation declaring that appointment of American delegates shall await legislation by congress, is under consideration.

Today's reports from Paris regarding the American representatives brought vigorous private criticism from Republican leaders of the senate and this was expected to be renewed later on the senate floor. They declared appointment of American delegates before the senate acted on the treaty would be an affront to the senate and another usurpation of power by the executive branch of the government.

Supported by Administration.

Administration senate leaders, on the other hand, declare the president had full power to appoint American representatives on the commission, though they expressed doubt that he would do so if the senate made formal objection.

Any attempt to put the senate on record as opposing such a step would be certain to fail, they predicted, citing in support of their prediction the defeat of the Fall amendments to the peace treaty proposing elimination of the United States from representation on these commissions.

Sherman Gets Pastors' Advice; Turns Adviser

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Senator Sherman of Illinois told the senate today he had received a petition from 300 Methodist Episcopal clergymen urging him to support the league of nations.

He said he would not submit the petition to the senate.

"I have just advised these gentlemen," he said, "that if they know no more about salvation than they do about the league of nations their congregations are sorely in need of new spiritual guides."

HELD FOR TAKING MAIL POUCH.

Jack Rock and Joe Gardaciak will "never do it again," but that doesn't help them in the eyes of the law. Some days ago they saw George Rock, a special delivery boy, ride up to an apartment on the north side, leave his bicycle and mail pouch in front and disappear to deliver a letter. They took the wheel, but failed in courage and left it later at a package collection box. Both boys were held under $1,000 bonds yesterday by U. S. Commissioner Foote.

BETTER HAD U.S. BEEN NEUTRAL, HITCHCOCK SAYS

Surprises Senate by Argument in Tilt with Poindexter.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Another red hot clash between Senator Hitchcock, the administration leader, and Senator Poindexter of Washington, Republican, marked the contest in the senate today over the peace treaty.

Senator Hitchcock has repeatedly charged that a chief element of the treaty opposition is pro-Germanism. Senator Poindexter, in a carefully prepared speech, undertook to produce additional evidence today to show that if Senator Hitchcock had had his way Germany would have won the war.

He presented extracts from Senator Hitchcock's speeches to prove that the Nebraska senator not merely advocated an embargo on all munitions to the allies, but that he "condoned the German atrocities committed against these allies whom he now says we ought never to desert now that they are victorious."

Still Against War.

Senator Hitchcock, answering Senator Poindexter's charges with considerable heat, surprised his Democratic followers by defending his stand for "peace without victory," and insisted it would have been a wise thing for the United States to have maintained its neutrality.

"I think this form of filibuster is very obnoxious, aside from the personal attack involved," said Senator Hitchcock. "I did introduce an embargo bill, and I affirm now it would have been a wise thing for the United States to have maintained its neutrality, and not to have sold arms and ammunition in enormous quantities, by which this country was practically converted into a base of supplies on one side.

Compromise Was Better.

"I do not believe, and have never believed, that such action on our part would have resulted in a German victory. It probably would have resulted in an earlier appeal, and instead of having the welter and ruin which we behold all over the world now, with 7,000,000 dead men and twice 7,000,000 of cripples, the war would have been brought to an end without any result.

"Ultimately it may be better and probably will be better, I am glad to say now, to have militarism wiped off the face of the earth, as it has been. It may be better, and it probably will be better, that the empires of Russia, Germany, and Austria-Hungary have disappeared, but at that time, if the United States had passed an embargo bill and refused to allow itself to be made the military base of either side, the result would have been the adoption of a peace without victory on either side. The result probably would have been a peace without victory, probably would have been a compromise, and the United States would not have been involved in the war."

Johnson Amendment Next.

The senate struggled through a few more pages of the formal reading of the treaty today and probably will complete this tedious task early next week. This will leave the way clear for the consideration of the Johnson amendment giving the United States as many votes in the league as the British empire. After that, many amendments to be offered by individual senators will have to be considered before the reservations can be taken up.

The hope of leaders now is to dispose of the treaty on armistice day, Nov. 11.

HIS CONSCIENCE PROPELS HIM AS HE DID THE BEER

Gietz Callops to Cloom, Fleeing Phantom of Smuggler Pal.

Shades of John Gilpin! But how George Gietz did hotfoot it. Right out the backdoor of the vulcanizing plant where he worked, at 3201 Fullerton avenue, without a word of explanation to his bewildered fellow employés.

On and on he galloped, finally dashing through the front door of a house at Kimball and Belden avenue, right past the good housewife and out the back door, shouting as he cleared the rear fence at a leap:

"He's after me. He's after me!"

"He's crazy," the housewife telephoned the police of the Shakespeare avenue station and Lieut. Jacob Rieck and Detective Sergeants Charles Schultz and Charles Pilarski hopped in the police flivver to take up the trail. They found Mr. Gietz a few blocks further on and took him back to the plant.

There, sitting quietly by Mr. Gietz's workbench, was Frank Clark of 2102 Racine avenue.

"Why, hello, George," said Mr. Clark with unaffected pleasure. "Just thought I'd drop in to pass the time of day. Where you been?"

"Weren't you chasing me?" queried Mr. Gietz.

"Chasing you? Why in Sam Hill should I be chasing—"

"I thought he wanted to kill me," Gietz explained to the police, and then went on to state that he and Clark had stolen the automobile of Amiel Hoffman, a baker, living at 1830 Bissel street, on Oct. 9.

They had used it since in smuggling beer from Wisconsin to Chicago, he said. He had continued to work as a vulcanizer in the daylight hours, but at night he was a hardy smuggler. Everything had progressed nicely until he and Clark quarreled about the stolen car. Clark tried to sell it, he said.

When he found out about it he spirited the car away. He saw Clark walking toward the shop yesterday and thought he was coming to shoot him, he said. The police say Clark is a paroled convict from Joliet. Clark declines to talk.

Mr. Hoffman's car has resumed its prosaic duties as a bread cart.

NEW LAW TO PUT KICK IN LIQUOR PROSECUTIONS

Chicago's celebration of the wake of John Barleycorn appears likely to come to an end this week.

Officers of the government yesterday served notice that beginning Saturday, Oct. 25, when the war prohibition enforcement act goes into effect automatically, unless it is vetoed by the president, the fighting powers of Uncle Sam will be thrown into clamping down the liquor lid and ending once and for all both the manufacture and sale of anything above one-half of 1 per cent alcoholic content.

"Prohibition enforcement, which has hitherto fallen largely to municipal and state authorities is to be up to Uncle Sam now," said George C. Dunlap, chief field deputy collector of revenue, who will have general charge of the campaign. We will have our forces organized, equipped, and trained to nail the lid down the minute the new law goes into effect. We have the equipment and the experience."

"Among other things, the department expects to wipe out every blind pig and open saloon in the Chicago district," declared T. F. Russell of the revenue department, "and to clean the city of the thousands of home moonshiners."

Fines range from $100 to $1,000 and jail sentences may be imposed. The law has nothing to do with the man who keeps liquor in his home for private use.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The heart balm suit of Clifford M. Hartford against his father-in-law, Harry Sheldon, a steel man, for $1,000,000 damages on the charge of alienating the affections of Hartford's wife, has been settled on payment of $200,000.

DE VALERA MADE A CHIEFTAIN OF THE CHIPPEWAS

Ireland's 'President' Met by Redskins; Speaks to 3,000.

BY A. W. ELLIOTT.

Chippewa Reserve, Wis., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Squatting on the ground in a chilly clearing of a rugged northern Wisconsin forest Eamonn De Valera, "president of the Irish Republic," became "Chief, the Dressing Feather," and a member of the Chippewa tribe today.

The honor was conferred after three hours of dignified aboriginal dancing and speech making in which twenty members of the tribe participated, while nearly 3,000 more looked on from the leaf strewn natural ampitheater. A beaded tobacco pouch, a coral necklace and a pair of moccasins were presented to De Valera, who took a spirited part in the ceremony even to smoking the pipe of peace.

Courtesies Are Exchanged.

A note of sadness and depression marked the exchange of courtesies between Chief Billy Boy and De Valera. Each represented peoples downtrodden, robbed of liberties and lands, they explained, but neither was resigned to the fate offered them.

In a voice shrill as the searching wind Chief Billy Boy offered his protest in his native tongue. Six painted and bedecked tribesmen pounded softly with their tom toms and crooned a dirge in which the audience joined occasionally. It was translated by a college bred Indian.

"Chief Billy Boy greets the chief from over the seas," he said. "He has heard his story from Father Gordon."

Fight for 750 Years.

"We in Ireland have been fighting for 750 years. Now, however, the principle has been proclaimed that those who fought for freedom should get it themselves. I have been made chief. 'Nay, Nay Ong Gabe.' That means 'The dressing feather,' I am told. They have explained that this is the highest honor you could have given, because Chief, The Dressing Feather,' signed the treaty in 1854 which gave you this reservation.

"I hope that I may yet sign the treaty which will give my people their lands and freedom with it."

The ceremony which accompanied the gifts was typical of the race.

"I wish I could find the prettiest blossom of the fairest flower on earth," Joe Kingfisher said. "I would pluck it for you instead of giving these humble presents of our handiwork."

Met by Automobiles.

De Valera left the train at Spooner, Wis., after an all night trip from Milwaukee, where he spoke Friday. A dozen automobiles containing delegations from various cities of the state were waiting and the party started on the two hour trip to the Chippewa reservation, which is in the heart of a country still wild.

Drawing up to the village they were escorted into the quaint catholic church by Father Philip Gordon, [illegible]. A lengthy mass was celebrated for the Indian dead in the war.

Following this, De Valera was guest at a real backwoods dinner, in which venison, duck, and prairie fowl were the main features. The impressive events of the day, the adoption ceremony and the gift making, followed. De Valera then left for Minneapolis and St. Paul.

DE VALERA AGAIN ELECTED.

DUBLIN, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The secret convention of the Sinn Fein held here this week, besides reelecting Eamonn de Valera president of the organization, chose these other officers:

Vice presidents, Arthur Griffith and Father O'Flanagan; honorary secretaries, Austin Stock and Harry Boland, honorary treasurers, Mrs. Wyse Power and E. W. Duggan.

HAVE YOUR MONEY READY FOR TAGGERS FOR THE CHILDREN

"DADDY, give me a dime."

Whether you are a daddy or not, you'll have a chance to answer that plea tomorrow as raised by hundreds of childish voices—Chicago's ever growing family of orphans and unfortunate kiddies. Dozens of taggers, smiling representatives of the Children's Benefit league, will be posted at loop corners to pin an insignia on your lapel and accept your dime or whatever contribution you care to make to the city's worthy little charges.

Practically every juvenile philanthropy in the city—fifty-one children's hospitals, orphanages, nurseries, training schools, dispensaries, missions, and aid societies—will be benefited by the drive for funds. Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal, president of the league, has set $100,000 as the mark at which the taggers will aim.

GETS 30 DAYS FOR NEGLECTING HER CHILDREN

Mrs. Sylvia Miller, 331 North Avers avenue, was sentenced to thirty days in the bridewell yesterday by Judge Sheridan E. Fry for violation of her probation.

She was arraigned before the judge in the Court of Domestic Relations last March on a charge of neglecting her children on complaint of her husband, Milton Miller, an employé of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. Judge Fry at that time put her on probation when she promised that she would treat her four children different. According to Mr. Miller, their 13 year old daughter, Anna May, was doing all the work at the home and looking after the three other children,who are under 10 years old.

Mr. Miller told Judge Fry that his wife was in the habit of leaving the children alone and had stayed away two weeks at one time. He also said that she did not get breakfast for six months.

TWO ACCUSED OF ATTEMPT TO SELL STOLEN CAR

Louis Raphael, 1153 North Clark street, said to be a man of many aliases, a safeblower, and burglary expert, and John O'Brien, same address, were arrested last night by Sergt. Patrick Hamilton and Detectives Kelly and Bettman of the detective bureau automobile department, charged with attempting to sell a stolen automobile.

Raphael and O'Brien yesterday approached a man at Lincoln Park West and Center street and offered to sell a new automobile for $700. The auto squad was notified.

Late last night Detective Kelly joined in the dicker while Hamilton and Bettman remained in hiding. After some conversation, in which Raphael is said to have boasted of his prowess as a gunman, Kelly knocked him down and, with the aid of the other two detectives, sent both to headquarters.

Indicted Man Arrested on Bogus Check Charge

Charles A. Debolt, under indictment on a charge of operating a confidence game in connection with the deposit of a bogus $1,000 check with the Greenebaum Sons' Bank and Trust company, was arrested yesterday near Pekin, Ill., by Detective Sergeant George Wilson of the state's attorney's office. Debolt had a $200 account at the bank and on the strength of this deposited and drew against a check for $1,000 drawn on a Washington, Ill., bank.

Bernice Silver Is 5; What Mother Lost Her?

Bernice Silver, 5 years old, is looking for her mother. Mrs. Dalle Camroe, 2062 West North avenue, found Bernice crying on the street yesterday evening and took her to her home. Bernice said she lived somewhere around Milwaukee and North avenue, but inquiry failed to locate her parents. At a late hour last night no report had been received by the police department for the lost child, and Mrs. Camroe is keeping her until the parents show up.

SATISFACTION

SATISFACTION, among Holmes owners, extends to features of service usually accepted by owners of other cars as necessary inconveniences.

Most important is motor cooling. In water cooled cars boiling is not infrequent in summer; freezing is always present in winter. The Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Motor will not overheat on hot days and there is nothing in it to freeze in winter.

The simple, direct system of air-cooling eliminates nearly 200 parts necessary in water cooling.

In the usual car of equal size, nine to twelve miles to the gallon is the average fuel consumption. Gasoline consumption in the Holmes averages 18-20 miles to the gallon for a properly sized car of 126 inch wheelbase. The aeroplane type dual exhaust valve construction in the motor, eighteen valves all in the head, gives the highest fuel efficiency.

Tire service with many cars averages 6,000 miles to the set. Tire service on the Holmes shows better than 10,000 miles to the set; to a large extent due to the easy riding of a flexible chassis mounted on full elliptic springs.

Country roads slow down the touring speed of nearly all cars. Road comfort with the Holmes is expressed in the daily averages of owners who instinctively set a high mileage for the run. Speeds of from thirty to forty miles an hour are easily possible over roads that other cars must travel at twenty.

Fuel and tire economy in the Holmes are proof that:

High operating costs are no longer necessary in a car of proper size; the Price of Economy is no longer restricted seating capacity and cramped discomfort.

Performance records in the Holmes are proof that roads and weather are no longer masters of a motor car.

GETTING FOOD TO HUNGRY RUSSIA HAS HANDICAPS

Hard to Find Authorities to Assist in Its Transmission.

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.
[Correspondence of The Chicago Tribune.]

REVAL, Esthonia, Sept. 10.—It's ex-hard to find out anything in Reval or along the whole Baltic coast for that matter.

The simple fact of England's state of war with bolsheviki Russia is not being at war, whichever it is. We had heard here that British de-stroyers which use Reval for a base had made a dash past Kronstadt and that four or five big Russian cruisers were sunk. It is decided that England must be at war with the bolsheviks, although we have never heard of a formal declara-tion of war. We decided to ask his britannic majesty's consul at Reval. He would know if anybody did.

So we marched down the hill and en-tered the British consulate. Then we were ushered into the consul's office. We put the question at him point blank. "Is England at war with the bolsheviki?"

"I beg your pardon," said the con-sul. We repeated the question.

"Hum," said the consul. "That's a bloody queer question. What made you think of it?"

We told him about the naval bat-tle.

"Surely Looks Like War.

"Hm, well," said the consul, "that does look like war, my word. Hey, what? Is Great Britain at war with bolsheviks?"

"Most extraordinary," said the con-sul, "most so."

"England must be at war," we in-sisted, "or else the fleet could not soak its nasty mannered bolshies."

"I would seem so," said the consul, musingly.

"On the other hand, the British ships who have brought the four subs to the Russian northwestern coast say they are not permitted to go for bolshies but only instruct the bolshie how to handle the tanks. England is at war with the bolshe-viks, why can not these officers fight the tanks?"

"Ah! There you are," said the Brit-ish consul.

Take America's Case.

"Sure enough there you are. And take America's case. America is feed-ing the northwestern army and giving them clothing, not near enough, but some. That would look as though she were engaged in the fight against bolshevism. But last week a ship arrived in Reval bound for Petrograd with a cargo of sixty motor trucks. The British had apoplexy. What! America sending sixty motor trucks to bolshevism? Help! Murder! Turn out the guard!

"The British navy is blockading Pe-trograd and they said those sixty mo-tor trucks had the same chance of getting through their lines and getting to the bolshie as Kaiser Bill had of being elected lord mayor of London.

"There is no American consul in Re-val, what? Nobody knows, only there was said to every American that came to the rock bound Esthonian coast to take his trouble to Capt. John Miller, head of the American food com-mission in Esthonia.

Going to Paris for Instruction.

Capt. Miller retired Paris and found that the trucks were to be delivered to Reval to the head of the Amer-ican food commission, there to be used in distributing flour and bacon to the starving inhabitants.

Capt. Miller again wired to Paris and said that as regards the American food commissioner in Petrograd, there wasn't any such animal. The bolshies had long ago hilariously kicked out all food commissions, Red Crosses, and things of a similar nature. Paris thought for a while and then said all right, those motor trucks had to go to Russians, and since the bolshe-vik Russians would have them, then to turn them over to the anti-bolshevik Russians. Capt. Miller was accordingly empowered to turn the sixty motor trucks over to the minister of food of Northwestern Russia.

The Plot Thickens.

Capt. Miller communicated with the Russians and Gen. Judenitch, chief of the Northwestern army, gave a great shout of joy and said he would take the trucks—they were just what he wanted to mount machine guns on.

But Capt. Miller said nay. The trucks were from the Hoover food com-mission and intended to carry food to starving civilians and not to chase bolshies, however much he personally approved of the idea of chasing bol-shies. Those trucks must go to the minister of food of Northwestern Rus-sia.

"But we have no minister of food," wailed the Russians.

"Make one," demanded Capt. Miller.

In fifteen minutes word was brought to Capt. Miller that the minister of food had been unanimously elected. The captain turned over the trucks.

In half an hour Capt. Miller saw two of the trucks ploughing gayly through the sand toward the Russian front. Each truck contained two bar-rels of flour and two machine guns.

"Somebody has been talking to that minister of food," soliloquized Capt. Miller. "Anyhow, he's holding his own."

HARRY E. HAYDON, PIONEER, POET, LAWYER, IS DEAD

Harry Ellsworth Haydon, a Chica-goan of the '50s, died last night at the King Home for Men, 360 East Garfield boulevard. He is survived by two sons in California and a daughter, Mrs. George Huth of Chicago.

BADGERS TRIUMPH OVER PURPLE

ILLINOIS BEATS HAWKEYES, USING ONSIDE KICK, 9-7

Resurrected Play Causes Surprise as Iowans Gaze at Runner.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Resurrection of the onside kick, one of the most dangerous plays in football, gave Illinois a victory over Iowa today on Illinois field, 9 to 7, in one of the closest and hardest fought contests ever played on the historic gridiron.

The play which apparently has been discarded by most coaches, was called into action in the second period after Iowa had scored a touchdown in the first quarter. The ball at the time was on the Hawkeye's forty-five yard line. Mohr had been instructed to kick high. On a set signal, Walquist, the Illini fullback, started for his goal. At the same instant Mohr signaled for the play.

How Play Was Executed.

As the kicker stepped forward and kicked backward the Illinois back who was behind the oval when it was kicked. Quarterback Kelley of Iowa expected the ball to strike the ground and Walquist picked it up as it was rolling and ran over the goal line. The Hawkeyes made no efforts to stop him because they thought he was an Illini player and that the ball would go to Iowa at the point where it was picked by Illinois.

The play was executed perfectly and even the Iowa player had no protest to offer after it had been explained. It simply was sprung when least expected and is like a number of other formations of the old style game, which the coaches would do well to bring back into play. The puntout after the touchdown was missed and Illinois deprived of an opportunity to kick goal.

Iowa First to Score.

Iowa scored in the opening period. The Hawkeyes rushed the ball to Illinois fifteen yard line and then Belding caught a neat forward pass from Capt. Johnson back of the goal line for a touchdown. A. Devine kicked goal.

Between halves there was a deal of discussion as to the outcome. Both teams played the best football they knew in the opening session, and a great fight developed in the second half. Illinois started with a rush and several times had the oval within striking distance. Near the close of the game Ralph Fletcher drove the ball between the posts from the twenty-five yard line for the points which meant victory for Illinois.

Hawkeyes' Line Strong.

With the tide of battle turned against them the Hawkeyes fought with an indomitable spirit. Time after time they stopped Illinois in the shadows of their goal posts, and when they took the ball on downs made heroic efforts to gain ground.

Iowa's line outplayed the Illinois forwards while Belding was a stone wall for Iowa on his end. Slater, the giant guard tackle, was strong throughout. He broke up Illinois' plays time after time and frequently followed around behind the line and caught the runners from behind. Iowa's offense worked like smoother and had more power.

Although the victor, Illinois is not a finished team. Its line must be strengthened before other conference teams are met, while there must be a more concentrated attack.

Passing Below Standard.

The punting on both teams was not up to Big Ten standard, but the kicks were handled clean and sure with the exception of the time Kelley allowed Mohr's punt to strike the ground. It was an ideal day for football, especially for the spectators.

The day was clear and bright, with no wind, and a crowd of 8,000 saw one of the feature contests of the day in western football. Lineup:

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

HELPING PAPA.
(PUTTING ON THE LEGS OF THE COOK STOVE)

VICTORY BY 14-9 FOR NOTRE DAME OVER NEBRASKA

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 18.—Successful use of the forward pass and the speed of Bergman, Notre Dame's right half back, enabled Notre Dame university football team to score a 14 to 9 triumph over the University of Nebraska today.

On straight football Nebraska pounded the Notre Dame line hard. Immediately after Nebraska kicked off at the start Gipp, Notre Dame's left half back, who caught the kickoff, tossed the ball to Bergman, who raced from the Notre Dame ten yard line for a touchdown.

Trick Plays Bring Score.

A feint by Gipp that he was going to carry the ball sent the Cornhusker tacklers to one side of the field, enabling Bergman to run safely down the other. Bahan, Notre Dame's captain, kicked goal.

In the third period Gipp shot a forward pass to Bergman, who ran from the Notre Dame forty-six yard line to Nebraska's ten yard line. A moment later Miller of the visitors slid off tackle for four yards. On a double pass, Gipp to Bergman, the latter made five more yards, carrying the ball to Nebraska's one yard line. Bahan squirmed through on the next play for a touchdown. Bahan kicked goal.

Wright Counts for Huskers.

Nebraska's lone touchdown came in the second period, when the Cornhuskers tore through the Notre Dame defense, Wright scoring. In the last period Nebraska added three more points to its total score when Capt. Dobson sent a pretty forty yard drop kick over the goal. Lineup:

GUS THE BUS ON ANARCHY.

"THEM fawraners," said Gus the Bus to Evelyn the Exquisite checker, "What they are frying up plots to destruct law and short orders. The soljers should to serve them a little Americanism on the end from a bayonets.

"Them birds is run out from one country and they want right away to run another one. Instead from being swelled with thanks what this fine land is giving them wages like a baron couldn't get in the old country, homes like they never even seen over there, schools for nothing and telephones where you could get your number in less than a hour and a half sometimes, they are squawking in their outlandish langwidges and framing up to bust a bomb under the goose what lays the steel eggs.

"It makes me so mad, me what fought and nearly bled for this lovelish red white and blue ripuplick, that I could shoot a few from them at sunrise if that wasn't too early to get up for a guy.

"How could men be like that way? It aint honest, it aint decent, it aint polite. When you're in another feller's house you behave yourself or if you don't want to you beat it. But where do them loafers get that pippy cock idea that somebody asks them to show us the light? And it should be yet a red light.

"And especial now when the President is sick and Gompers is illish and Colonel House is got a breakdown, too, it's kicking a nation when it's down, and even a anarcheist shouldn't do this. No anarchist what he's got a drop from sporting blood would grab a time such to pull rough stuff. The three principal branches from the government plant is out of service—the executive manager, the foreman and the traveling salesman.

"So I tell you them inskys better get good, because in a time like this a party is got to be either inside the law or awful clever, and them bone heads isn't neither. So it looks by me they wouldn't get away with it and that always is it a big argument against a guy should try what he don't have some business to.

"Ain't you think so, Missus Effelyn?"

"Well," said the Exquisite. "I'll tell you Gussie, I aint for violence nor bloodshed if it can be sidestepped, but all I got to say is that insect powder and rat poison wouldn't of been invented or never attained its present popularity if it wasn't natural to use such as them."

SYRACUSE TEAM SPRINGS UPSET; BEATS PITT, 24-3

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Football "dope" was given an upset today when Syracuse university outclassed Pittsburgh and won, 24 to 3. The ball was in Pittsburgh's territory virtually all of the time. Ackley was the star, scoring eighteen of Syracuse's points and sharing with Erwig the honor of gaining most ground.

Ackley sent Syracuse away in the lead by scoring a field goal in the first two minutes of play. Eight minutes later Erwig made a forty-five yard run, bringing the ball to Pittsburgh's fifteen yard line. Two downs brought it to the one yard line, and then Askley went over for the touchdown. He kicked the goal.

Ackley went over for a touchdown again in the second period, in the final minute of which Hastings kicked a field goal for Pittsburgh, making the score 17 to 3.

Neither team scored in the third period, but Martin carried over a third Syracuse touchdown in the fourth and again Ackley kicked the goal. Lineup:

BOSTON UPSETS MEN OF YALE, 5-3, BY A FIELD GOAL

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—It was learned tonight that Thorne Murphy, who was injured in today's game with Boston college, broke his leg above the knee and probably will be unable to play again this season. He fell heavily in a scrimmage and two Boston players fell across his leg, breaking it. He is a son of the late Mike Murphy, the former Yale and Penn trainer, and is Yale's best drop kicker.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18.—The Yale football team today went down to defeat, 5 to 3, to Boston college, which two weeks ago was defeated, 17 to 0, by Harvard.

The game was marked by numerous penalties and frequent interruptions, due to injuries to players. The margin of victory for Frank Cavanaugh's eleven was by a safety made in the second period. The Elis took the lead in the third period by scoring a field goal, but a like score for Boston in the final quarter was enough to win, as neither team had been able to push over a touchdown.

Fitzpatrick Plays Star Game.

Fitzpatrick played a brilliant punting game for Boston, booting the ball several times for sixty yards. Corrigan starred as a ground gainer for the Hub eleven, while Heaphy at center played a spectacular defensive game.

Thorne Murphy, substituting for La Roche, kicked Yale's field goal, a drop kick from the forty yard line. Fitzpatrick booted a drop kick for forty-five yards in the final period, putting Boston into the lead.

Yale Men Out for Slugging.

Dicens, Yale's left tackle, was removed from the game for slugging. Yale being penalized fifty yards. Yale made only three first downs, while Cavanaugh's men had the same number to their credit. Lineup:

MAROON PASSES DEFEAT PURDUE IN 16-0 COMBAT

Hoosier Visitors Battle Fiercely After Staggs Get Early Margin.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

The University of Chicago football team established itself as a Big Ten conference title contender by defeating Purdue, 16 to 0, in the opening conference game on Stagg field yesterday. A field goal in the opening quarter gave the Maroons a working margin, and skillful use of the forward pass brought touchdowns in the second and fourth periods.

Coach Butch Scanlon, former Chicago guard, made no advance guess except that his team would give Chicago a fight, and a real fight it did give the Maroons. The Boilermakers tackled viciously at every stage of the well fought battle, and the Maroons had to smash hard to make any headway against the driving engineer line.

Purdue Opens Its Attack.

After battling through three quarters against losing odds, Scanlon's crew flung all precaution to the side lines and started out to sling forward passes on every play. They completed enough to give the Maroons a scare. A well executed drive down the field, with forward heavies figuring in every play, carried the ball to the five yard line in the closing minutes, but the Maroons rose when the crisis became acute and blocked the final attempts.

There were two men who stood out. Capt. Kenneth Huffine put up a magnificent battle for Purdue. He backed up the line in superb fashion, tearing into the charging Maroon backs as they hit the rush line and sending them all over the scenery. He tossed the forward passes with precision and gained more ground in straight thrusts into Stagg's line than all the rest of his cohorts combined.

Capt. Higgins Maroon Ace.

Capt. Charles Higgins of the Maroons put up one of his characteristic defensive exhibitions, in which he was brutal to the Purdue attack. He smeared every play that he could get his hands on—and Charlie has a rugged paw and a strong arm.

Percy Graham, red topped Maroon quarter back, was the offensive star in the first half. A field goal and a touchdown were his contribution. After the Maroons had run up a nine point lead, Coach Stagg tried out some of his back field platoon, with instructions to do nothing but smash away at the Purdue guards and tackles.

First Count by Air Route.

Early in the initial period Halladay of the Maroons fell on a fumble in midfield. Shortly afterward he dragged down a long forward pass from Graham and the Maroons were in scoring distance, but Graham's drop kick went wild. The Maroons rushed right back to the thirty-yard line, and this time the star pole vaulter kicked one squarely between the goal posts. Annan peeled off a twenty-five yard dash, but there was no more scoring.

The Maroons had a great chance in the second period, but fizzled. A long pass, Graham to Halladay, put the ball on the five yard line after the Purdue line checked three straight smashes, the same forward pass play was attempted. Halladay got loose behind the goal line, but Graham threw the oval over his head.

Graham Scores on Long Run.

Again the Maroons came back and Graham set for another pass. The Boilermaker linemen charged before he could pick out a teammate to toss to, but Red, who just a year ago was shooting at Hun flyers in the clouds above Italian Alps, was not flustered. Calmly tucking the ball under his arm, he ran through nearly the whole Purdue team, swaying on his educated hips, feinting half a dozen times. He wound up thirty yards away across the goal line for a touchdown. Higgins missed an easy kick for the point.

The third quarter was an uneventful punting duel between Graham and Cole of Chicago and Huffine and Smith of Chicago, but in the final period Halladay dragged down his third long pass and ran to the five yard line. It took four plays to score, but the Maroons finally pushed Hutchinson over.

Wounded Soldiers See Game.

Three hundred wounded soldiers from Fort Sheridan had a section to themselves and the crowd filled the entire west concrete stand. One thousand rooters from Lafayette were noisy across the field. Lineup:

YOST'S ELEVEN BEATS MICHIGAN 'AGS,' 26-0, IN SCRAPPY COMBAT

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Michigan, 2; M. A. C., 0. That was the final score on Ferry field this afternoon, in a game that was a fight from start to finish. A combination of circumstances kept M. A. C. from a chance to prove its strength in the score. It was a bitterly fought game, in which Michigan never weakened, and M. A. C. weakened only in the last of the third quarter.

It took Michigan five minutes to make its first down, and seventeen minutes to make its first touchdown. Cliff Sparks was Michigan's stellar attraction, making gains through and around M. A. C.'s line. It was Weston who made two of the Wolverine's four touchdowns. Czysz made one on a recovered fumble by Hammes, and a forward pass from Sparks to Dunne completed the four.

Makes Ground on Passes.

Michigan worked the forward pass throughout the game, making good gains through the trick twice and one touchdown. M. A. C. started working it in the last quarter, but though with better success than Michigan, it failed to count anything in the final score.

Hammes was the star for M. A. C., doing all the kicking and making the visitors' greatest gains. The nearest M. A. C. came to scoring was in the last quarter, when it got the ball on the fifteen yard line, but lost it through a failure on a forward pass.

Honor Dead Soldiers.

A flagpole with the American flag and the Michigan pennant was dedicated just before the ball game in honor of Michigan's soldier dead.

Penn Beats Swarthmore; Interference Is Deadly

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18.—The University of Pennsylvania football team defeated Swarthmore today, 55 to 7. Swarthmore was first to score, but once the Pennsylvania smothering attack was started it proved irresistible. The offense was spectacular, the interference being off quickly and affording excellent protection to the runners.

POOR HEADWORK CAUSES DEFEAT, BACHMAN SAYS

Forward Pass and a Goal Give Wisconsin Team 10 to 0 Victory.

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

Northwestern, the "dark horse of the conference," surprised and also disappointed the Purple rooters at Northwestern field yesterday, when Wisconsin battled it all over the pasture and harnessed it by sterling playing. The final reckoning was 10 to 6.

Heaven made weather, 15,000 fans, the largest crowd ever assembled in Evanston, and enough noise to be heard in Shootdabunk, Me., were the stage props which attended the combat. Rabid rooters swarmed the regular stands, filled the improvised tiers at each end of the arena, and lined yards deep around the field. About 2,500 cars were parked within four blocks.

Reeves on the Side Lines.

The purple haze that hung over Evanston last night was caused by the universal belief that Northwestern could have won if it had acted on its orders. The declaration by the faculty yesterday morning that Sam Reeves, Bachman's big hope, could not play at tackle because of some condition exams which he has still to pass; the benching of Capt. Bob Koehler at the end of the first quarter after he had twisted the ankle that was sprained in last game; and the deposition of Miller when he sprung a charlie horse in the third act—these were not the cause of the Purple's downfall, because they could have won despite these handicaps.

Northwestern lost, it was understood on the campus last night, because the trio of quarter backs had not followed orders and because of general dearth of brain work. Coach Bachman summed up the errors as follows: "Ragged team play, too many fumbles, and poor generalship."

Fall in Real Test.

The Evanstonians had been perfectly groomed all week, all of their faults of last week had been eradicated, each man had been carefully directed in his every move, but they failed in the acid test.

The defenses of both squads were good—it was on Northwestern's offensive faults that it lost. Davey, the omnipresent Badger quarter, who rested up while retiring in favor of Mungavin for a while, gave a splendid exhibition of team control. His passes were always aimed correctly and generally got by.

Badgers Break Up Passes.

Meyers, Jacobi, and Sundt did blue ribbon work for the Madisonians. Their breaking up of passes, line charging, and end runs won much ground for their side. The game was full of high punts, exchanges of the ball in midfield, and canceling of forward passes, indicating strong defense on the part of both elevens.

As in the De Pauw game, the Purple got better toward the end, scoring its only touchdown by Buzz Gibson in the last period. Left End Weston went over the line in the first quarter for the Badgers' goal, Davey kicked goal, and in the second inning pulled a swell drop kick between the goal posts, which brought the score up to ten.

First Period.

Davey kicked off to Koehler, who sprinted to his thirty-five yard line, but fumbled. Carpenter downed the ball. A neat forward pass from Davey to Meyers brought the Badgers to the rivals' twenty yard line. Gog Ellingwood got hold of another pass on the fourth down. Knight muffed a pass. Cigrand lost the oval and Weston captured it on the three yard line.

Northwestern here held splendidly, and eventually got the ball on downs. Gog punted messily to Davey, who was stopped on N. W.'s fifteen yard mark. On the third down Davey passed the ball over the goal to Weston and the former kicked goal.

Koehler's Ankle Injured.

Davey kicked off to Cigrand, who attained his forty yard mark. By good Badger tackling the Purple lost on downs. Northwestern recovered the ball after Jacobi and Elliott had penetrated the guards and the Cardinals missed a pass on the last down.

The Evanstonians, after futilely hitting the line, lost again on a punk pass. Davey punted to Cig, who got ten yards, Gould deposed Elliott, and later Gog punted to Jacobi who reached the Purple thirty yards. Chester Bernard replaced Daley. Koehler twisted his already sore ankle and left in favor of Peyton. Score: Wisconsin, 7; Northwestern, 0.

Fall in Real Test.

Davey drop kicked back of the twenty-two yard line and lofted between the posts for a field goal. Score: Wisconsin, 10; Northwestern, 0.

L. Bernard returned the Badger kickoff to the forty yard zone and a punters' exchange left the ball in midfield. Then Sam Peyton tore through twice, but the Purple lost the oval on a punk pass. The Badgers advanced to Northwestern's twenty-five yard line, where the ball changed owners on a pass. Ellingwood's heave to Turner was recovered by Wisconsin on a fumble.

Bernard flopped on Jacobi's muffed pass on the Cardinal's thirty yard line. Northwestern was shoved back twenty yards and punted to behind the rivals' goal. The Badgers pushed up ten yards and punted to the other's forty yard mark. Evans went in for Weston. The half ended: Wisconsin, 10; Northwestern, 9.

Third Period.

Ellingwood kicked to Sundt, who returned to his twenty yard line. Jacobi booted to Gibson, who made his forty yard line. Northwestern's backfield failed on three tries and Gog punted to Jacobi. The Purple line duplicated the others' strong holding and Davey was forced to punt to Northwestern. Ellingwood's next punt went to the Cardinals on their forty yard line.

Gould nabbed Jacobi's throw and traveled eight yards. Cigrand intercepted the last of three Wisconsin passes. Gibson sprinted twenty yards around the Badger left wing to midfield. Welderquist replaced Miller, who sprung a Charlie horse. The teams exchanged punts. The Badgers were penalized fifteen yards, and Davey booted out of danger. Lane was substituted for Cigrand, and Richards put in Mungavin for Davey. Peyton took the ball from his eighteen yard marker for two five yard rides, and Gog got two more yards. Score: Still the same.

Fourth Period.

Peyton made the downs. Lester Bernard took a brilliant toss from Lane for twenty-five yards. Another pass, Gibson to Ellingwood, brought the ball to the three yard line. Gibson went across for the Purple's lone score, and Buddy Lane failed on the kick.

Lane took the kick back to Purple's thirty-eight yard line. Gould nabbed Gibson's pass and tore to Northwestern's twenty-five yard whitewash. Collins went in for Smith. Peyton grabbed Mungavin's pass and was tackled on his twenty yard line. Gordon Knight deposed Gibson at quarter. A pass failed and the Purple punted. The Badgers brought the ball to the forty yard line, and, by dint of strong line charges and a five yard Purple penalty, crept up thirty-five yards.

Davey Back at Quarter.

Davey returned to his job at quarter, replacing Mungavin, and failed on a drop kick on the twenty-five yard line of scrimmage.

Chester Bernard took Ellingwood's pass and romped for fifteen yards. The Badgers squelched Peyton's and Gog's attempts to gain, and two passes, Lane to Gog, failed. Sundt nabbed Northwestern's third try at a pass. Wisconsin, failing to gain on downs, punted to the middle of the field. Final score: Wisconsin, 10; Northwestern, 9.

Y. M. C. A. COLLEGE WINS 19-0 GAME

Chicago Y. M. C. A. college hit the Lake Forest university line hard enough to score a victory of 19 to 0 at Washington park yesterday. Stauffer broke through the line and scored from twenty-five yards in the first period. In the third quarter Hess duplicated this feat. Hess plunged over from seven yards in the final quarter.

In the last minute Lake Forest endangered the "Y" college goal when Eddy received a long pass, but fumbled when tackled. Van Sickle of Lake Forest was knocked out. The losers were crippled by the absence of seven players with injuries. Lineup:

The visitors had the better of the cadets both in weight and experience, and their superiority was noticeable from the outset, despite the pluckiest efforts of the Morgan Parkers.

Score Near Finish Gives East Aurora 7-6 Victory

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Smashing over a touchdown in the final quarter East Aurora High school defeated Rockford High, 7 to 6, in a bitterly fought game today. Rockford's goal came in the third quarter, when Enright, right end, fell across the line with a forward pass. Watson, who substituted for Williams at fullback, scored for East Aurora. Milton kicking the goal that won the battle.

DEERFIELD WINS FROM NEW TRIER IN 14 TO 0 GAME

Stewart and Jackson Give Kenilworth Team Its Victory.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Deerfield proved its right to distinction as the dark horse of the Suburban High School conference by taking New Trier into camp in a spirited game on the latter's gridiron, 14 to 0. Stewart and Jackson proved too fast for the Kenilworth team's defense, their fleet work and quickness at seizing openings proving the winning factor in a nip and tuck battle. Richards was New Trier's best man, and he led an advance in the first half which had Deerfield fighting in the shadow of the goal to hold.

In the second period a cross buck through the line gave Stewart a temporary gap, and the youngster sped through for a thirty yard run to a touchdown. Again, in the fourth period, Stewart got loose on an off tackle play and skirted around the field twenty-four yards for a score. Poor handling of punts was costly for New Trier, which seemed in the main content with a defensive game. Lineup:

EVANSTON, 27; PROVISO, 0.

Evanston opened the Suburban league schedule with a decisive victory over Proviso heavyweights, 27 to 0, on Northwestern field in the morning, which football tactics proved more successful than Proviso's open play. Flood and Johnson were individual factors which brought success in the home boys' line buckling.

After Johnson hit Kirk in the first score in the opening period, Proviso held until the third quarter, but a shift play fooled the team and Gaylee advanced thirty yards, after which Johnson hit off tackle twice, making the second score. The same player bumped the weakening Maywood line for another counter soon after, and Evanston opened up on passes in the fourth period. Flood going over. Lineup:

OAK PARK TEAMS DIVIDE.

Oak Park's teams split even on the home field. The heavyweights walloped Hammond, 61 to 0, but the lightweights were nosed out by the hard fighting Bowen team of the city league, 7 to 6. Hammond played sloppy football, making the task of the Steger-Carruse-Savage scoring partnership an easy one. Bowen's line stopped the Oak Park shift plays in the midget encounter, and fumbles in Bowen territory were expensive. Vandenburg started a long pass from Peiten and raced forty-five yards for Bowen's touchdown, Moline making the goal kick which won the day. Lineups:

Chicago League

BY PREP.

TWO teams, Englewood and Hyde Park, which have made the heavyweight race in the Chicago High School league a dual affair for years, remain as the only unbeaten outfits in the circuit after yesterday's games. Englewood 1918 league champs romped over Crane, 53 to 7, in a game marred by frequent fumbles, altercations, and injuries to Crane players, at White City. Lally of Crane was carried off in the third quarter with a broken collar bone.

Crane was helpless after ten minutes of play, and at the close Englewood's backs made long gains through the line and around the ends at will. Many long runs featured, Bryson's seventy yard dash being the day's record. He ran a Crane kickoff through the field to the goal in the third quarter. Crane's lone score came in the same quarter, when Pokrass blocked Folz's punt and dropped on it for a touchdown.

Parker and Crane lightweights fought a 0 to 0 tie game as a curtain raiser. The teams seemed on a par and forced exchanges of punts were frequent. Lineups:

Smart Coats For Outdoor Wear

You'll want a leather coat this fall—they are the newest thing for outdoor wear. Their warmth, style and serviceability were proved during the war; aviators found them warm and snug at the highest altitudes, while on the ground their smart trimness conformed to military demand.

For any of the winter sports, for motoring, walking, riding, or street wear as well, the Klingmade leather coat is the appropriate outer garment. The best leather and leatherette are used in making Klingmade coats. Even after several seasons of hard wear they will never crack or peel—they retain their original softness and pliability as long as the coat is worn.

The smart touches of style so apparent in the Klingmade leather coats lend a swagger "out-of-doors look." Some are reversible, so that the coat can be worn on either side.

Leather and leatherette coats, sweaters, mackinaws, "Air-in" raincoats, and other Klingmade garments of the same high quality are being sold by nearly all of the better dealers.

GOPHERS' SMASH AT HOOSIER LINE WINS 20-6 GAME

Losers Score by Kicking, Then Northmen Plunge to Victory.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Outweighed nearly twenty pounds to the man Indiana lost to Minnesota, 20 to 6, before a crowd of 10,000 at Washington park today.

Indiana scored all points in first quarter when Quarterback Mathys booted two beautiful field goals, one from the thirty-five yard line and the other from twelve yard line.

Minnesota beat the Hoosier team on straight football, plugging the line for consistent gains after the second period began. Indiana's six points were made in twelve minutes after the game started. Stiehm's men played with pep and dash and gained by the forward pass and end runs, putting the ball close enough for Mathys to use his toe.

Crimson Line Weak.

The Northmen tried the pass time and again and failed to execute a single one successfully. As soon as they found the crimson line was weak all their attacks were directed there. Although Dr. Williams' protégés made all their points through the line, the Indiana forward wall did stiffen several times and hold the visitors for downs. Ruben Phillips and Lampl were the big ground gainers for the Minnesota crew.

Indiana pulled three passes that worked for gains of fifteen and twenty yards and only one was intercepted. Indiana could not penetrate the heavy Gopher line and made practically all its gains by the aerial route and end runs.

Capt. Minton Injured.

Capt. Minton of the Bloomington eleven was carried off field in the final quarter after receiving an injury. The day was ideal for football and attracted scores of Indiana alumni from all parts of the state. The Indiana team was accompanied here by two trainloads of royal rooters, who paraded the downtown streets upon their arrival, headed by their band of seventy-five pieces. Lineup:

C. A. A. Makes Strong Bid for National A. A. U. Games

When the annual convention of the National A. A. U. is held in Boston on Nov. 16 and 17, the Chicago Athletic association, through John L. Barchard, chairman of the athletic committee, will bid for the national indoor senior track and field championships.

When the Cherry Circle team went east to compete in the national outdoor games at Philadelphia, Physical Director Martin Delaney talked with members of the championship committee, who seemed willing the indoor championships should come west next year. Instructor Delaney followed up the opening by talking over the games with Fred W. Rubien, secretary of the National A. A. U., when the local club's director was in New York City.

Officials Favor Local Club.

According to Delaney, the majority of officials of the national body are in favor of the games being awarded to the local club, which intends to spare no expense to make them the greatest contests ever held indoors in Chicago.

If these games are secured, three big meets will be held in Chicago and Evanston this winter. The Central A. A. U. indoor championships may go to the Great Lakes, but if the nationals are decided at the Coliseum, a date will be set a few days after for the central so that the same track can be used. In addition to these big meets, the annual indoor games of the Western Intercollegiate Conference Athletic association will be decided in Patten gymnasium. It is the intention of Instructor Delaney to hold the games in the Coliseum.

Plan Biggest Carnival.

"I am hopeful of securing the games," Chairman Barchard said. "We have the best athletes in the country in the central west. If the club is awarded these events, we will start at once to make plans which we hope will enable us to stage the greatest athletic carnival ever held in Chicago."

VICTORY IN POLO TO LAKE FOREST IN LAST SECOND

Goal by Earl Reynolds Just Before Bell Beats Dayton.

BY JOE DAVIS.

The score was tied at 5¾ and the timekeeper was getting ready to clang the knell of the polo season at the Onwentsia club when from out of a small scrimmage Earle Reynolds sent the ball just over the goal line, giving Onwentsia a victory over the Miami team of Dayton, 6¾ to 5¾.

It was an equally close finish in point of distance, as Reynolds' shot, which must have been half topped or had some back spin on it, crossed the goal equator only a few inches.

Armour Shot Deflected.

The final period started with Onwentsia leading, 5¾ to 4¾, and the opposing fours were keyed up for a whirlwind finish. For a brief period play was confined to midfield and then Onwentsia invaded. They bore down on goal and Armour apparently had an easy opening, but his shot hit his pony in a leg and was deflected outside the post.

Then Dayton took up the running and forced a genuine scrimmage in front of the home goal. The riders and horses were bunched, and after the ball had been bobbled around several times, H. Talbott rolled it through the posts for the tying goal.

Looks Like Tie Score.

For most of the remaining three minutes it looked as if the score would remain tied, but as the fleeting seconds sped by the Onwentsia men, in a last desperate effort, scored the goal which gave them their second victory over the Daytonians in two weeks.

Conditions yesterday were better than on the preceding week, the wind being from the south and the field faster. The presence of H. Talbott on the visiting team enabled the sides to start on even terms.

Home Team Off in Front.

Onwentsia played finely in the first two periods and outclsased the visitors. Capt. Coonley counted in the first period and early in the the second a fine run in which all the men assisted enabled Coonley to score again. Armour added two more goals, and at the end of the second period Onwentsia led, 3¾ to minus Q. Reynolds and Darst each making a safety.

Coonley added another goal in the third period, taking the ball half way up the field. After this the Onwentsia men lost much of their combination, Talbott scored the first goal for Dayton near the finish of the period.

Big Lead at Intermission.

Neither side scored in the first period, Dayton missing several long shots. Ontwensia did not have a shot. At half time Onwentsia led, 4¾ to 5¾.

Coonley scored soon after restarting, but Dayton began to force pace and goals by Gardner and Talbott, left the score 5¾ to 2¾ at the end of the fifth period.

Darst and Talbott counted in the sixth period. Onwentsia took the ball into their opponents' goal mouth in the seventh period, but Talbott cleared and neither side scored. Lineup:

Dayton [5¾].		Onwentsia [6¾].
Gardner	1	Armour
Darst	2	Cooney
Mead	3	Reynolds
H. Talbott	4	Seavers

Goals—Coonley [4], Armour [2], Reynolds, Talbott [4], Gardner, Darst.

West Point scored on a forward pass, Clark to Stout, from the ten yard mark in the second quarter, after the ball had been carried to that point by a good offensive drive in which the play of Clark and Evans featured.

STRONG DEFENSE BY BROWN HOLDS HARVARD, 7 TO 0

Crimson Eleven Fails to Score Again After Six Chances.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 18.—Harvard defeated Brown 7 to 0, today, being held to a single touchdown and goal principally through the sturdy defense of the visitors under the shadow of their own goal posts.

Ralph Horween of Chicago, Harvard fullback, dislocated his right shoulder. He will be out of the game for a week, but is expected to be right for the Princeton match on Nov. 8.

After a Crimson march of seventy-five yards across the Brown goal line in the first five minutes of play, Harvard was six times within the visitors' twenty-five yard line. Three attempts at field goals went astray.

Browns' Passes Threaten.

Brown was not dangerous except for a few minutes in the third period, when open play, including a well executed forward pass, brought the visitors to Harvard's twenty-three yard line. Harvard stook like a wall and a try at a field goal hit the goal post.

Harvard rushed seventy times for a total net gain of 155 yards; kicked six times for 247 yards, scored sixteen first downs and suffered four penalties for a distance of thirty yards. The team made two fumbles, but kept the ball.

Divers Gain Fifty-two Yards.

Brown rushed thirty-two times for a total net gain of fifty-two yards; kicked nine times for 286 yards; scored five first downs and lost thirty yards on four penalties, while the team made five fumbles, only one of which was regained. Lineup and summary:

WHITE STOCKINGS AND CINCY RENEW FEUD FROM 1870

Here's How Chicago Nine Won World Title from Reds 49 Years Ago.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

Following the "big show" Chicago baseball fans are indulging in reminiscences of the last championship series between the Red Stockings of Cincinnati and the White Stockings of this city, staged forty-nine years ago. Three games were to be played and the team that copped two was to be the "champ." The White Stockings took two in a row, the first at Cincinnati and the next at Dexter park.

Up to this defeat the Red Stockings were the world's champions. The club had gone through the season of 1869, playing fifty-seven games and winning all but one. The one they didn't win was a tie. During the season they met every baseball team of note from Boston to San Francisco. Their record for that year stands without a parallel in baseball annals.

First Professional Club.

The Red Stockings were the first nine to declare themselves a professional organization. As such it made the first tour of a professional club. This was fifty years ago.

The Chicago Baseball club was organized in 1869 as a professional nine, but did not make its debut until the following spring. The first game, played April 9, 1870, at Dexter park against a picked amateur nine, previous to starting the summer tour, resulted in the defeat of the amateurs. The professional team appeared in white stockings and the sport writers called them by that name for the first time.

There were no leagues at that period, but the Red Stockings, on account of their remarkable record made the previous year, were the recognized champions. That fall the White Stockings challenged the Red Stockings to a three game series.

Greeted by Fourth of City.

After winning the first game at Cincinnati, in the latter part of September, the White Stockings, upon their arrival home, were given an ovation. One hundred thousand persons, or about one-fourth of the city's population, met Capt. Jimmy Wood and his heroes upon their triumphant return. The ovation ended with a banquet at the Briggs house.

The second of the series was played Oct. 13, at Dexter park. Bob Ferguson, captain of the famous Brooklyn Atlantics, came here to umpire.

At the beginning of the eighth inning the score was 11 to 3 in favor of the Red Stockings. It looked like a million to one shot that "Cincy" would win. Then Chicago put five runs over the plate in this round, making the score 11 to 7. The Red Stockings failed to score.

Nine Runs in Ninth.

Then came the ninth! Chicago smashed out nine runs, making the score 16 to 11 in their favor. In their half the Red Stockings went in determined to overcome the lead, but were able to send only two men all the way round. Thus ended the world's championship contest of 1870 between teams representing the same cities that have battled again for the title. Strangely coincident are the names of the two clubs.

The first baseball club in Chicago of which there is any record was the Unions, organized in 1856. Games of ball were played long before this by schoolboys, but there was no regularly organized club until the Unions, a west side aggregation of prairie players, challenged "any and all comers for money, chalk, or marbles."

Early Baseball Results.

From various sources the following list of early day matches is compiled:

1858.

July 7—The Unions were defeated by Downer's Grove at Harrison and Halsted streets. Sept. 18—Excelsiors defeated Unions at Prairie club cricket grounds, near the "Bull's Head." The Bull's Head tavern was at Madison street and Ogden avenue.

1859.

The Atlantics and Columbia clubs were organized. June 11—Excelsiors defeated Atlantics at Washington and Sheldon streets. Aug. 18—Atlantics won the city championship, defeating Excelsiors two out of three.

1860.

June 9—Niagaras defeated the Athletic Juniors. Aug. 26—Atlantics won the city championship by defeating Excelsiors.

During 1861 and 1862 there were no games on account of the civil war.

Aug. 23—The city championship was won by Garden Citys, who defeated Osceolas two out of three.

There is no record of games being played in 1864.

1865.

There were match games between the Excelsiors, the Atlantics, the Pioneers, and the Ordens. On Dec. 6 of this year there was a convention of baseball clubs of the northwest at Chicago, representing four states and eleven cities. At this convention the National Association of Baseball Players of the Northwest was formed.

1866.

Feb. 3 a game of baseball was played on the ice on skates between the Pioneers and the Excelsior Juniors.

1867.

Early in July a tournament was held at Dexter park fifty-four clubs being represented. The championship of the northwest was won by Chicago Excelsiors, who defeated Forest Citys of Rockford, two games out of three, 45 to 41 and 28 to 25. These were the first defeats the Rockford team had met since its organization in 1866.

Three weeks later the Nationals of Washington visited Chicago on tour, the first ever made of an eastern club to the west. On July 25 the Nationals were defeated by the Forest Citys, who came from Rockford to play, 29 to 23. This was the only defeat the Washington club suffered during the trip. The next day the Nationals beat Chicago Excelsiors, 40 to 4, spanking the honors which the Excelsiors so proudly had borne by besting Forest Citys.

The Excelsiors were defeated by Forest Citys, 20 to 18 and 36 to 27, giving the Rockford team the championship of the northwest, and the Excelsiors disbanded.

1869.

Forest Citys defeated Actuas of Chicago, also the Garden City club. The Dreadnoughts came into existence this year, also the Blue Stockings, a Negro baseball club, whose antics on the field were a cure for the blues.

Organize Chicago Professionals.

At the close of the season of 1869 steps were taken toward the organization of a professional ball club, such as Cincinnati had in its Red Stockings. Oct. 1 an organization known as the Chicago Baseball club was formed with the following officers:

President, Potter Palmer; vice presidents, W. F. Wentworth, Gen. Phil Sheridan, J. M. Richards, W. F. Coolbaugh, H. C. Westworth, C. B. Farwell, F. E. Morse, S. J. Medill, Frank B. Wilkie, J. M. Higgins, J. C. McMullen, W. C. Cleveland, J. W. Midler, Robert Harris, O. M. Smith, George M. Pullman, treasurer, J. W. Butler financial secretary, and T. Z. Cowles recording secretary.

Jimmy Wood was hired by the organization to get a team of real baseball players together. How well he succeeded is told in the defeat the next fall of the Cincinnati Red Stockings, the "unbeatable champs."

History Fails to Repeat.

The White Stockings under Jimmy Woods' captaincy took the road about May 1. On April 6 they defeated the Lone Stars at New Orleans, 57 to 0. May 13 they defeated the Bluff City club of Memphis, 157 to 1. On their home grounds they defeated the Forest Citys and the Atlantics of Brooklyn, and they closed the season by humbling the proud Red Stockings as told in the foregoing.

SHELDON CLARK NAMED FOR COMMODORE OF LINCOLN PARK CLUB

ONE of the best known yachtsmen in the country, Sheldon Clark, has been named by the Lincoln Park Yacht club nominating committee to head the ticket as commodore of the club for the season of 1920.

The other flag officers named are L. J. Lambin for vice commodore and E. M. Raiffon for rear commodore. The club is preparing for its biggest season in 1920.

Mr. Clark has been part and parcel of the yachting and motor boating game in Chicago for the last fifteen years. During the heyday of yachting at the Chicago Yacht club under the régimes of Commodores Baum, Thompson, Heyworth, and Lydon, Clark was continuously in an executive office of that organization and one of the principal factors in the success of the organization.

The Lincoln Park Yacht club has more sailing craft moored in its harbor than all other organizations here combined. It has a fine location, and under Clark's leadership the members believe it on the threshold of its greatest prosperity.

Cities Near Chicago to Be in Running for Major Attractions.

BY RAY PEARSON.

It's been a rather busy summer in sport, brethren, but unless this guess goes wrong there's going to be more activity in an athletic way this winter than in many winters of the past. With a world's heavyweight championship—that in which Jack Dempsey socked Jess Willard out of his title—the American and National league pennant races and the world's series which followed jolted off the schedule, the fellow who likes to dabble in athletic activity should have plenty to entertain him with boxing contests, bowling, billiards, and other indoor sports.

All signs point in one direction and that is indoor sports are going to get a bigger play this winter than for many years. Boxing in particular appears to stand a big chance for several reasons. There is no question but that the holding of that championship encounter between Dempsey and Willard in a big city in the central part of this country was a big boost for the sport.

The fact that Dempsey was returned the winner was another helpful thing, because a young man of the Dempsey type is preferable as titleholder to Willard, who fought rarely and then only because offered exorbitant remuneration.

Dempsey Always Ready.

Everybody who knows Dempsey knows that he will fight when the opportunity presents and after his present job with a circus is finished he will have to do something to show that he is champion of the world. Jack, if we are not mistaken, has about seven weeks more of circus life ahead of him and after that nothing of great moment in the theatrical game.

He isn't the kind of fellow who can sit around and spend his coin. He's loaded with nervous energy and keeps going, so if some young fellow should appear who thinks he has a chance against Dempsey, it is a pretty safe bet that Jack will make the effort to disillusion him.

That all is not roses in the path of even a champion when it comes to doing the acting stuff was made apparent in Dempsey's case when the vaudeville show of which he was the topliner blew up and forced him to find other ways of making money. This made it necessary for him to take the circus contract. Jack was supposed to be drawing down $15,000 per week for something like fifteen weeks' vaudeville work. He worked a couple of weeks, then "blooey."

Bouts in Middle West.

Boxing should wake up with a big noise, particularly in the middle west, because of the fact that there are two states rather close together which have laws which permit the sport. Wisconsin is one grand spot, with Milwaukee, Racine, and Kenosha almost always ready to put on a show. Then there is Michigan, which only last spring entered the select circle of states which allow boxing without interference.

Michigan has Detroit as the "big time" for the sport, and already the City of Straits has demonstrated that it's a nice spot for the glove wielders to trek to, if they want to pick up a nice piece of coin. Not long ago the Detroit Athletic club showed its stuff by putting on an all-star card in which one of the performers was Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard. That show drew more than $15,000 at the door, which is mighty sweet "getting." There are other cities in Michigan which give indication of offering attractive terms to the scrappers and putting on shows of merit.

Can Draw Chicago Fans.

Judging from present indications there is no reason why Milwaukee and Detroit would not be able to put on some of the best attractions obtainable in the boxing game. They should be able to "land" Benny Leonard, Lew Tendler, Charlie White, Joe Welling, Richie Mitchell, Eddie Fitzsimmons, and several others in the lightweight division, for it seems this class is the most popular. Then if some one could be found to scrap Dempsey there is no reason why he should not fight in Milwaukee or Detroit just as well as New York or New Orleans.

A good card in either Milwaukee or Detroit is practically sure to attract fans from Chicago, for the former city is only a two hour train ride, while a jaunt to Detroit takes just a little more than six hours.

"Bring on the bloomin' fighters."

Woods and Waters

FROM THE GAME FIELDS.

SHOOTING, like every other line of endeavor, has its crepe hangers. Every year about this time come the stories of thousands and thousands of dead ducks being found in the north—it is something like the annual "bear stories" of the failure of the Michigan and Ohio peach crops. Regardless of what rumors are being circulated, we do not believe that there is any occasion for alarm. From what we can learn, and we have taken the trouble to get the facts, this will be a good season for waterfowl hunting.

Every season some ducks die of diseases or from feeding in or near salt marshes. Somebody finds the birds and the rumor starts. A few hundred dead ducks make an impressive showing and by the time the story reaches Winnipeg the quantity of dead ducks reaches the tens of thousands; at Chicago it is hundreds of thousands—it's a good thing for figures that the inhabitants of Patagonia are not interested in our ducks!

Native ducks—mallards and teals that breed locally—we're unusually plentiful this fall. On the opening day flights of widgeon and blue winged teal struck the middle west; since then stray flocks have been trooping down—mallards, canvas backs, widgeons, butterballs—and the day before this was written (Oct. 11) big flights of widgeons, gray ducks, and green winged teal struck the Illinois river country.

While fishing on the upper Mississippi a few weeks ago we saw big flocks of Canadian and brant geese and mallards heading south. We have learned since that they have returned north. In the Dakotas and other western states immense flocks of mallards have been seen. These, mind you, are only the advance guard, the main flights not being due for some weeks.

Reports we have received from Canada and a dozen northern states would take up too much of our limited space, but they indicate a good crop of ducks, and with the knowledge that a bum prophet is a piece of Roquefort in his own stamping grounds, we venture the prediction that this is going to be a big year for hunters of waterfowl.

The editor of this pillar of prophecy had the pleasure of interviewing Chief United States Warden George Lawyer (he is one, too, Mr. Conductor of the Line) recently. Speaking for the bunch of us, we asked him a number of questions that most duck hunters would like to have answered.

Replying to our query regarding the opposition to the bird treaty act, he said that this has dwindled down to one state—Missouri—and that it was weakening there. He expressed the opinion that the results of federal protection and an open season limited to three months was winning over most of the spring shooting element; something we have noticed among the same class in this state.

"What effect is protection having on wood ducks?" we inquired.

"Remarkable," he said. "Reports from all parts of the country indicate a marked increase of these birds."

Walter Peacock, a member of the Crane Lake club, who was present, corroborated this so far as the Illinois river country is concerned. He told of immense numbers of wood ducks feeding in the club's preserves.

At this point W. G. Merrill, district United States warden, mentioned that the president of one of the Illinois river clubs had been arrested by a state warden and "soaked" a big fine for shooting wood ducks. We mention this because of the very prevalent idea that a member of a big club can violate the game laws and "get away with it" because of his so-called political "pull."

The increase of wood ducks will be welcome news to every man who goes afield, even though they are protected all the year, because the species was surely headed for extermination under the old laws. The loss of these wonderfully beautiful birds would be a national calamity.

Then we sprung the inevitable question on the slaughter of ducks in the south.

"Why should we protect the birds here and then have them slaughtered when they get to the gulf states?" we asked.

"You wouldn't know the old south now," he replied. "The southern states permit only three months of open season, as specified for all states by the bird treaty act, and we are enforcing the laws down there as strictly as anywhere in the United States."

"How about selling migratory birds in your own city of Washington?" was our next question. "This is a query that will floor him, we figured.

"Just try to buy a bird in Washington," he said, with a smile. "We have the markets closed as tightly there, and thrpughout the south, as they are here in Chicago." Anybody who has been watching the local markets knows that this is a big order.

Then he told us of one of those Missouri spring shooters who was going to show the United States where to head in at.

He was pacing the shores of his private lake with a rifle on his shoulder, when Chief Lawyer and his district warden arrived. When they disclosed their identity he opened up with a tirade of profanity that was as vigorous as it was picturesque, meanwhile flourishing his rifle most threateningly and predicting a sudden demise for any warden that interfered with his spring shooting. When he stopped for breath, the chief said:

"Now listen; if you ever shoot at any of my men, shoot to kill them all at one shot, because their orders are to get you if you start anything."

The enraged, hard boiled hunter thought it over for a moment.

"Well," he said, after a painful pause, "I may not shoot anybody, but by crickey, I'll get the sheriff after 'em!"

CUE STARS PLAY IN TITLE EVENT; MAY BEAT HOPPE

National Balk Line Championship Starts Tomorrow in Gotham.

BY JOE DAVIS.

With a field composed of seven of the leading balkline players in the world, whose ages range from 21 to 65, play in the national American balkline championship at Hotel Astor, New York, tomorrow. Young Jake Schaefer, formerly of Chicago, but now of San Francisco, will meet Ora Morningstar of San Diego in the afternoon game, and at night Champion Willie Hoppe will play Welker Cochran of Manson, Ia., now a resident of New York.

The other entries are Koji Yamada of San Francisco, George F. Slosson, now instructor at the City club of Boston; and G. Butler Sutton of Chicago.

Can Hoppe Be Beaten?

Naturally, the prevailing question is: "Can any one of the players dethrone Hoppe, who at present holds the 18-2, 18-1, and 14-1 titles, and has held them so long he has been looked upon as unbeatable."

Slosson, the dean of the present players in active service, was born at De Kalb, St. Lawrence county, New York, in 1854. He and Sutton, who was born in western New York about 53 years ago, are the lone survivors of the palmy days of balkline, when Frank Ives and Jacob Schaefer, Sr., were in their prime.

Ora Morningstar was born at Rochester, Ind., Nov. 26, 1874, and has held both the 18-1 and 18-2 titles. Koji Yamada, who defeated Hoppe in the first tournament he appeared in in this country, was born at Tokio, Japan, and is a trifle older than Hoppe, who was born Oct. 11, 1887, at Cornwall, on the Hudson.

Schaefer, Chicago Boy.

The two youngsters of the tournament, who gradually have been climbing to the top of the tree, are Jake Schaefer, born at Chicago, Oct. 18, 1895, and Cochran, born at Manson, Ia., 1898.

Schaefer, by reason of his fine play in the last two years is conceded to have the best chance to defeat Hoppe, Morningstar and Cochran being the next pick, with Yamada fourth.

Both Slosson and Sutton have made some good averages in practice.

COL. FOREMAN IS LEGION INFANT'S PREMIER PAPA

Illinois Chapter Is Born; Lifts Voice for Bonus for Soldiers.

BY C. G. MacARTHUR.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The Illinois chapter of the American Legion was born this afternoon. The child is a boy.

The child squalled and kicked like any ordinary infant. The first thing it did was to ask for a bonus. Then it demanded universal military service. The opinion of the convention was divided on the bonus idea. Most of the delegates felt that the question should be left to the government. But somehow the delegates were maneuvered into the position of voting either for or against the bonus, and, rather than go on record as opposing payment to discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines, the convention declared in favor of a scheme whereby discharged men may get a fixed monthly payment, irrespective of rank.

Better Care for Wounded.

Better care of the wounded and those qualifying for vocational training was demanded, and national delegates were instructed to work for that at the national convention.

Seventy-five per cent of the delegates voted for the measure, which was supported from the floor by Barratt O'Hara and Arnold Joerns of Chicago and Bernard Kelly and Leo G. Zinn of Peoria. E. J. Glynn Smith of Chicago led the fight against the resolution.

Resolutions for universal military service were adopted almost unanimously, with a few protesting because of suggestions as to what was meant by universal military service were voted onto the resolution. The details will be left to the national convention.

Want Vocational Training.

Other matters affecting former service men taken up at the convention were vocational training, the creation of a board to get action on claims and compensation from the government, and the creation of a committee to obtain assistance for disabled soldiers and their dependents and the dependents of those who died. Assistance will come from state institutions already established.

A resolution attacking radicalism received the unqualified support of the convention. It was referred back to the resolutions committee for redraft to make provisions more specific, and was adopted unanimously toward the close of the session.

Col. Foreman State Chief.

Next to the rest, Col. Milton J. Foreman of Chicago was elected commander without a dissenting voice. His strongest opponents were Marshall V. Kierney of Chicago and Bernard Kelley of Peoria. Mr. Kierney, a buck private, withdrew during the voting, in order to make the vote unanimous. Mr. Kelley withdrew shortly before, as a trade, resulting at the same time that Peoria was a great place for state headquarters. Apparently he was mistaken, for Springfield was chosen.

Quincy undoubtedly would have been the choice of the convention. Delegates from that city have been in Peoria for two weeks seeking by the distribution of dime "seegars" and extensive advertising to capture state headquarters.

Attacks Thompson Record.

Trades were all fixed up and the convention was ready to vote when a gentleman stood up and talked about Mayor Thompson, screamed that the town was unpatriotic, and created an enormous fuss, requiring the services of a dozen delegates and the three husky sergeants at arms to settle.

Chicago delegates booed and hissed the gentleman, who had approached a description of the joys of dwelling in Quincy. The leader of the Quincy delegation arose and disclaimed all of the speaker's remarks excepting those that applied to Quincy; he even disowned the speaker, whom nobody knew, but Springfield was chosen.

Chicago will be the next meeting place of the convention, one year from now.

The election of other state officers went off smoothly.

William R. McCauley of Olney was chosen as vice commander. Chicago's candidate, M. V. Kierney, withdrew in consideration of Chicago's selection as the next convention city.

Other officers chosen were: Adjutant, Earl B. Searcey, Springfield; medical officer, Dr. Thomas Know, Quincy; insurance officer, Grover S. Sexton, Chicago; vocational education officer, Dr. H. S. Sullivan, Chicago; senior chaplain, the Rev. Frank D. Adams, Urbana; sergeant at arms, Charles G. Green, Aurora.

The following members of the state board of directors were selected by the caucus committee: Roger Flery, Charles Roth, F. E. Flannery, Barrett O'Hara, and Miss Ellen Martin from Chicago; William D. Knight, Rockford; Pence B. Orr, Joliet; B. A. Cootiow, Oregon; D. J. Meyers, Pontiac; Robert W. Weber, Urbana; Leo G. Hana, Peoria; W. L. Kelly, Shelbyville; R. V. Guston, East St. Louis; H. F. Lewis, Murphysboro; and John A. Steele of McLeansboro.

LEGION CHIEF

Chicagoan Chosen Commander of the Illinois Branch of War Veterans.

COL. MILTON J. FOREMAN.

'PAGAN' HUSBAND STRAPPED HER, WIFE TESTIFIES

Mrs. Poole Gets Divorce, Children's Custody During School.

Alleged cruelty on the part of Frederick Parsons Poole, a production engineer, will be the basis of a decree to be entered by Judge Charles A. McDonald in the Superior court in favor of Mrs. Rene F. Poole. Judge McDonald, after hearing Mrs. Poole's story, indicated he would grant the divorce she asked.

The decree will give Mrs. Poole custody of the children, Frederick, 9, and Rene, 6, during the school year, and their father is to have possession of them during the vacation period.

Mrs. Poole is to receive as alimony one-third of her husband's salary, declared to be between $400 and $600 a month.

Tells of "Kidnaping."

"He abused me many times," Mrs. Poole testified in answer to questions of her attorney, Ernest Stout. "Once, while we were living in La Grange, he tried to tie our little boy with a strap to quiet him, and when I objected he strapped me."

At other times, Mrs. Poole said, he had struck her and had thrown her to the floor.

She declared Poole had "kidnaped" the children from her at Rome, N. Y., last June and later had sought to compel her to give their son into the custody of his mother.

In the divorce bill Poole was described as "not believing in God, man, or any life higher than that of animal existence" and boasting that he is a "pagan, within and without."

The Baker's Divorce Bill.

On the evening of Sept. 16, Paul Kobelke, a baker living at 3064 Clybourn avenue, suspicious of Mrs. Hulda Kobelke and her frequent visits to 3923 North St. Louis avenue, with several detectives swooped down upon a house at that address and burst into a room occupied by William E. Monroe, a sheet metal worker.

Monroe was easily seen, but Mrs. Kobelke was found hiding under the bed, it was set forth in a divorce bill filed in the superior court by Kobelke through Attorney Charles E. Erbstein. The bill states that at the time of the discovery of Monroe and Mrs. Kobelke both were "in a state of extreme negligee."

ACQUITTED OF MURDER.

Lincoln, Ill., Oct. 18.—Louis Allison, 17 years old, was acquitted of the murder of Martin Moore, his stepfather, by a jury in the Circuit court here this afternoon after twenty hours' deliberation. The boy's plea was self-defense.

The Tone Magnificent

Its patented diaphragm of special composition instead of the ordinary mica plate, eliminates the flat, metallic and unmusical sounds always annoying, and emits the full, free, resonant, vocal or orchestral tones and overtones, especially those of the piano.

Used with vocal records you feel the very presence of the human voice.

More sensitive and responsive to the most delicate vibration of the needle than any other reproducer made, thus reducing the wear on your records.

Positively the greatest feature in Talking Machine development.

"AND THEN THE LOVER"

It was Shakespeare who said, "If music be the food of love, play on!"

Music lovers find their cherished ideal in the Brunswick Phonograph. By the Brunswick Method of Reproduction, music is given its truest and finest tone.

Tone quality hitherto lost in phonographic music is now restored by The Brunswick because it is a super instrument.

It plays all records. So you are not limited in your choice of the world's finest music regardless of what manufacturer makes the records.

The Brunswick Method of Reproduction comprises two scientific features—the Ultona and the Tone Amplifier.

The Ultona plays all records truer, finer and sweeter. It is not a makeshift contrivance, but involves a genuine principle of sound. A slight turn of the hand presents the right needle, diaphragm and weight for playing any record.

The Tone Amplifier is an oval shaped vibrant tone chamber. Like the sounding board of a fine piano or violin, it is made entirely of wood. It is absolutely free from metal. It gives the right tonal volume and eliminates all harsh, thin, metallic sounds. It meets all advanced acoustical and musical laws.

Suppose you hear The Brunswick play today?

THE FRANKLIN SEDAN

NATION-WIDE demonstration of Franklin Sedan utility is daily converting motorists to the practicality of enclosed car motoring. But comparisons invariably prove that unrestricted usability in an enclosed car is an exclusively Franklin quality. The result is an unprecedented popularity and a faster increasing sale for the Franklin Sedan than for any other fine car.

No other sedan can equally disregard road conditions, weather and temperatures. None rides with such comfort or drives with such ease and safety. None meets such severe demands without complaints or fulfills all formalities at such small running cost.

The Franklin Sedan alone combines the ideals of utility and economy. It alone is based on the practical principles of Light Weight and Flexible construction. The Franklin Sedan is also the only sedan safe to use all-year in heat or cold. Direct Air Cooled, it has no water to boil or freeze.

Wide Observation Windows together with two Wide Doors on either side allow unobstructed riding view; the V-shaped Slanting Windshield affords broadest driving vision; combined they give this sedan the most open outlook possible. The car is equally remarkable for its ease of access and seating convenience.

The average Franklin owner's expense for this exceptional dependability and performance is indicated by:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

We will be pleased to show you how different this sedan is in performance from any car you may be familiar with, and you may choose the roads for a complete test.

* * * *

The FRANKLIN BROUGHAM duplicates the sedan in performance but instead seats four. It is ideal for personal use. The front seats are aligned so the driver is not isolated from the companion passenger. In size, comfort and convenience, this car particularly meets the needs of small families and doctors.

FAIR PRICE BODY TO FIX COST OF FOOD, FUEL, GARB

Maj. Sprague May Head Chicago Committee; Meets Tomorrow.

Chicago is to be guarded this winter against unreasonable prices for foodstuffs, wearing apparel, and fuel. Every power vested in government officials will be centered in bringing down exorbitant costs to a dead line level and holding them there.

District Attorney Clyne, returning last night from a week of food conferences in Washington and New York, announced the campaign will be launched at 10 o'clock tomorrow with the organization of the long promised "fair price" committee. Maj. A. A. Sprague has been named chairman of the new body by both Gov. Lowden and Attorney General Palmer and has promised either to accept or to reject the position at the general conference.

Food, Clothing, Fuel.

"There is no stabilizing device or cooperative plan," declared the district attorney, "that can equal in effectiveness the establishment of the fair price committee. We plan to make it the biggest power in the Chicago merchandising field.

"The cooperative supervision will not extend to food alone. Wearing apparel and fuel are equally important.

"We intend to survey the entire field and establish prices that will be fair both to the dealer and to the man who has to pay the final price.

"It will mean a detailed study of each market, the analysis of profits in each stage of manufacture, and the probable solution of a great part of Chicago's suffering from high prices."

Confers with Sprague.

Maj. Sprague, head of Sprague, Warner & Co., and one of the best known officers of the old Blackhawk division, is the most acceptable man in the state to head the Chicago commission, according to Mr. Clyne. The appointee and the district attorney met in New York last week and made a detailed study of methods used by the New York fair price committee and food equalization boards.

"I am not prepared to announce just what the committee organization will be, or my definite acceptance of the chairmanship," said Maj. Sprague last night. "There are details to be gone over and I will confer with the district attorney Monday, deciding at that time whether or not to take the job."

Clyne Calls Sugar Men.

At the same time sugar brokers will be asked to meet the district attorney for a last conference on the distribution plan for this winter and to agree on a maximum profit, which Mr. Clyne hopes to keep below half a cent a pound.

"In my conferences with the sugar board in New York," said Mr. Clyne, "I learned Chicago must look to the best sugar crop of the west to supply all demands until Nov. 1. After that time we will begin getting the cane crop from Louisiana, and the city will pull through without a serious shortage until the national supply is readjusted.

"At present there must be some arrangements here to hold manufacturers using large amounts of sugar—candy makers, soft drink manufacturers, and the like—to a deadline in their use of the necessity. They will have to operate on a sugar supply based pound for pound upon the amount they used in the fall months of 1918."

Limit Cuban Sugar.

According to Mr. Clyne, the New York board has made plans whereby no cane sugar from the Cuban crop will be sent into the territory west of Pittsburgh and north of the Ohio river.

"The sugar situation is far from settled," he said. "While arrangements have been made to remove any danger of a famine, the public must be made to realize that the sugar consumption for the first nine months of 1919 is 500,000 tons more than for the same period in 1918, and a campaign to conserve sugar must be commenced."

Some Prices of 1864.

Meantime—"There is nothing new under the sun.". Household bills of civil war days discovered by Mrs. Francelia Colby of 1441 East Sixtieth street prove this. Sugar, now at 12 and 13 cents, was sold for 35 cents a pound in October, 1864, Mrs. Colby's mother's bills show. R. H. Countiss, who had a store at the northeast corner of State and Sixteenth streets, sold two pounds for 70 cents. Tea went at the rate of $2.24 a pound, 56 cents for a quarter pound; coffee was 50 cents; crude kerosene 30 cents a quart, and soap 20 cents a bar.

But in December, 1860, potatoes were only 30 cents a bushel, turkey was a dime a pound, butter 18 cents a pound, lard 13 cents a pound, and cornmeal 2 cents a pound, according to a bill of Albee & Sweger, State and Old streets.

BUNCOING A SWEET TOOTH

Substitutes for sugar as a foodstuff, as a sweetening agent, and as a preservative are recommended for use during the sugar shortage by Assistant Health Commissioner Gottfried Koehler in a bulletin issued yesterday.

A summary of Dr. Koehler's recommendations follows:

Carbohydrates in the form of grape sugar, corn sugar, malt sugar, and milk sugar, contained in fruits, corn, syrup and milk, have the same nutritive value as cane sugar.

Fruit sugars and glucose, though less sweet than cane sugar, can be used for sweetening purposes and can be obtained in the form of corn syrup and honey.

Sugar is often wasted in attempting to mask the sour taste of acid foods. Such sourness is best overcome by the addition of a small quantity of soda.

Glucose may be substituted for about one-half of the cane sugar ordinarily required where sugar is used for its preservation and sweetening properties, as in the preparation of jelly.

During the sugar shortage, fruits and vegetables should be preserved by the use of salt, spices, or drying whenever possible. The addition of small quantities of salt helps to intensify the sweetening effect of sugar in many instances.

GAS STREETCAR BUILT BY FORD TO RACE FAST TRAIN

New Engine Expected to Revolutionize City Traffic.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Henry Ford's internal combustion engine for his gasoline street car with which he expects to revolutionize street railway and interurban transportation has been completed and today was given its first tryout in the Ford experimental shops at Dearborn.

Mr. Ford reiterated his recent offer to turn his invention over to the city of Detroit as a solution of existing transportation problems. Commenting on the trial, he said:

"I am convinced that this motor will make it possible for cheaper and faster transportation."

Weight Cut 50 Per Cent.

Charles Sorenson, general manager of the Dearborn shops, said: "Mr. Ford and I have worked long and hard to get a finished job which will cut weight 50 per cent. We have won."

Present plans call for the sending of the first street car over the Michigan Central tracks at the express speed of seventy miles. It will leave ahead of the Wolverine Flyer, the fast train between Detroit and Chicago, and race it for a time record. The test will probably be made within forty days.

The power unit which will move the car represents a new combination of functions.

It is a motor, an air compressor, an electrical generator, and a heating and lighting plant all in one. All operations necessary for the control of the car are centered in the motor.

How Trams Are Surpassed.

And all this is accomplished with a 75 per cent reduction in weight as compared with the power and control equipment of the ordinary electric car.

The rate of speed to be produced depends entirely upon the rate desired. The car can make seventy miles. It is a matter of gearing to reduce that to whatever rate the regulations of a city or an interurban line may call for. There will always be excess power available.

A feature which will appeal to cities which have hilly streets is the hill climbing power of the car. It can ascend a 3 per cent grade at twenty miles on high. The car is equipped both with airbrakes and foot brakes.

Engineers Are Planning $2,500,000 Home Here

Following a successful drive by 175 volunteer workers, who recruited more than 2,000 new members for the Western Society of Engineers in one week, that organization is now considering plans for the erection of a twenty story building, to cost $2,500,000. This building, it is planned, will house the society, the Chicago Engineers' club, and Chicago chapters of other national engineering and technical societies.

Ancient "Con" Game Nets "Philanthropists" $3,090

There were two of them. They had $5,000 in gold nuggets they were to distribute among the poor of the south side. Would Andrew Spolarich, proprietor of the Dober hotel, 4167 South Halsted street, hold the nuggets? He would. As surety of good faith Spolarich withdrew his money from the bank, $3,090, and gave it to the philanthropists. That was Friday. He hasn't heard from them. The suitcase with the supposed nuggets was found to contain nothing but paper and lead.

Country Life Conference to Open Here Nov. 8

Delegates from all over the United States will assemble in Chicago Nov. 8 to 11 for the second annual meeting of the national country life conference, which will be held at the Hotel La Salle. Among the speakers will be Dr. Oscar Dowling, health commissioner of Louisiana; Mrs. Josephine Corliss Preston, president of the National Education association, and Miss Elizabeth Fox, in charge of public health nursing work for the American Red Cross.

Warrant for Attendant in Dunning Death Issued

A warrant was taken out yesterday for the arrest of Myles Ernest Martin, an attendant at the Chicago state hospital for the insane at Dunning, as the result of the death earlier in the day of Frank Emerson, 54 years old, colored, 5011 South State street. According to Dr. Charles F. Read, superintendent of the hospital, Martin is alleged to have struck Emerson, a patient at the hospital, during a quarrel. Emerson, according to Dr. Read, had fought with two other patients earlier in the day.

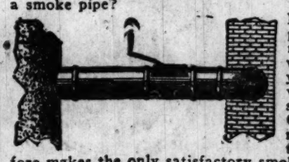
Everlasting Cast Iron Smoke Pipe

For Furnaces and Boilers

Have you ever considered why it is necessary for you to have so many new smoke pipes on your furnace?

Did you know that until recently the only kind of smoke pipe you could procure was made from black or galvanized iron; and that this material would last but a short time when used for a smoke pipe?



Every year or two you have paid the furnace men for new pipe, as the old one was rusted full of holes, and you were afraid the house would catch fire from the sparks from the furnace.

CAST IRON is the only material which will not rust thru or burn out, and therefore makes the only satisfactory smoke pipe.

The first cost of EVERLASTING CAST IRON SMOKE PIPE is of course more than galvanized iron, but when you consider that this pipe does not have to be replaced, and you do not have to pay several hours' "time" each year to have it renewed, then the CAST IRON SMOKE PIPE is by far the cheaper. Also, you can go to bed at night with the assurance that your house cannot catch fire from defective smoke pipe (which often occurs).

We have this EVERLASTING CAST IRON SMOKE PIPE in stock at the CENTRAL EUROPE WITHOUT FATS; HUNGER REIGNS

Bakers Using Sawdust as a Substitute for Bran.

Sawdust is becoming the "staff of life" in starving Vienna. Bakers are using it as a substitute for bran, and unfortunately for their helpless customers the supply of fine sawdust is unlimited.

A vivid picture of living conditions in the once gay capital of old Austria-Hungary was drawn by Robert Byfield of Chicago, and it supplements the daily cable dispatches which tell appalling incidents of the battle against hunger now raging in central and eastern Europe.

Mr. Byfield has just returned from overseas, where he was connected with the American Relief association from the time of its inception. He will be an active worker in the campaign for funds to aid the distressed Jewish populations of the old world, which opens in Chicago Oct. 26 under the direction of the Chicago Jewish relief committee. The campaign will be nonsectarian.

No Fats in Anything.

"Before I entered central Europe my idea of a starving person was one who could not get enough food," said Mr. Byfield. "I soon found, upon my arrival in Vienna, that it is not quantity of food that counts as much as kinds of food. In Vienna and Prague I ate at the best restaurants. At first I could not understand why I was so hungry in spite of the fact that I ordered liberally.

"Shortly afterward I found the cause. It was the lack of fats in everything I ate. I knew it was impossible to obtain butter, but neither could I get such foods as fried eggs, fried potatoes, meats cooked in fat. In fact, one could get nothing cooked in fat. Meats came to the table literally dripped of nourishment. Vegetables were all boiled.

"Bread, with some exception, had all its bran removed and sawdust substituted. It sounds fantastic to American to state that people would eat bread filled with sawdust, but these unfortunate people, rich and poor, must have the form of eating if not the substance, in order to exist at all. Other substitutes for food are resorted to, some of them perhaps more harmful than sawdust. One young American soldier detailed at Vienna suffered from a serious skin disease as a result of eating sawdust unawares.

A Chocolate Spree.

"To show the effect that this type of food had on me, I recall that during the first week I spent in Vienna, I consumed twenty large cakes of American chocolate, because the food I could buy did not give me sufficient strength to attend to my business.

"One of the most distressing sights in all of the large cities of the former Austrian empire was the effect of malnutrition on the children. This is evidenced in a large number of cases by what is called 'grain belly,' brought about by the fact that these children live practically on a grain diet and rarely if ever obtain fats in any form.

"The shortage of coal in the starvation countries of Europe is brought about by a condition indescribable. The miners refuse to work because the mine owners cannot get them food. Without coal food cannot be transported, nor can industries, such as flour mills, operated."

PAINTS PICTURE OF ACTIVITIES OF RED CROSS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The first complete picture of the activities of the American Red Cross during the war is given in the report of the war council of the organization, headed by Henry P. Davison, the first installment of which was made public today.

It shows that between May, 1917, and Feb. 28, 1919, the American Red Cross received a total of $400,000,000 for relief work, $283,500,000 of which came from war drives. Of that sum, $61,329,537 in securities and $52,703,044 in supplies remained available in February.

Following the twenty month war period with an available relief fund of $104,304 and a membership of 486,194 adults, the organization built up its membership to 20,000,000 adults and [illegible] juniors. Membership dues during the war period brought in [illegible].

Summarizing the activities of the Red Cross during the war, the report says 371,277,000 relief articles were produced by volunteer workers; that the needs of 500,000 soldiers were aided; that refreshments for 40,000,000 were served in Red Cross canteens; that 23,- [illegible] nurses were enrolled, and moving pictures furnished for more than 3,000,- [illegible] American soldiers in France.

CLERKS STRIKE AT ARMY STORE FOR DELAYED PAY

Question of Errors in the Cash Inspires the Walkout.

Uncle Sam, merchant, came face to face with his first labor trouble in Chicago yesterday when twenty-five ex-soldier clerks called a strike and walked from behind the counters of the army quartermaster department store at State and Van Buren streets to demand reparation from federal authorities.

A committee of four, chosen by the striking clerks, visited the district attorney's office immediately after the walkout and told Chief Clerk William A. Small that they will not work until their salaries of approximately $21 a week are turned over to them by Col. Ballard Lyerly, officer in charge of the store.

Sign, But Get Nothing.

"All we do is sign the pay roll," they said, reverting to the universal army plaint, "and we never get a cent!"

Col. Lyerly, they explained, had announced when the store opened yesterday that the pay checks due Friday for the first month of store operation could not be paid until the auditors balanced the quartermaster books. Errors, overcharges, and undercharges, he had stated, would have to be checked up against the clerks who had made them, as the government holds the store manager responsible for both profit and loss due to mistakes in operation. The clerks declared they did not feel that this money should be taken from their pay checks because they do not handle cash in the store, but allow cashiers to make all payments. Besides, they protested, they need the money right away.

Ordered Back to Work.

In the absence of District Attorney Clyne the men were told to go back to work and wait until their pay checks were distributed, later taking up the matter of personal deductions. The committee joined the striking group in the federal building lobby, but indicated that they would not go back to work.

Col. Lyerly expressed little concern. He explained that he is held personally responsible for all accounts and that the clerks who make mistakes will have to make good.

"I have asked the war department to include a profit and loss account in the quartermaster store," he added, "in order to cover errors."

The strikers he promised, will be paid off as soon as possible. Others will be secured to fill vacancies, clerks and order takers being drawn as far as possible from the ranks of service men.

Lines of bargain hunters stretched for a hundred yards on either side of the army store yesterday battling with policemen at the main entrance and crowding to the long counters.

TELLS OF THREAT OF BOYCOTT BY MILK PRODUCERS

State Witness Swears C. H. Potter Warned Him to Pay.

The state began to unfold the alleged workings of the Milk Producers' association yesterday when Christian Eskilson, superintendent of the Clover Leaf Milk company, which formerly was the Englewood Dairy company, was called as a witness against the eight officials of the Milk Producers' association who are on trial on charges of conspiracy to arbitrarily fix the price of milk. Eskilson was by far the best witness for the state up to this time.

He told of conversations with Charles H. Potter, one of the defendants who is head of the association, in which he was told that unless the association's price for milk was paid his company would be unable to obtain milk.

Eskilson's Examination.

Eskilson was examined as follows:

"Did you have a talk with Charles H. Potter in 1917?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Irwin N. Walker.

"Yes, he and two others. Mr. Selzman and Mr. Wille were present."

"What was said?"

"Mr. Potter said I would now have to pay the price fixed by the association. We have a plant at Beecher and at Sollitt. I said we could not afford to pay the price at Sollitt. Mr. Potter said that others were paying the price and we would have to do the same. I said we could not afford to pay the price and would close the plant.

Intimates Threat.

"He said that we would not close the plant and I replied that it was our plant and that we would do with it as we pleased, and suggested that we would go to court.

"Mr. Potter said 'court or no court you will run the place and pay the price.'"

"Did you have another talk with him later that day?"

"Yes, I called him on the telephone and said that we would not pay the price."

"What did he say?"

"In effect he said that we would receive no milk at our plant."

Deneen Cross Examines.

On cross examination Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, who represents the defendants, closed his questioning by asking Eskilson:

"In your conversation with Mr. Potter did he not say that there was a sharp demand for milk and that they could get the price for it?"

"I think possibly he did."

FOUR CHICAGO BASE HOSPITALS ASKED TO REMOBILIZE

MARQUIS EATON, chairman of the Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, was advised from Washington headquarters yesterday to prepare for remobilization of the base hospitals from this city which served overseas. The personnel, under the reorganization program, will be held intact for all future emergencies. Unit equipment will be provided by the army and stored in government warehouses.

Organized for war service, the Chicago base hospitals comprised the following:

No. 11—St. Joseph, St. Mary, and Augustana hospitals.

No. 12—Northwestern University Medical school.

No. 13—Presbyterian and Cook County hospitals.

No. 14—St. Luke's and Michael Reese hospitals.

Mr. Eaton stated that while each of these units would be asked to continue, there might be some changes. A smaller personnel will be utilized.

Actual reorganization will begin following the Red Cross roll call and war fund campaign, which opens on Nov. 2. A meeting of Red Cross workers—the vanguard of the 5,000 women it is hoped to obtain for the campaign—will be held at 230 South Clark street tomorrow afternoon.

SICKNESS PUTS END TO TALK OF THIRD TERM

See McAdoo as Probable Choice of Democratic Party.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—President Wilson's illness may have a pronounced effect upon the Democratic party's nomination of a candidate for the presidency.

Presidential politics on the Democratic side of the fence has been at a standstill for several months. Potential candidates for the Democratic nomination and their boosters have been restraining their inclinations pending some revelation of Mr. Wilson's intentions concerning candidacy for a third term.

Would Dissuade Him.

Democratic leaders with unanimity have declared that if the president should desire to seek reëlection he would be renominated without opposition. Mr. Wilson never has said definitely that he would refuse renomination and in his threat to withdraw the peace treaty if the action of the senate should not be to his liking he is believed to have hinted that he would seek a third term and a vindication at the hands of the people with the league of nations as the campaign issue.

That this contingency may be removed by the illness of the president is a possibility that has been widely discussed by the politicians within the last week. There are many who doubt that the president, even if he should recover his wonted vigor, would give any further serious thought to entering upon a strenuous political campaign, the exertions of which would threaten another breakdown. It is deemed certain that his family, personal friends, and physicians would seek to dissuade him from such an undertaking.

Ohio Has Two Candidates.

Any authentic sign from the White House that the president does not desire renomination would be the starting bell for the race of the aspirants for the honor.

Senator Pomerene of Ohio already is edging under the wire. Within the last few days the Pomerene boosters in Ohio have begun the distribution of literature with the familiar slogan "From the Farm to the White House," in which the public virtues and achievements of the senator are extolled.

It is evident that there will be a fight between Pomerene and Gov. Cox for the control of the Ohio delegation. The governor is also a candidate and has been getting into the national limelight through his fight on food profiteering.

Clark a Possibility.

Former Speaker Clark is regarded as a possible contestant, seeking to win what he lost at Baltimore in 1912, but he maintains silence on his intentions and his friends are awaiting their cue from him.

The man who is regarded as likely to be the most formidable candidate for the nomination in the event that the president eliminates himself is former Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, Mr. Wilson's son-in-law. The politicians believe that he will be found in the running if his father-in-law is not. He would have the backing of the administration and the support of a large part of the president's personal following. In addition he would have the support of an influential following of his own in the Democratic party, particularly the labor element won by his administration of the railroads and financial and business interests with which his administration of the treasury found favor.

Three members of the president's cabinet are regarded as potential candidates. Attorney General Palmer has made a good deal of headway in attracting attention to himself as presidential timber and he is looked upon by many as the strongest competitor of Mr. McAdoo. Secretary of the Navy Daniels has modestly confessed that he is in the hands of his fellow Democrats so far as the nomination is concerned. Secretary of War Baker is believed to be in a receptive mood.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c.

Don't Discard Your Old Casings Increase Their Life With

MAXOTIRES

MAKE ALL TIRES TROUBLE PROOF

and add thousands of miles to their usefulness

Maxotires are not a filler—but an inside tire

Maxotires practically double the life of every casing, if inserted before the casing has gone too far. We do not advocate placing Maxotires in old, wornout junk casings. Maxotires should be inserted in casings which are still in good condition, and are used for the sole purpose of taking the strain from the casing, to prevent the casing from blowing out, to eliminate 95% of the ordinary punctures, and to enable a man to wear out his casings completely without any tire trouble.

You Can Run Your Tires Until the Original Outside Casing is Entirely Worn Through

Actual photograph of all makes of tires taken at our service station, which have been completely worn out by the use of Maxotires. Each tire has given its owner from 2,000 to 5,000 more miles of service than he would otherwise have received without the use of Maxotires.

Maxotires mean that you don't have to discard your old casings and buy entirely new tires at a big expense, but that you can use your old tires with utmost safety and economy until they have reached the vanishing point.

For rim cut tires, the Maxotire is the only sure remedy. It strengthens the tire at the rim and prevents the tube from blowing through. It strengthens weak tires. It stops tube chafing—eliminates tube pinching and strengthens overloaded tires.

The Maxotire fits inside of your original casing and is really a new casing inside of the old one. You can use a smaller inner tube if you like. It is not necessary, but it affords a saving of approximately 25%.

Maxotires are made to fit all sizes, makes and styles of tires. They can be used over and over again, and can be interchanged from one tire to another.

Thousands of Maxotires are sold every day to automobilists who have tested them and have found out their true value. Dealers order Maxotires by the carload lots, while they order other tires in small lots only. Every automobile user should always have Maxotires in his equipment.

WOMAN OFFERS GIRL WHO STOLE, A HOME AND JOB

Miss Emma Dugan isn't making a fabulous salary herself, but yesterday she read in THE TRIBUNE the story of Mildred Lawson, 16 years old, who said she took things that did not belong to her because she couldn't live on $10 a week. So she telephoned THE TRIBUNE and wrote to the Juvenile court, that she would take Mildred home with her, share her room, let her share her clothes, and get her a position with the company that employs her at $15 a week.

"I've had to earn my way in the world for thirteen years," Miss Dugan explained, "and now that I've got a small start, I'd like to help some younger woman get along in the world. If a girl makes a mistake and is willing to do right I think we should all try to help her to forget. I am 32 years old, and can look after Mildred if she comes to live with me. I have written the court asking permission to take her."

Miss Dugan lives at 1018 Leland avenue and is a stenographer and bookkeeper for the Sanders Sanitary Manufacturing company, dealing in plumbers' supplies.

THE SNAPPY LIME DRINK

Multiplying Dollars in California's Almond Orchards

Ever since 1849 California's soil has been producing gold—not only in the coveted yellow metal from its mines, but in the vast revenues from its marvelous crops.

Seventy years have surely made history there. The pioneers pushing through to the gold diggings saw, from their white covered wagons, only vast stretches of hills, valleys and primeval forests. The traveler today views, from his Pullman window, thriving towns and cities and multitudes of prolific orchards whose fruits and nuts are exchanged for millions in money yearly. And where once were only foot-beaten trails are miles and miles of cement highways traversed by thousands of automobiles driven by men who have seen and grasped the opportunities of this wonderful state.

Put your finger on the map—about midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco. There you have located the spot where California offers a marvelous opportunity for investment today. Note the location of Paso Robles in San Luis Obispo County. That busy little city is the very center of the rapidly growing almond industry in which men are literally multiplying by thousands the dollars which they invested but a short time ago.

For miles around, are almond orchards in all stages of growth—from trees newly planted to the old veterans which yield as high as 200 pounds of nuts every harvest time. At Paso Robles, almond growing is the one big interesting topic, just as gold is the matter of absorbing interest at the mines or oil at the oil fields.

The Choicest Almond Lands

It is in this section that the choicest almond lands are obtainable. Almonds are raised in other parts of California, but experts say that nowhere else is the soil so rich in the elements which produce meaty, rich flavored nuts. This soil in the Paso Robles section is a marl adobe which not only is rich but retains moisture through the so-called dry season, so that no irrigation is required.

No wonder that the interest in almonds is growing and spreading, not only through California but eastward. No wonder that men now located amid the pressing competition and the unrest of our industrial cities are taking up these almond properties as a safeguard for their future—for an almond orchard pays such a large profit on its cost that even a very moderate investment will provide a splendid life income and make its owner independent of the unsettled business conditions which are becoming more and more prevalent and which bring uncertainties to both employer and employed.

It is only within recent years that the public has realized the splendid profits to be made in almond growing. Formerly men who invested money in California orchard lands thought only of oranges, lemons and other fruits. Now the fruit lands are practically all taken up—consequently properties once cheap are now held at enormous prices. Today $1,500 to $3,000 an acre is a common price for developed orange, lemon and prune orchards in California.

The history of fruit growing is being repeated in almond growing. The area of suitable land is limited and is rapidly being put into orchards. Before very long, almond land will undoubtedly be valued at several times its present prices. Every year sees the acreage value of almond orchards going up—a fact which is causing many people to make their reservations now, even if they do not intend to locate in California until some time in the future.

Surer Than Fruit Crops

Almond growing, in fact, has a great advantage over fruit growing in that the crops are imperishable and sure. At Paso Robles there has not been an almond crop failure in thirty-five years, ever since the first trees were planted.

Then, also, there will never be an over supply. The consumption of these nuts is so immense (and it is increasing every year) that only 15 per cent of the demand can now be supplied by the American growers—85 per cent being imported. Before our home orchards could fully supply the markets, enough land would have to be planted with trees brought to full bearing to take up this 85 per cent—something which would take many years to bring about even if there were enough land suitable for the purpose.

Too many people have held the idea that California is a "rich man's state"—that in order to enjoy the wonderful climate and scenery there, one must first "make his stake" and then retire from active business. Visit Paso Robles and you see this notion refuted on every hand. Here is a community of busy people, making more money out of their almond orchards than they ever could have made by putting their savings or capital into ordinary investments or into the average business. They are prospering financially and at the same time living where they can enjoy an ideal climate and the most charming scenery. Here, too, you will find not only the orchards of residents but those of people not yet come to California—these properties being cared for by the Associated Almond Growers until such time when the owners wish to give them their personal attention.

California offers every man opportunities far more alluring than those which drew the "forty-niners" across the plains. It offers greater returns for less labor than the pioneer put in to find his nuggets. Its treasures are ready now for those who will simply grasp them

$2500 a Year Income for Life

Ten acres of almond trees in full bearing, planted in the marl adobe soil of the Paso Robles district and properly cared for, will easily yield a net profit of $2500 to $3000 a year or more. At the present price of the land, this income is an enormous percentage on the money required to secure one of these orchards: and the land bought and planted now will be worth more and more as time goes on. This is an investment made on a rising market.

How You Can Acquire a California Almond Orchard

The Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles—its members themselves almond growers—is offering one of the most desirable tracts of almond land in the Paso Robles district at prices and on terms which enable even people of moderate means to own orchards in this, the very cream of California's almond sections. Those who can make the trip are urged to go and inspect this property. Others should get information at the offices of the Association or by writing for their illustrated book which shows pictures of the almond orchards and fully explains the opportunities in this great industry.

10 Acres, 700 Trees, Planted and Cared For

This tract is divided into units of 10 acres each and each unit sold will be planted with 700 trees of the finest variety—trees of the kind which in full bearing yield from 20 to 30 pounds of nuts annually—a total yield of 14,000 to 21,000 pounds which sell for 25 to 35 cents per pound.

The Association will plant and care for the trees until they are in bearing—and make no extra charge for this service. The field force which does this work was trained by Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, California's foremost almond expert, and works under his personal direction.

With this service, the non-resident buyer can have his orchard developed and cared for as well as if he were on the ground—then later go to live near his property or make Paso Robles his winter home.

Pay a Little Monthly

While this tract of almond land lasts, a small amount paid down and then easy monthly payments will secure one of the choicest orchard properties in California. Part of your surplus earnings will bring you one of these orchards which will pay you an income for life of $2500 to $3000 or more. No safer, more desirable investment than this—an investment in California soil planted in almond trees.

The Crops Pay Half

Only half is paid in cash on these monthly terms. Payment for the balance is accepted from the sale of the first crops gathered from the trees. Thus the orchard itself actually pays a large part of the purchase price. Every man with a steady income which gives him a fair surplus over expenses should look into this opportunity while it lasts. It is doubtful if such almond lands as these will again be offered at such a price together with planting and care.

Funds Safeguarded By Trust Company

Not only is the responsibility of the Association back of every dollar paid in on these almond lands but there is also the responsibility of the Title Insurance and Trust Co., Los Angeles (capital $2,500,000), which is custodian of the development fund and holds title to the land in the interests of buyers. Clear title and deed are delivered to the buyer by this company when the terms of the contract are completed.

Our Money Back Guarantee

If you visit our property, or have someone representing you do so, and do not find this investment to be as exactly presented in our book—and you will have thirty days in which to make your investigation—we agree to refund the payments you have made, together with your railroad and Pullman fares paid to inspect the property. We invite prospective buyers to make this trip to obtain evidence on the ground of safe, sure and large profits to be made from almond growing.

Lands Being Rapidly Taken Up

Just as buyers once flocked to secure fruit lands, so people today are securing the almond lands. Men who go to Paso Robles to investigate come back orchard owners. Orchard lands which we have sold within the year are today worth much more than was paid for them. The acreage of these most desirable lands is limited. When it is gone, an almond orchard which can be obtained for a very moderate sum now will be held at a premium. Now is the time to secure one.

Acre Homesites Also

Orchard buyers who want homes near the city of Paso Robles, and others who want not orchards but winter homes, can secure beautiful acre properties on the hills overlooking the Salinas Valley. Half the acre planted in fruits and nuts—pears, peaches, cherries, apples, figs, prunes, almonds, walnues, etc.—without extra charge. All modern improvements. An ideal home spot—on easy payment terms. Reserve yours now. Less than 400 are available and when these are gone the only way to obtain one of these fine homesites will be to buy at a premium.

ONE MORE WEEK IN HOSPITAL FOR LUIKART GIRLS

Will Get First Auto Ride Today Since Mother Poisoned Them.

The Luikart children will be discharged from the Columbus hospital by the end of the week, according to an announcement yesterday by Dr. Thomas A. Carter, attending surgeon.

The recovery of the poison victims has been so rapid, he said, that they will be able to leave for Detroit with their father a full ten days before the time anticipated.

"Edna and Sherley have overthrown all our calculations," the physician continued. "At first I thought they could not live, but they did not die. Then I thought their recovery would be slow and tedious, but their vitality has proved amazing.

Get Auto Ride Today.

"Their systems have eliminated the poison so rapidly that there is not a trace of it now, and when I discharge them they will be completely cured."

Edna spent an hour in the morning and an hour during the afternoon in the open air.

Sherley was taken out of bed and sat in a chair at a window overlooking the park. This afternoon both children will be taken for their first automobile ride since they were given bichloride poison by their deranged mother. Dr. Carter has promised them a visit to the Lincoln park zoo.

Luikart Spared Annoyance.

THE TRIBUNE'S exposé of attempts to prey on the sympathy of Roy Luikart, the father, put a stop yesterday to the annoyance to which he has been subjected by ingenious beggars.

"It is very kind of THE TRIBUNE to take such interest in cases of misfortune," reads a letter from Miss Angela Mora of Park Ridge, Ill.

SHOULD 'VEHICLE' LAWS APPLY TO BABY BUGGIES?

The west Chicago park commissioners some time ago had passed an ordinance forbidding the passage of any vehicle across or along any walk in the park or boulevards.

Judge Hosea W. Wells of the Municipal court yesterday wrote the commissioners, suggesting that they consider this ordinance carefully—and "how about baby buggies or perambulators?" Are they to be classed as vehicles?

Why did the judge ask that question? Well, you see he became a grandfather several weeks ago. The park board reassured him.

TOTAL FOR DAY OF $75 PUTS LUIKART FUND BEYOND $1,000 MARK

The Luikart "appreciation fund" passed the $1,000 mark yesterday. Only a short time remains for the readers of THE TRIBUNE to show in substantial form their sympathy for the little sufferers.

Until Sherley and Edna return to their home in Detroit THE TRIBUNE will be glad to receive and acknowledge any money intended to help them start life anew.

SHERIFF CALLS; PRINCE AWAKES TO LOVE'S COST

New York, Oct. 18.—Prince Michael Murat, descendant of one of the first Napoleon's marshals, was rudely aroused from a late breakfast in his suite at the Ritz-Carlton today by a sheriff.

The prince, who last week faced a suit on a silk pajama bill, today was confronted with a summons in an action brought by Cartier in Paris declaring he owes $6,647 for jewelry.

Among the items cited in the particulars were two platinum brooches, each set with the words "I love you" in diamonds, and valued at 640 and 750 francs respectively. A bracelet of pearls and diamonds, 9,000 francs, and a cigaret box, 1,375 francs, were other purchases.

The prince admitted he had bought the goods, but "had no idea they had cost so much."

The prince's title has only verbal and social value in republican France.

Zion City, Ill., Oct. 18.—Fifteen year old Theodore Mason is a hero in Zion City today. Armed with a small caliber rifle Mason shot and killed a coyote which for several weeks had been hunted by the police. The animal had killed chickens valued at several hundred dollars. A reward of $50, offered by the mayor, was turned over to the youthful hunter.

Leavenworth, Kas., Oct. 18.—Petro Pierre, a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, was found guilty by a jury in the federal court here today on a charge of threatening the life of President Wilson. He was sentenced to serve three and one-half years in the federal penitentiary here, and upon his giving notice of appeal, bond was fixed at $7,000. The verdict was reached in twenty minutes.

Remits Fine for Punching a "Confessed I. W. W."

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 18.—Declaring that a confessed I. W. W. had no standing in the courts of the United States, Civil Judge A. J. Hedging today set aside a verdict which had been rendered by a jury in favor of a member of that organization. The man was J. H. Lane, a Finn, who was awarded $150 last week by a jury in a suit against Gust Psihogios for assault and battery.

TELEPHONE RATE QUESTION GOES BEFORE COURT

Firm Threatened with the Loss of Service Asks for Injunction.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The Security Mercantile agency, 155 North Clark street, gave notice yesterday that it will ask Judge Scanlan tomorrow morning to restrain the Chicago Telephone company from shutting off the service to Randolph 1187. That is the phone number of the agency.

The agency has a single line, flat rate phone at $125 a year, which was installed in 1908.

Under the temporary rate schedule approved by the state public utilities commission, this phone has been switched over to measured service. The bill alleges that this means $4 a month on the main telephone instrument for the first eighty outgoing messages, 5 cents each for the next twenty, 4 cents each for the next 100, 3 cents each for the third 100, and 2½ cents for each additional message.

Letters Show Difference.

The difference between the two systems of charging is indicated by the correspondence, which is made a part of the agency's application for the injunction.

Under the old flat rate system the agency's monthly bill was $11.92 for unlimited use of the phone. Under the measured service the monthly bill, which precipitated the court fight, totals $10.07.

The agency alleges the state public utilities commission had no power to fix rates without a full hearing. This is in accordance with a recent decision of the Sangamon county circuit court.

Rest on Phone Contract.

But Andalman and Cohen, attorneys for the agency—which has an office in the same suite—said yesterday afternoon their main contention is that the telephone company has attempted to violate a contract.

"That is prohibited by the constitution," said Mr. Andalman. "The public utilities act is illegal in so far as it purports to confer the power to break contracts."

"The Supreme court has said that the utilities commission has the power to regulate rates," it was suggested. "How can rates be changed without modification of these phone contracts?"

"The utilities commission has the power to change contracts which have been made since the public utilities act became operative on Jan. 1, 1914," he replied. "Before that, no."

STATE CASE NEAR END IN MURDER TRIAL OF NUN

Island, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The prosecution in the case of Mrs. Stanislawa Lipczynska, held for the murder of Sister Mary Janina, practically closed its case this afternoon. Court adjourned until Monday, when the defense will give its statement and proceed with its witnesses.

The people won a point this afternoon that seems to complete establishment of corpus delicti. The defense admitted that all of the rings given by members of Sister Janina's class when she took her perpetual vows could be accounted for, and it thus appears by elimination that the defense admits that the body found buried beneath the Isadore church is that of Sister Mary Janina, for her ring, the twenty-second in the class of twenty-two, was recovered with the remains.

Sister Mary Albina, secretary of the Order of Felician Sisters at Detroit, presented the secretarial records showing that Sister Janina was born Jan. 24, 1876, in Chicago, took her perpetual vows Aug. 25, 1901, and is recorded in the book of the order "Lost Aug. 23, 1907."

BRUNDAGE PUTS A "KICK" IN THE USE OF BAY RUM

Dixon (Ill.) Case Brings Opinion "Tonic" Can Be Sold.

It seems that in the little town of Dixon, Ill., some bibulous persons have been purchasing bay rum and drinking it, and raising Ned. It would appear that the stuff contains 58 per cent alcohol and that it is on sale in certain drug stores.

Now, these tidings came to the attention of Attorney General Edward J. Brundage, through the medium of the state's attorney resident in Dixon, and Mr. Brundage was called upon to give his ideas in the matter. Likewise in the matter of individuals carrying a bottle of bay rum in their hip pockets.

Brundage's View.

Mr. Brundage, after citing the law in regard to all these things, remarks:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that bay rum is ordinarily used, and intended for use, for other than beverage purposes, and the definition which the act gives to the term 'intoxicating liquor,' clearly indicates that when a liquid is not potable or suitable for being used as a beverage its sale is not prohibited by the fact.

"The character and use of bay rum are well recognized. The possibility of an occasional different use does not change its recognized and established character. It is possible a man may get drunk on bay rum, but in no fair or reasonable sense is it an intoxicating or potable liquor."

A Kick in Verdict.

However, Mr. Brundage believes that "if it becomes reasonably evident to the seller, that bay rum is coming into use as a popular tipple, such sale is a violation of the law.

And what he says about the sale of bay rum, says he, can also be applied to the carrying of it "on the hip."

A Little Mistake That Cost a Farmer $3,000 Each Year.

A FARMER in Illinois could not understand why his corn yield per acre was only 51 bushels. His soil was good and he had always rotated his crops and used manure. Yet his average was only 51 bushels on land that should produce nearer 80. In discussing the matter with a friend visiting him over the 1915 Christmas holidays he learned that he was wrong in believing that on land like his since he rotated his crops and used manure he needed no chemical fertilizer. At his friend's suggestion, the following season he again rotated his crops, used manure, but also used phosphorous potassium. His corn crop has now reached 89 bushels to the acre and next season he expects to do still better. For several years his little mistake had cost this farmer well over $3,000 each year.

Hundreds of costly little mistakes cut into profits and force the farmer, although sometimes he doesn't realize it, to do much of his work for nothing. And hundreds of little "tricks of the trade" and better methods cut down on labor needs, increase crops and boost profits. Little mistakes rob the farmer of his earnings, as in the above case—new and better ways produce results that make a man feel that he's doing valuable work—and getting worth-while pay.

Farming Secrets Now Told by Experts

For instance, do you know the simple methods by which other farmers average, per acre, 90 to 100 bushels of corn, 47 bushels of wheat, 85 bushels of oats, 240 bushels of potatoes—do you know how, through easy, sensible methods, butter-fat production has been brought up to 310 pounds per year, and how 200 hens bring to their owner, as a side line profit, over $2,000 a year—do you know how not to build barns, hog and poultry houses, corn cribs and hay sheds—do you know the best ways to inoculate alfalfa, to locate unprofitable cows, to select breeding stock of pullets, to scientifically combine fertilizers—do you know the best methods of dehorning, of improving seed by selection, of employing the gas engine and tractor?

The Big Question—Its Answer

Why do so many experienced farmers fail to make the most of their opportunities—fail to gather in the full profit their farm offers them? It's because they haven't learned the methods used by men who average per acre, 60 bushels of corn, 1 bales of cotton, 45 bushels of wheat, 85 bushels of oats, and other crops equally good. The average farmer is making costly mistakes every day and is not getting the amount of profit he could get, merely because he doesn't take heed of the experience of others—the wonderful new discoveries and results achieved by experts through new methods he lets pass by—and one rear plays "follow master" after the other, doing the same things, the same way, with the same results.

A valuable free booklet, "The Secret of Success in Farming," explaining about some of these points and containing much other important information, has been prepared by Sears, Roebuck and Co. This booklet also contains sample pages from Farm Knowledge and explains how, at a cost of over $50,000 for editorial material alone, the farming secrets, best methods, and successful experience of farming authorities in all parts of the country have been collected.

The Discoveries of Specialists

Just as we have the physician who specializes on one particular branch of medicine, so we have the farmer who specializes on one particular branch of farming. No one farmer can learn through his own experience as much about all branches of farming as all these specialists together have learned. The road to quick success in farming is to take full advantage of what all these authorities have discovered.

Never before has a work of the scope and value of FARM KNOWLEDGE been produced. There is nothing else like it. It contains the results of actual experience in improving methods and increasing profits; it was specially written in interesting style and language. It's up to the minute in every way, yet it upholds every old time method that has proved its merit.

Mail Coupon For Free Booklet

FARM KNOWLEDGE contains over 2,000 pages and over 3,000 illustrations. Each of the 4 volumes is nearly 2 in. thick. It is impossible to describe so important a work in this space. But we want everyone interested in farming to send for a copy of this valuable booklet, "The Secret of Success in Farming." Read about the new farming discoveries which have revolutionized old results, doubling and trebling profits. Don't miss this valuable little booklet. Mail coupon postal, or letter, NOW.

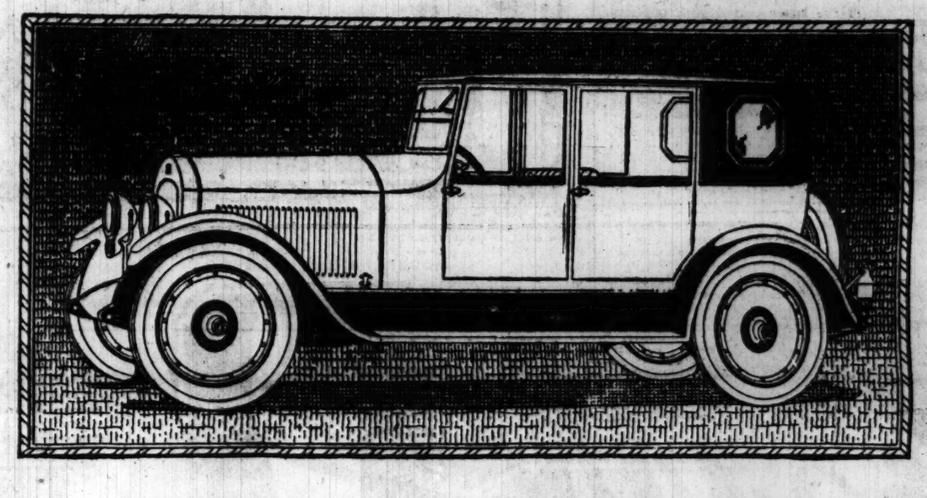
There's a Touch of Tomorrow INDIANAPOLIS in All That Cole Does Today

Turning Future Ideals Into Present Achievements



Creations Which Anticipate Coming Styles

A FORECAST of the future is the Cole Aero-EIGHT. In it, ideals which seemed intended for fulfillment only at some future time have become realities of the present.

It has ushered in a new vogue in motor car patterns. It has determined the trend which future styles will take.

Radiating a new beauty and dignity, the Aero-EIGHT elevates motor car designs for the first time to a plane commensurate with their advanced mechanical attainment.

It furnishes a new incentive to ownership; it affords a new satisfaction in possession. It gives to motoring a new significance.

Five years devoted exclusively to the building of eight-cylinder cars by one of the first two American manufacturers to produce an Eight, are responsible for its development.

Ten years of planning ahead—ten years dedicated to the creation of the new, the advanced, the original—give it the maturity of experience and sound judgment.

Increased Performance—Exclusive Designs

THERE is an indescribable charm about the Aero-EIGHT. Its winsome grace of line, its dashing attractiveness are a constant pride and delight—its rugged power a source of continual satisfaction.

Averaging 15,000 miles on tires, developing 80 horsepower, economical in its use of fuel, light in weight, fleet as the wind, tenacious in its adherence to the road and reposeful in its luxurious comfort, the Aero-EIGHT gives a new interpretation to motor car possibilities.

The new All-Season models introduce for the first time flush panel construction and represent a welcome departure from the traditions in enclosed car design.

The open cars are refreshingly different from the staid conventions of the past.

The harmony of color, richness of fabrics, taste in the selection of appointments denote the worthy craftsmanship of these distinguished cars.

So original in conception that their counterparts are not to be found in current design, they turn future ideals into present realities and stand as noteworthy additions to Cole's significant creations in advanced motor cars.

Waukegan's 2 Newspapers Consolidated Into One

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Consolidation of the two Waukegan daily newspapers, the Sun and the Gazette, was announced today. Publication of the latter ceased with today's issue. The Gazette was Lake county's oldest newspaper, having been in existence for sixty-five years. Its publishers, James M. Woodman and A. H. Richardson, give as their reasons for selling out to Frank G. and William J. Smith the acute shortage and comparatively high cost of print paper and the increased cost and shortage of labor, factors which have caused the consolidation of many newspapers throughout the country. The consolidated newspaper will be known as the Sun.

SENATOR BARBOUR TO SPEAK HERE.

Senator James J. Barbour will be one of the speakers next Tuesday evening at a meeting of technical men to be held at Fullerton hall, the Art institute, under the auspices of the general committee of the Technical Societies of Chicago. Engineers, architects, and chemists are included in the membership. Many civic matters will be discussed.

U. S. REGARD FOR MERCIER TO TAKE PRACTICAL FORM

New York, Oct. 18.—A new light was thrown today on the memorable sacrifices which Cardinal Mercier has made for his despoiled fellow countrymen with the announcement of the formation of a nonsectarian committee of fifty prominent citizens of New York, whose purpose it is to raise a testimonial fund as a practical expression of their regard for the heroic prelate.

The committee embraces men of every faith and creed and numbers among its executive members both Archbishop Hayes, head of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of New York, and Bishop Charles S. Burch, head of the Metropolitan Protestant Episcopal diocese.

George L. Duval, a committee member, in explaining the object of the body today, said:

"In his heroic work Cardinal Mercier has exhausted his resources and pledged his credit to a vast extent. The cardinal is recognized and proclaimed by the spokesmen of our leading universities, our great commercial organizations and the bar associatons as the personification of the moral force triumphant.

"This makes him the creditor of the world at large, but in addition to that he has stood as a bulwark against the forces of radicalism and disorder and the spread of bolshevism by allaying the discontent of his people."

GIRL SAVES FATHER'S LIFE.

Lawrence Crane, 85 years old, was overcome by gas escaping from a defective connection in the bedroom of his home ta 2530 West Jackson boulevard, yesterday. He was found by his daughter, who notified Dr. W. Marcussin, 2458 West Jackson boulevard, who revived him.

Unusual Opportunity for a Consulting, Development and Research Engineer

To be responsible for theoretical correctness of various Scientific Apparatus, etc., manufactured by a leading house; also to conduct any necessary research along all scientific lines and to supply the results of his investigations in such shape (sketches or specially constructed samples) that they will be economically manufacturable (mostly in small quantities), along modern lines, without too much re-designing.

Requires a man with very thorough theoretical (electrical, physical, chemical) training—at home with all apparatus pertaining to research and demonstration; whose statements and reports can be relied upon as authoritative. With sufficient practical designing and manufacturing experience to fully meet the above requirements. Also possibly to direct a small experimental department. And possibly to supervise final inspection of our products. Must know where to secure promptly any sort of scientific information and should have wide acquaintance among leaders in the scientific world. Above all, must be able to imagine himself in the user's place and act accordingly. Must be of tranquil mind and able to work freely with our organization. Age up to 50 years.

To such a man we offer a very responsible position, with suitable compensation, amid congenial folk. Replies will be held in strictest confidence and no reference will be investigated without permission. Please give all essential facts as concisely as possible.

HIGHEST ILLINOIS COURT UPHOLDS 'I. AND R.' BALLOT

Quick Work Needed to Certify Questions to 102 County Clerks.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The three "I. & R." propositions, submitted as public policy questions by the Hearst organization in Chicago politics, will appear on the November ballots.

This was determined finally and definitely yesterday afternoon by the Illinois supreme court. The court sustained the decision of Circuit Judge R. S. Smith of Sangamon county, before whom an injunction was sought to restrain Secretary of State Emmerson from certification of the three questions to the voters at the November election.

Language of the Court.

The opinion of the Supreme court, as rendered orally by Acting Chief Justice Cartwright, follows:

"A court of equity has no jurisdiction to enjoin the exercise of the purely political right of the people. The decision of Judge Smith of the Circuit court in dissolving the Payne injunction is therefore sustained."

A written opinion, it was announced, will be filed later.

The time limit for the certification of the questions involved to the 102 county clerks of Illinois so that the ballots may be printed properly, expires tomorrow. Upon the assumption that the Supreme court opinion of yesterday wipes out all possible complications, the case is now closed. That there may be local attacks directed against each of the 102 county clerks was suggested last night as a possibility as a last resort of E. W. Payne of Springfield, who sought the original restraining order.

Judge Smith in his opinion in the circuit court held that any question, practically, might be submitted to vote of the people under the public policy act. He said specifically, however, that the popular vote, in no case could be construed as an "instruction" or a "pledge" that could bind delegates to the constitutional convention who will be elected on Nov. 4.

What the Judge Decided.

Substantially, Judge Smith ruled that there is no legal method of holding from the "little ballot" the three questions, so long as the validity of the original petitions had not been attacked, but that the effect of the November vote, however it may result, has no effect whatever as to the conduct of delegates to the constitutional convention.

The Supreme Court, on the face of the returns from Springfield, affirms Judge Smith's position and authorizes Secretary of State Emmerson to proceed with the certification of the three questions on the November ballots.

The Three Questions.

The three questions backed by the Hearst interests in short are:

Shall an amendment to the constitution of Illinois, or shall any proposed statute of Illinois, without amendment or further legislative consideration, be submitted to popular vote on petition of 100,000 voters; and shall any act of the legislature be held up until ratified by popular vote, at the petition of 50,000 voters?

Shall the foregoing proposition be submitted separate and distinct from the new constitution that may be framed by the approaching constitutional convention? [This is the so-called "Gateway amendment," and is the real thing that the Hearst interests favor.]

Shall the new constitution carry to the state or to any subdivision of the state the right to take over any public utility, carrying the power to the unit involved to issue bonds outside of the legal maximum of bonded indebtedness, for purchase of such utility?

May Attack Petitions.

Attack is to be launched tomorrow, it is understood, against some of the petitions that have been filed for candidates for the constitutional convention. Most of these, it is learned, are candidates of the Labor party, that was not compelled to go to a party primary last month.

The point of attack, it is suggested, is that petitions of candidates are not signed by properly registered voters, as required by law.

The last day for the withdrawal of candidates in Cook county for constitutional convention delegates is next Wednesday. It is possible that there will be withdrawals.

LOWDEN PROCLAIMS AMERICANIZATION DAY ON OCT. 27

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 18.—In a proclamation, Gov. Frank O. Lowden today designated Monday, Oct. 27, as Americanization day in Illinois. Observance of the date, the anniversary of the birth of the late Theodore Roosevelt, is part of a nation-wide program.

"Upon that day I urge our people without regard to party, race, or religion, to assemble and take measures for the Americanization of all the people in their several communities," the proclamation said.

"I earnestly urge upon the schools of the state that they hold appropriate exercises for impressing anew upon the minds of the boys and girls of the state American ideals and American aspirations, and the solemn duty of the genuine Americans to combat with all their might the destructive foreign doctrines which are being imported to our shores."

LOWDEN INDORSED BY STATE HEAD OF G. O. P. WOMEN

Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, chairman of the Illinois Republican women's executive committee, yesterday declared her indorsement of Gov. Lowden as a Republican candidate in the forthcoming presidential campaign. She gave out the following statement:

"Gov. Lowden's candidacy should appeal to all Republicans because of the intense Americanism he has shown during his magnificent administration as war governor of Illinois. He has proved himself a man of action, who has the courage to take a strong, unwavering stand for the preservation of order and of our American institutions in times of unrest, and, not least important, he has put our state administration on a firm business basis by eliminating inefficiency and waste."

Illinois women have been steadily at work on organization plans ever since the initial conference of the executive committee on July 15 at Hotel La Salle, and the goal set by Mrs. Dobyns at that time—45,000 women in the political field by early winter—has never been lost to sight.

Bovo Found Guilty of Shooting Capt. Crippen

Joseph Bovo was found guilty on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon by a jury yesterday morning in Judge Joseph Sabath's court. He was charged with having shot Capt. Philip L. Crippen, who at that time was head of the morals bureau. The shooting occurred May 2, 1917, in the Schiller cafe, 333 East Thirty-first street, at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Woman Drops Dead While on a Shopping Tour

Mrs. Marie Wolterding, 45 years old, 3054 West North avenue, wife of Harry Wolterding, manager of the Wicker Park hall, went shopping in Milwaukee avenue yesterday. When she stopped in front of a store at 1538 Milwaukee avenue to look in the show window at some articles she suddenly fell to the sidewalk in a faint. When the police arrived the woman was dead.

GHOSTS OF YANKS BELIE CARRANZA VICTORY CLAIMS

Villa-Livest Corpse That Ever Haunted a Busy Propaganda Office.

BY CAPT. KENT HUNTER.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Daily dispatches come out of Mexico City telling in glowing terms of the successes of the Carranza armies, the satisfaction of the peons with the government, and the plans that are being made to reestablish the Mexican national and international financial position.

This week I talked with an American newspaper correspondent who has come out of Mexico City at the request of the Carranza government because he wrote things as he saw them.

"The Mexican constitution gives the president the power to order out, as inexpedient to the national welfare, any person he sees fit," said this correspondent. "It is the most muzzling censorship ever invented. Any cable dispatch from Mexico City should be given just as much weight as the official pro-Mexican propaganda handed out and distributed by the Mexican Peace society—no more and no less."

The Real Situation.

But as straws show the direction of the wind, compilation of apparently minor facts, through a period of six weeks, in which I have talked to a great many Mexicans and American on the situation across the border, serves to show conditions as they really are.

Carranza's own interview, given recently near his estate at Cuatro Cienegas, admitted that there are many places in Mexico that his government does not and cannot control. His promise to pay for damages by bandits was coupled with a question to Americans that is almost a plea, "Why do they go into those districts where we cannot protect them?"

The extent of the districts in which they might go by this limit would be extremely small.

Graveyards of Americans.

I have data available, which show that since 1915, when the revolution started in earnest, Americans have been killed in the various states of Mexico as follows:

Aguascalientes	2	Morelos	2
Campeche	4	Nueva Leon	6
Chiapas	4	Oaxaca	2
Chihuahua	102	Puebla	5
Coahuila	15	Queretaro	1
Colima	2	San Luis Potosi	3
Durango	12	Sinaloa	5
Federal district	4	Sonora	25
Guanajuato	1	Tabasco	1
Guerrero	3	Tamaulipas	40
Hidalgo	3	Tepic territory	6
Jalisco	9	Tlaxcala	1
Lower California	11	Vera Cruz	29
Mexico	15	Yucatan	2
Michoacan	5	Zacatecas	5

There is no attempt made here to convey the idea that this represents the entire list of Americans killed in Mexico. Nor does it include the robberies of Americans who escaped with their lives, the outrages on American women who lived to tell of it, the American men, women, girls, and boys held for ransoms which were paid. It just represents the cases of which I have seen first hand evidence.

An Answer to Carranza.

It furnishes the answer to Mr. Carranza's question. Americans have their entire financial resources, many of them, tied up in investments in Mexico—mines, cattle, oil, commercial enterprise. They have to stay in.

And the very places where the largest American concentrations are, and where—according to official Carranza bulletins from Mexico City—the Carranza army has cleaned up the bandits, are the centers where the largest figures of Americans killed appear.

Nine dispatches from Mexico in September stated that Pancho Villa has been routed and his power nullified. Chihuahua—the home operating ground of Villa—shows 102 American killings.

Maybe This Is Answer.

Perhaps the answer lies in an across the table conversation at a recent luncheon here in El Paso.

Maj. Gen. Howze, commander of the El Paso military district, and Gov. Larrazollo, Mexican born executive of the American state of New Mexico, sat facing each other.

"Mexico must get back to the settled state she was in during the reign of Diaz," said Gov. Larrazollo, "but I don't think she can do it without the American people."

"I'll have to amend that to read 'without the American army,'" said Maj. Gen. Howze.

"O, I hope not," said the American governor; "but I hope that, if it must come to armed intervention, it will be bloodless."

"Amend again," said the general. "It won't be bloodless, any more than Cuba and the Philippines were bloodless; but for the good of the islands and of Cuba intervention was necessary."

Oklahoma Women Vote in Congressional Primary

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 18.—With Oklahoma women casting their first ballots in a congressional election, reports from counties in the Fifth Oklahoma district told of an unusually light early vote in today's primary election. Candidates to succeed the late Congressman J. B. Thompson are being chosen.

A Very Unusual Home

The house is one of the most beautiful and distinctive in America, both in architecture and natural surroundings. A comfortable, all-year-round suburban home within a half hour, by rail or motor, from CHICAGO.

The grounds consist of about four acres, oval shaped. The landscaping is naturalistic, emphasizing the native flowering trees and shrubs. Its immediate surroundings are appropriate to the beautiful suburb in which it is located—Riverside—often likened to a well kept park.

The owners are now living in the east and the home will be sold COMPLETELY FURNISHED.

They are particularly desirous of having it fall into appreciative hands. The price placed upon it, when compared to its value and original cost, is moderate.

Those who have enjoyed its hospitality have found it not only a rarely beautiful home to visit, but a satisfying and harmonious home in which to live. The undersigned will be pleased to furnish really interested persons with plans and photographs and to show them the house.

BETTER BUYING—BETTER BUYING—BETTER BUYING

Rich Man
Poor Man
Beggar Man
Thief

Often the chief characteristic which makes the rich man rich is his superior ability as a buyer—his knowledge of how to spend money.

Business men must buy wisely or they face bankruptcy. The high cost of living is forcing American householders to recognize that they also must buy wisely or fail.

One of the most important factors in Better Buying is the habit of reading ads. When a Chicago merchant has a value to offer of which he is proud—a value which challenges competition—he pays for the privilege of telling you about it in a Tribune ad.

"Better Buyers" know this, follow the ads consistently, and are not so much worried about the high cost of living.

Read Today's Ads Now. They Have Money-Saving Messages for You.

The NEW EDISON

No needles to change. Even records of all other makes sound more human when played on The New Edison

THE living voice has been Re-Created true to life by Mr. Edison. It is impossible to distinguish the Re-Creation from the original living tone even when heard side by side.

¶ Over two million people, including the most prominent critics in America, have witnessed public tests wherein the living artist has sung in direct comparison with his or her voice as Re-Created by Mr. Edison. Without exception, the verdict in every case is the same—with eyes closed or the room darkened it is impossible to tell when the artist is singing or when it is the marvelous New Edison you are listening to.

¶ If you delight in beautiful furniture, then by all means see the charming exhibit of New Edison Period Cabinets. It includes Sheraton—Jacobean—Chippendale—William and Mary and Eighteen Century English Cabinets illustrative of the very finest examples of the craftsmanship of these golden ages of furniture designing.

¶ Miss Elsie DeWolfe, America's foremost interior decorator, after examining the new line of Edison Period Cabinets volunteered this unqualified endorsement of them:

"The Period Cabinets which Mr. Edison has adopted are in pleasant contrast to the rather grotesque cases one so frequently sees—the superior furniture value of the Edison cabinets can scarcely fail to impress the lover of good furniture."

¶ And they will impress you. So come in tomorrow and see these beautiful cabinets—hear the marvelous music Re-Creations. Both will delight and surprise you.

"I was astounded at my new power over men and women. People actually went out of their way to do things for me—they seemed EAGER TO PLEASE ME."

The Secret of Making People Like You

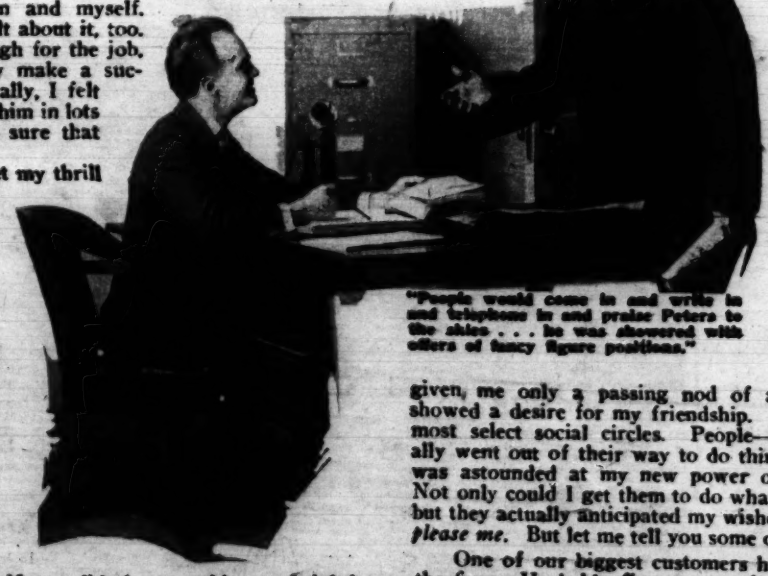
"Getting people to like you is the quick road to success—it's more important than ability," says this man. It surely did wonders for him. How he does it—a simple method which anyone can use instantly.

ALL the office was talking about it, and we were wondering which one of us would be the lucky man.

There was an important job to be filled—as Assistant-to-the-President. According to the general run of salaries in the office, this one would easily pay from $7,000 to $10,000 a year.

The main requisite, as we understood it, was striking personality and the ability to meet even the biggest men in their offices, their clubs and their homes on a basis of absolute equality. This the firm considered of even more importance than knowledge of the business.

YOU know just what happens when news of this sort gets around an office. The boys got to picking the man among themselves. They had the choice all narrowed down to two men—Harrison and myself. That was the way I felt about it, too. Harrison was big enough for the job, and could undoubtedly make a success of it. But, personally, I felt that I had the edge on him in lots of ways. And I was sure that the firm knew it, too.



Never shall I forget my thrill of pleasure when the president's secretary came into my office with a cheery smile, looked at me meaningly, handed me a bulletin and said, "Mr. Frazer, here is the news about the new Assistant-to-the-President." There seemed to be a new note of added respect in her attitude toward me. I smiled my appreciation as she left my desk.

At last I had come into my own! Never did the sun shine so brightly as on that morning, and never did it seem so good to be alive! These were my thoughts as I gazed out of the window, seeing not the hurrying throngs, but vivid pictures of my new position flashing before me. And then for a further joyous thrill I read the bulletin. It said, "Effective January 1, Mr. Henry J. Peters, of our Cleveland office, will assume the duties of Assistant-to-the-President at the home office."

PETERS! Peters!—surely it could not be Peters! Why, this fellow Peters was only a branch-office salesman.

Personality! Why, he was only five feet four inches high, and had no more personality than a mouse. Stack him up against a big man and he would look and act like an office boy. I knew Peters well and there was nothing to him, nothing at all.

January the first came and Peters assumed his new duties. All the boys were openly hostile to him. Naturally, I felt very keenly about it, and did not exactly go out of my way to make things pleasant for him—not exactly!

But our open opposition did not seem to bother Peters. He went right on with his work and began to make good. Soon I noticed that, despite my feeling against him, I was secretly beginning to admire him. He was winning over the other boys, too. It was not long before we all buried our little hatchets and pulled up with Peters.

The funny thing about it was the big hit he made with the people we did business with. I never saw anything like it. They would come in and write in and telephone in to the firm and praise Peters to the skies. They insisted on doing business with him, and gave him orders of a size that made us dizzy to look at. And offers of positions!—why, Peters had almost as many fancy-figured positions offered to him as a dictionary has words.

WHAT I could not get into my mind was how a little, unassuming, ordinary-to-look-at chap like Peters could make such an impression with everyone—especially with influential men. He seemed to have an uncanny influence over people. The masterly Peters of today was an altogether different man from the commonplace Peters I had first met years ago. I could not figure it out, nor could the other boys.

One day at luncheon I came right out and asked Peters how he did it. I half expected him to evade. But he did not. He let me in on the secret. He said he was not afraid to do it because there was always plenty of room at the top.

"People would come in and write in and telephone in and praise Peters to the skies . . . he was showered with offers of fancy figure positions."

What Peters told me acted on my mind in exactly the same way as when you stand on a hill and look through binocular glasses at objects in the far distance. Many things I could not see before suddenly leaped into my mind with startling clearness. A new sense of power surged through me. And I felt the urge to put it into action.

Within a month I was getting remarkable results. I had suddenly become popular. Business men of importance who had formerly given me only a passing nod of acquaintance suddenly showed a desire for my friendship. I was invited into the most select social circles. People—even strangers—actually went out of their way to do things for me. At first I was astounded at my new power over men and women. Not only could I get them to do what I wanted them to do, but they actually anticipated my wishes and seemed eager to please me. But let me tell you some of my experiences:

One of our biggest customers had a grievance against the firm. He held off payment of a big bill and switched to one of our competitors. I was sent to see him. He met me like a cornered tiger. A few words and I calmed him. Inside of fifteen minutes he was showering me with apologies. He gave me a check in full payment, another big order, and promised to continue giving us all his business.

For certain reasons it became necessary for the firm to obtain a signed letter from a prominent public man. Three of our men had tried, and failed. Then I was given the job. I felt I had been made the "goat." But I got the signed letter, and with it an inside tip which enabled us to land a prize order about which our competitors are still guessing and wondering.

Then trouble sprang up at one of our factories. The men talked strike. Things looked ugly. I was sent to straighten it out. On the eve of a general walkout, I pacified the men and headed off the strike. And not only this, but ever since then this factory has led all our other plants in production.

I could tell you dozens of similar instances, but they all tell the same story—the ability to make people like you, believe what you want them to believe and to do what you want them to do. I take no personal credit for what I have done. All the credit I give to the method Peters told me about. We have told it to lots of our friends, and it has enabled them to do just as remarkable things as Peters and I have done.

Which reminds me: One of my wife's close friends moved to another town where she was a stranger. My wife of course knew of my method. She told it to her friend with the idea that it might be of assistance to her in meeting new people. It helped so wonderfully that in a very short time she won the close friendship of many of the "best families" in the town. Everyone wonders how she did it. But WE know.

BUT YOU want to know what method I used to do all these remarkable things. It is this: You know that everyone does not think alike. What one likes another dislikes. What pleases one offends another. And what offends one pleases another. Well, there's your cue. You can make an instant hit with anyone if you say the things they want you to say and act the way they want you to act. Do this and they will surely like you, and believe in you, and will go miles out of their way to PLEASE YOU.

You can do this easily by knowing certain simple things. Written on every man, woman and child are signs, as clearly and as distinctly as though they were in letters a foot high, which show you in one quick glance exactly what to say and to do to please them—to get them to believe what you want them to believe—to think as you think—to do exactly what you want them to do.

Knowing these simple signs is the whole secret of getting what you want out of life—of making friends, of business and social advancement. Every great leader uses this method. That is why he IS a leader. Use it yourself and you will quickly become a leader—nothing can stop you. And you will want to use it if for no other reason than to protect yourself against others.

WHAT Peters told me at luncheon that day was this: "Get Dr. Blackford's 'Reading Character at Sight.'" I did so. This is how I learned to do all the remarkable things I have told you about.

You have heard of Dr. Blackford, the Master Character Analyst. Many concerns will not employ a man without first getting Dr. Blackford to pass on him. Concerns such as Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Baker-Vawter Company, Scott Paper Company and many others pay Dr. Blackford large annual fees for advice on dealing with human nature.

So great was the demand for these services that Dr. Blackford could not even begin to fill all engagements. So Dr. Blackford has explained the method in a simple seven-lesson course entitled "Reading Character at Sight." Even a half hour's reading of this remarkable course will give you an insight into human nature and a power over people which will surprise you.

Such confidence have the publishers in Dr. Blackford's Course, "Reading Character at Sight," that they will gladly send it to you on approval. Send no money. Merely fill in and mail the coupon. The complete course will go to you instantly on approval, all charges prepaid. Look it over thoroughly. See if it lives up to the claims made for it. If you do not want to keep it, then return it, and the transaction is closed. And if you decide to keep it—as you surely will—then merely remit Five Dollars in full payment.

Remember, you take no risk, you assume no obligation. The entire course goes to you on approval. You've everything to gain—nothing to lose. So mail the coupon NOW, while this remarkable offer remains open.

"In a very short time she won the close friendship of many of the 'best families' in town."

The Mark of a Delicious Table Butter

Made of coconuts, but with the creamery butter taste.

It's Nucoa—the churned goodness of rich coconuts and pure pasteurized milk. Made with care, cleanliness and a conscience. Worked and salted like creamery butter—rich, clean and wholesome—and it stays so.

Price? It costs very much less than cow butter—not much more than half. This is important—very, but, after all, it is incidental. Nucoa is the more nutritious. We stand ready to prove that. It is very rich and sweet. Delicious in flavor. An honest economy, without the slightest sacrifice.

Instead of Cow Butter—

NUCOA

The Original Nut Butter

Costs less because coconuts are more plentiful than cows

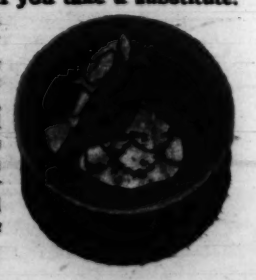
New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order 50 cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

La May Face Powder Stays on Better Than any Other

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. Save this notice.



FIGHTING FOR POLAND

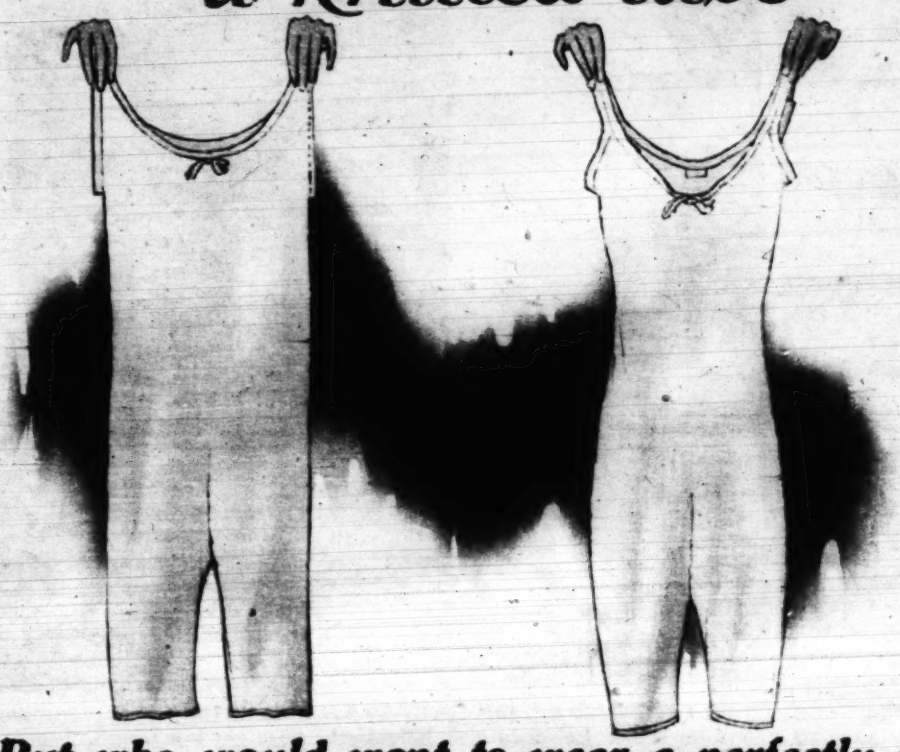
Yes, your underwear begins just like a knitted tube



An ordinary union suit. No shaping at all. Isn't it ridiculous that you should ever be asked to buy this kind of knit underwear?

Now comes the Kayser Knit Union Suit carefully shaped to fit. It looks its comfort, doesn't it?

But who would want to wear a perfectly straight tube?

YET that is exactly the way ordinary cotton or lisle knit underwear is cut. Just two slits for the arms, a piece slashed out for the neck, then a "V" makes the legs—and there you are! Back and front just the same width—sides perfectly straight—shoulder lines straight out.

Is it any wonder that the name of knit underwear has been Discomfort?

Now comes new knit underwear—Kayser's—tailored with all the skill that has made Kayser "Italian" Silk Underthings and Silk Gloves famous.

Kayser cuts each knit union suit by hand—one at a time. Cuts out roomy arm sizes carefully, shapes them—shapes the neck so as to make it lower in front than in the back—shapes the front fuller than the back, makes the hips roomy, shapes the entire suit to fit the body.

And this is why, from women who are stout and women who are short, from women who are tall and women who are slim have come the letters that show how Kayser Knit Underthings have given them an entirely new idea of knit underwear.

No longer do you have to be satisfied with underwear that is a straight tube. Kayser Knit Union Suits are really tailored. They do not sag in the back or bind across the front—the waistline doesn't "ride up" to the middle of your back—the seat is roomy—the flaps are specially cut so they must stay closed.

You won't know how good-looking and how comfortable a knit union suit can be until you've worn one made by Kayser. Go to any department store today and ask for your size. Go home and put it on. See how perfectly it fits, how slender and shapely you look in it! JULIUS KAYSER & Co., New York City.

Ample across the back, but fuller across the bust, as a knit union suit should be. Does it seem too good to be true?

So soft and snowy! And though they "give" with your slightest move, they never lose their shape.

Kayser KNIT UNDERWEAR

Marvelfit

COPYRIGHTED: 1919, BY JULIUS KAYSER & CO., NEW YORK, MAKERS OF SILK GLOVES, "ITALIAN" SILK UNDERWEAR, SILK HOSIERY, KNIT UNDERWEAR

Paradoxical though it may seem, this evening wrap of exquisite white Persian lamb, worn by Miss Julia Sanderson in "The Canary," is edged with sumptuous blue fox fur. It is gorgeously full, billowy rather than clinging, and yet the suggestion of slimness in the slight figure beneath is very artfully conveyed.

A floating creation of color and charm is this evening frock, also Miss Sanderson's. Of orchid satin and tulle, with wisps of tulle for the sleeves and a single satin pansy to decorate the bodice, it is grace and beauty incarnate. The last exquisite touch—a band of frosted laurel leaves about the head!

That you may not be deceived by the lines of this black velvet frock, elaborately brocaded in jet, it is fair to say that it is paneled front and back, and that a narrow belt connects the two panels. In the very severity of its lines a most unusual distinction and style is achieved; fascinating rather than smart, picturesque—and still modish.

MAE MURRAY is a favorite with some.

She's a blonde little person who was in the musical comedies before she decided on the pictures. The great question once settled as to whether or not she would photograph well, she went to work for Lasky, where she made "Kitty Bellairs," "To Have and to Hold," "The Plough Girl," and a lot of others. Then she went to Universal. Then back to Lasky. Now she's with Universal again. Mae Tinee.

FAY TINCHER made 'em haw-haw when moving pictures were "nickel shows."

Miss Tincher was born in Topeka, Kas. When? Ah, ask me, ask me—I don't know. She went to the Ziegfeld Musical college, Chicago; was on the stage in vaudeville and musical comedy, and with Joe Weber.

Her screen career started with Reliance-Majestic. Then she went to Fine Arts. She now heads the Christie Special Comedies.

In appearance she's 5 feet 2 inches tall, has black hair and brown eyes, and weighs 110 pounds. Mae Tinee.

Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

A skin soft, clear, delicate in coloring

No other beauty speaks so instantly

A LITTLE flash of envy, yes—but just as surely, just as instantly, every one of us has felt the attraction that a lovely complexion always exerts.

And, if your complexion is dull and lifeless—without charm—how little all other attractions count! If you are bothered with blackheads, if your skin is marred by little blemishes, if even the pores have become enlarged; how completely your appearance is spoiled.

When other girls have lovely skins, how hard it seems for you not to have this greatest of all charms—a skin that is clear and dazzling.

Do you know that there is nothing that so responds to the proper treatment as your skin? No matter how much you may neglect it, every day it is being made over, even without your help. New skin is continually forming, as old skin dies. It is this new skin that responds so quickly to the proper treatment. You can keep it free from the blemishes that marred the old skin.

Blackheads can be corrected. Conspicuous nose pores can be reduced. Pale, sallow skins can be stimulated to have lovely color.

The cause of oily skin and shiny nose

Take one of the most common of skin troubles—an oily skin and a nose that will get shiny. Do you know what causes this condition?

A certain amount of oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth and supple. This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. When it is too abundant the result is an oily skin and a shiny nose. You can relieve this embarrassing condition by using the following treatment:

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Use this treatment as often as your skin requires it, nightly if necessary. Before long, you will notice a marked improvement.

The new steam treatment for pale sallow skins

Then, a pale sallow skin. Do you despair of ever rousing yours? Try the new steam treatment. See how just one treatment brings the color to your cheeks.

One night a week fill your bowl full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the bowl and cover your head and the bowl with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds.

Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this, wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin in an upward and outward motion. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The other nights of the week, cleanse your face thoroughly in the Woodbury way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with cold.

These are only two of the famous Woodbury treatments for the commoner skin troubles. Get the famous booklet of treatments and see for yourself how thoroughly the needs of the different types of skin have been studied.

You will notice in a few days the good a Woodbury treatment does your skin. The very first treatment will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. This only means that your skin is responding to a more thorough and stimulating kind of cleansing than it has been accustomed to. After a few nights this drawn feeling will disappear, and your skin will emerge from its nightly treatment with such a soft, clean, healthful feeling that you will never again want to use any other method of cleansing your face.

You will find Woodbury's Facial Soap on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States and Canada. The booklet containing the directions for the famous Woodbury treatments is wrapped around each cake. Get a cake today and begin using it tonight. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Would you like to have a trial size cake?

For 6 cents we will send you the trial size cake (enough for a week of any Woodbury facial treatment) together with the booklet of treatments. Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. WILL you pay a dollar for a hand and nail brush that will last and stand up in service the way this Boston user says it does? Read his testimonial:

"The hand brush for which I paid one dollar is the best thing of its kind that I ever owned. During the several months that it has been in my possession it has received the very hardest kind of use, for I own an automobile and make my own repairs, and generally my hands are a sight after work of that character.

"To get them in presentable condition I have used Old Dutch Cleanser, Gold Dust, Naptha Soap, ammonia solution, etc., and a vigorous application of the brush, and today the brush is as good as when I first used it—the bristles just as firm and stiff, the wood back just as solid and resistant against water as ever. Five times the price paid for it could not tempt me to part with it if another was not available."

Two Men in the Dark—and What Happened When One Switched on the Light.

THE rain was not of the kind which drizzles a suggestion of tame sadness; it came on at nightfall with a rush of cold autumn wind and covered the city with the wail and violence of wild tragic forecast. Perhaps there was in it also the laughter, the hysterical laughter of the gods of Fate.

Uptown there is a certain apartment building; the owners of it have asked that its name be withheld. Reason enough! The place is most respectable; even more—some apartments there rent for twelve thousand a year.

At eight o'clock a taxicab, skidding over the black asphalt, came to a stop before this magnificent cliff dwellers structure and stood panting and steaming in the downpour. No one behind the lighted windows above could hear it because the wind and rain and swirl and howl of the storm from the sea, bringing its clamor of hitherto untold secrets from the Atlantic drowned the thumping of its engine.

A man in a gray tweed storm coat and wearing a black derby with a square top paid the taxicab driver through the window and made a run through the deluge for the front door. He did not open that door at once, but peered in through the plate glass — perhaps to see whether or not the uniformed elevator boy was sitting under the palms in the marble lobby. While he stared from the darkness and the rain beat down upon him the taxicab rounded the next corner and was gone. The man turned nervously as if he had suddenly felt eyes upon him. It is extraordinary how few are the places and times when at least one pair of human eyes —and often the particular, fateful pair—do not see. And now, fateful or not, there was a chance. Across the street under the overhanging dripping lower branches of a park tree, but almost indistinguishable through the diagonals and the flowing veils of rain and darkness, the man at the door saw a human figure.

He drew his head down into the collar of his coat, as an offended turtle, and opening the door into the vacant lobby, made his way to the apartment formerly occupied by a specialist in brain surgery who went to France with a certain medical unit in 1915, having moved out all his things and directed certain well known real estate agents to sublease for the balance of his term.

That the man who entered on this night was the sub-lessee appeared probable. It was evident that he had been in and out often enough. Without touching the electric switches he reached for a cigar from the half emptied box on the hall stand and though the whole apartment was as dark as the inside of a shutterless camera, his fingers moved accurately. He felt along the wall, across the tapestry that hung invisible there and entered the living room where the rain dripped from the rough tweed and from the rim of his peculiar hat onto the polished floor. He went across the room to a screen made of old Spanish embossed leather and behind its protection he lit his cigar with a short, quick, tiny flare of a match, and drew a deep inhalation of the smoke. A violent spell of coughing resulted, but the man did not care about that; there was no one else in the apartment and the doors and window glass were luxuriously heavy and almost sound proof.

Indeed the man spoke aloud when his cough ceased. He said, "That's the third time!"

Immediately, as if his remark were connected in some way with the figure he had seen, he went to the front windows and parting the heavy curtains a little he stared out into the rain.

The storm still wailed its threats, its warnings, its dead men's tales and the rain and darkness outside were mixed like a thick black batter. Suddenly another taxicab turning the corner a block or two away, with its radiant eyes threw a thin, milky light along the tree tops, whipped and twisted, staggered and thrashed in the wind like a motley lot of drunken soldiers. The figure, which had been slinking in their shelter on the sidewalk, had gone.

The man within, however, was not at ease; drawing off his overcoat and hat, he threw them away from him onto an expensive rug.

"The devil!" said he.

There was a long pause of silence as if the man was meditating, but then, as if he had called to one who waited a summons, there came the tinkle of falling glass in the rear of the apartment. Afterward all was still again except for a new sound—the sound of the storm as if it had found its way through some aperture. Its roar had been reduced to whispers, but they were whispers of the sea of dismal wastes, of the unsealed lips of those who have died by violence. The voices rose in shrieks suggestive of the blasts of wind and the wet swashed night. And into the heavy warm air of the apartment laden with its mixed odors of stale and fresh cigar smoke there ran rivulets and tiny streams of colder air, smelling of the salt of the sea, wet cold, salty, like sips of iced clam juice.

The man stooped his tall, graceful figure and became a reptile, alert in the face of danger, apprehensive of some invader who under cover of the noise of the storm had made an entrance into the rear of the building. The lessee of the twelve thousand dollar a year flat, with his face twisted into an ugly grin, crawled and squirmed snake-like along the wall, crouched behind a leather chair, fat with luxurious upholstery, and there he waited like a poisonous lizard in ambush.

A lull came in the faraway murmur of the storm and he could hear faintly the mumble of movements in the apartment above; he could hear the faint rattle of a paper disturbed by the puffs of air entering the broken window in the distant kitchen and coming through the series of rooms and doorways between. He could hear something else too; it was the tiny squish of water in a pair of shoes. The feet in these shoes were put down cautiously. They approached almost noiselessly and with irritating pauses of caution. Squish! Then silence. Squish. A long wait. . . Squish!

He, who was behind the chair, realized that these sounds were fading; the water in the shoes had been running out. Soon the feet would proceed silently. They would approach without noise. He listened. No squish. He waited long, long breathless moments. No sound. The intruder might have stopped. He might be coming on with silent, sliding paces.

The man in hiding waited with his thin lips twisting back and forth across the edges of his even, white teeth. His ears having failed to register the movements of the other, he drew in slow noiseless breaths through his

The intruder stared into the toothless mouth of a blue steel revolver.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE GENERAL HAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

MANY mysterious things were happening under the rose bush. There was much pounding of hammers and the tiny window in the Teenie Weenie work shop twinkled with light quite late into the night.

"What's all this here mysterious doin's?" asked Grandpa, who had ventured out for a walk in the warm sunshine.

"I don't know, Grandpa," answered the General. "Some secret, I suppose which we will find out when they are ready to tell us."

"Well, I reckon there ain't any good in such sneakin' ways and I'll just bet there will be some trouble cooked up out of it too," growled the old man as he shuffled off and sat down on a hickory nut shell.

The General, being at the head of the Teenie Weenie family, never interfered with the little people's fun and he never asked questions, for he knew that they would tell him in good time.

"General," said the Old Soldier one morning, "as a personal favor I want to ask you not to go beyond the hill back of the Lovers' bungalow, for we are arranging a little affair and we wish to keep it a secret."

The General promised and for the next two days there was a great pounding of hammers from that direction.

The Lady of Fashion and Mrs. Lover bustled about busily and the Cook and Gogo spent all their time in the tiny kitchen.

One noon, while the General sat reading in the Library, the Doctor and the Old Soldier entered the tiny room.

"General," said the Doctor, "I want to ask you to let me blindfold you and lead you on a short walk. It is a sort of experiment I'd like to try and I don't want you to ask where you are to go."

"All right," answered the good natured Teenie Weenie, "I'll do it."

The Doctor tied a tiny silk handkerchief over the General's eyes and led him down the steps out into the Teenie Weenie yard. After they had walked a short distance the Doctor seated the General on a bench and told him to remove the handkerchief.

The General snatched the bandage from his eyes and he saw a most remarkable thing.

The General sat at a great table around which were seated all the Teenie Weenies except the children. The table was square with a hollow center and that was filled with wonderful flowers. A big arch of flowers extended over the hollow square much like the handle of a basket.

"W-W-W-W-Why, what's all this for?" gasped the astonished General.

"It's your birthday," shouted several of the Teenie Weenies.

The Lady of Fashion, the Dunce, and Gogo waited on the table and they were kept very busy carrying on the roasted frog hams, baked minnow, and the many other things the little folks had to eat.

While the dessert was being brought on, the Poet recited a poem, and, at a given signal, a bird flew out of a bush near by and settled on top of the arch over the table. In its mouth it carried a wonderful sword which it presented to the General. The sword had been made by Paddy Pinn and the Old Soldier. The blade was hammered out of a fine steel needle and the handle and scabbard were covered with gold.

The little folks had a lovely time and some ate so much they had pains in their teenie weenie tummies, but the Cook heated several dry beans which, when they were wrapped in a piece of cloth, made very good hot water bottles.

long nose, hoping to find in the air some telltale odor of the other person.

It came when the intruder passed the chair in the thick syrup of the blackness; it was the smell of wet woolen clothing, of soaked leather, of stale rain water, seasoned with the prickly smell of some spice, perhaps cloves. A moment or two later the one who had passed collided with the wall at the front end of the living room.

There was an imprecation and later a sigh: the newcomer feeling a way through the mud of the dark had evidently been assured that the apartment was empty. From that moment the movements showed that caution had been laid aside. Crossing the room diagonally, the moving feet collided with a leather couch and then went on carelessly until their owner had found the wall again. The sound of fingers feeling along the grass cloth paper stopped at the wide entrance to the front hall of the apartment, and then there came a whisper as if the voice of the person had said, "Ha"—as if, indeed, a goal had been reached. A chair was moved and then the intruder sat down; the cushion gave forth a sigh as air was expelled from it under the sudden application of weight.

The man, who had subleased this apartment, waited impatiently. He wondered no doubt why the other person had gone to so much pains to break in if he were to be satisfied to sit down in a comfortable chair and relieve a passing weariness. If one came to do something, let him do it! But the other merely sighed and made a sound like that of a wet tongue moving across dry lips.

To be crouching behind a chair unable to move a muscle without risk of disclosure would become unendurable. The man who was doing it felt the ache of strained position slowly saturate his sinews and then eat into the marrow of his bones. Twenty minutes passed. He could stand it no longer!

Slowly, painfully he rose from his crouching. He extended his left hand behind him until it touched the wall. The fingers of this hand crept along the wainscoating to the door jamb; they crept cautiously back until they came in contact with a familiar plunger of an electric switch. He pressed it. An explosion of light!

One fraction of a second was enough to photograph with exactness the details shown by this flood, this bath, this assault of sudden glare which exposed the room.

The stranger who had come in like a bird of evil omen from the storm was seated facing the door, and the light caught an expression on his face which was suggestive of the grim mood of one who waits patiently for his prey. His was a lean and angular frame, and lean legs were crooked into rectangles, and lean arms were resting on sharp angled elbows. All his angularity was emphasized by the fact that his clothing was watersoaked and the dark blue serge of an old suit was clinging closely to his lean, strong limbs and his lean, strong body. In his long fingered right hand he held an instrument of battery, persuasion and unconsciousness often called a "life preserver." It was made of black leather with a knob filled with bird shot, and it dangled like the limp neck of a poisonous and death dealing asp for the moment relaxed in sleep.

When its owner turned, his face appeared white, haggard, of exaggerated length. Its wrinkles were deep—deep in the high forehead, deep around the eyes, deep at the base of the long nose and around the mouth with its thin red lips parted in a smile, either sad or vicious, which appeared as fixed as if the lower part of the countenance were molded in plaster paris, and therefore gave to the man a strange appearance of inscrutability.

"Throw that blackjack on the floor," commanded the other man. "I've got you covered, my fine visitor."

The intruder stared into the toothless mouth of a blue steel revolver barrel and without changing a line of his unreadable face he relaxed his fingers and his implement of attack fell onto the hardwood floor.

If a third pair of eyes could have stared in upon these two men who met each other's gaze, it would have seen in the setting of a large room filled with new rich furniture and new rich hangings, a remarkable contrast between two individuals. This contrast was almost amusing because superficially the men were alike. Both were lean and tall, both had long faces and high foreheads, both had deep set eyes and heavy brows, both were without beards except for the uncut stubble which had blackened the mouth and chin of the one in the chair.

The foremost difference between them was in their comparative activity. The lessee of the apartment was eternally in movement; his face twitched, his mouth squirmed, his eyes shifted as if every thought disturbed their position, and at every half dozen breaths he snuffed his nose as if there were some hard and bony growth obstructing the free intake of air. His free hand moved its long fingers. The thumb rubbed imaginary pellets against the nervous tips of the digits.

The other man, the visitor from the storm, was like a carved wooden thing. His deep set eyes stared without expression; his body was motionless. Even the cords on his neck, showing above a flannel shirt collar, remained as they had fixed themselves when he turned his head. Both men were gray, but the hair of the visitor was well arranged, as it had been when he removed his soft felt hat; the hair of the host was a tousle through which he had run his nervous fingers.

"I've got you," said the latter, in a rather thin but low voice—the voice of one used to the customs and conversation of gentle persons.

"Yes, you got me," the other replied. "I know that. Now go ahead and send for the police."

"Send for the police?" the armed man said. "Why, yes. I hadn't thought—"

He appeared rather surprised at the suggestion.

"You're lucky I didn't kill you," said he. "You came in here to steal, eh? Maybe to slug me with that thing you had in your paw. Why did you sit down?"

"Cold and tired," the other answered.

The host sat down in the leather chair behind which he had hidden; he rested the revolver on his knee and smiled. His smile was not a gentle and fixed and inscrutable smile such as appeared on the face of his visitor as he sat with his wet clothes steaming, but a smile of shrewdness, resource, craft.

"This is interesting," he said suddenly. "Very interesting. Let me introduce myself to you. I am Valentine—Edes Valentine. I take it you are one of those gentlemen who are proud of the title of yegg. Aren't you a bit old for the game?"

"I'm 51," said the other in a dull and noncommittal voice. "Where are you from, Mr. Valentine?"

"From Paris," said the other sharply.

"That so? Well—here we are."

"Good!" said Valentine. "I like that spirit. If one is to be villainous it is an art to be villainous cheerfully. All the better if one is a professional villain. Come, Mr.——"

"Blank—Mr. Blank," prompted the visitor.

"Well, Mr. Blank, as you choose to call yourself, sit there in that chair for a moment. If you will pardon me, I'll ask you not to move so that I will not have the pain of shooting a round and uncomfortable hole in your head."

Valentine stepped swiftly backward until he could peep between the heavy curtains at the front window. He looked out again into the blackness of the night and heard faintly the wail of the wind which swashed the water against the plate glass. Then he returned.

"I have an idea," he said.

"What's the idea?" asked Blank.

"I was thinking about life."

"I was—about death," said the other.

"Tut-tut," continued Valentine. "My idea is a much more happy idea. I was thinking about the contrast between us my friend."

"I admit it," said the other.

"I want to make a proposition," Valentine went on. "Yes, to you. It was a happy thought. You have suggested it and it is a very happy thought. It appeals to my imagination. It appeals to my whimsical sense. I think I can say that it is a thought of genius."

"Yes?" said the watersoaked man. "What's the idea?"

"It's this," Valentine said eagerly, as if he were a skilled salesman seizing his opportunity to state terms. "Here we are. You are 51. I don't know your history. I don't care. Went wrong. Spent time in jails. Maybe learned the ways of whisky. Maybe find your ease in cocaine. But misery is your middle name. I know that. I know the thing you want is money, luxury. You are through with your old love of adventure. If you want a vacation from a life of crime, it's yours. I'm going to give it to you."

"When?" came the dull voice.

"Now!" said the host. "Right now. Let me say a word about myself."

For the first time the man who, with a dry sense of humor perhaps, had called himself Blank, appeared to take an interest.

"You've told me my life," he said. "Now are you going to tell me yours? Straight?

"No, not much. Why is that necessary? Call me a lonely bachelor, rich, living in luxury. I've just moved in here. Got a bank account. In that drawer are five thousand negotiable bonds. Now, my friend, the life I lead is the life you seek."

"Do I?" asked the other.

"Isn't it?" said Valentine with easy assurance. "Certainly it is. It represents a vacation from adventure. To me it represents a ghastly monotony. God! I can't stand it!"

"And what do you want?" asked the other.

"I want a taste of poverty, my friend. Poverty, adventure, freedom! It never occurs to you fellows that there is a rare charm in being out in all kinds of weather and having to shift for the next meal by one's wits. O, I tell you the rich sometimes envy you fellows—you outcasts, you hunted ones. If you only knew the artifice of our lives—we prosperous fellows. Lonely? Its ghastly. Nothing to live with but our own damnable thoughts!"

"Is that so?" asked the other. "I just wish I could be sure that you were telling the truth. I wish I knew something. I wish I knew why you have been in Paris."

"That? Been in Paris? O, that's easy. I went there because I was bored to death. That's why I came here to this big place. But there is no relief. I just want to drop out of sight. I want to get rid of all this accursed luxury."

He whirled about and indicated the rich furnishings, the wainscoting, the panelled walls, the lighting fixtures, the pictures, the rugs, with a dramatic sweep of his long arm. His countenance was pale and tense; his thin lipped mouth squirmed against its white setting like a red worm.

He came close to the other man whose eyes never changed their expression and whose lower face still wore the smile that might have been sad or vicious, defying any one to say which. He came so close that the man in the chair could feel his breath upon his leathery cheek.

"Let's change," said Valentine. "You take my place. I take yours."

"I never heard of such a thing," the other man grumbled. "It's ridiculous. Some trick!"

"No. No. For God's sake, believe me," the host exclaimed. He acted as if he were going to drop onto his lean knees in a sudden hysteria of pleading. "I mean it all. You came here to rob me, eh? Well, you can't do it. Why? Because you shall have everything here. It is yours. Look! A wallet of several hundred dollars. This apartment for at least a month."

The other interrupted with a laugh.

"The janitor would have me sent away tomorrow," he said.

"No, he wouldn't. I've been here only a few days. He's never seen me," said Valentine. "Not even the elevator boy. You just say you are Mr. Valentine."

"Huh!" said Blank. "Me? Say that? In these clothes?"

He looked down at his watersoaked serge and at the old battered felt hat, then at Valentine who was clad in perfectly tailored light colored homespun and whose conspicuous derby hat and tweed overcoat were on the rug beside the table.

"Ha! Clothes, eh? My dear friend, you do not understand. I change with you even to clothes."

"You'd put on these wet old garments, eh?"

"Certainly. For there is nothing unless it is complete. I become you. You become me. I take your name—your fake name—Blank. You take mine, Edes Valentine. Apartment, a bit of a fortune in this bundle of negotiable bonds, a warm bath, my toilet things. You can engage servants if you wish. My bed—it is comfortable. A shave. A wallet of money. Three months at least of comfort. Rent all paid at a twelve thousand a year rate. Take my name, take my appearance, take my clothes!"

The other was suspicious, apparently. He said, "This doesn't look good to me. What do I have to do for all this, eh?"

"Give me your own clothes—that's all. That's all you have to do. Just become me for a time. I leave my shoes. You step into them. No one will come here who knows me. Maybe—there's just a chance—a stranger or two will come on a matter of business. But they've never seen me. Tell 'em you're Valentine and send 'em off."

"And you?" said the intruder.

"Me? Why, as for me, I'll just go back to the window into which you came and I'll—go out—out into the night, the wind and the rain. I'll be swallowed, eh? I'll be nobody. I'll find relief from the grind of money, luxury, hollow sham, stately, ghastly loneliness."

"You mean you'll go and come back sometime?"

The Fortieth Door

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a costume ball at her hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from McLean, a fellow countryman, and appears as a Highlander. Ryder is attracted by a veiled girl, who is the favorite of Hamdi Bey, a wealthy Turk. Ryder and the girl dance together, and he is about to kiss her when Hamdi Bey appears and strikes him. Ryder draws his sword, but the girl throws herself between them, and Ryder, seeing that she is terrified, sheathes his sword. Hamdi Bey strikes again before the eunuch's knees sagged and his huge bulk sank at Ryder's feet.

This time Ryder took no chance with a shot across the sustained resentment which was pleased to call her complete indifference. He was used to being called on by Evidently he expected her to call at the hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from McLean, a fellow countryman, and appears as a Highlander. Ryder is attracted by a veiled girl, who is the favorite of Hamdi Bey, a wealthy Turk. Ryder and the girl dance together, and he is about to kiss her when Hamdi Bey appears and strikes him. Ryder draws his sword, but the girl throws herself between them, and Ryder, seeing that she is terrified, sheathes his sword. Hamdi Bey strikes again before the eunuch's knees sagged and his huge bulk sank at Ryder's feet.

This time Ryder took no chance with a shot across the sustained resentment which was pleased to call her complete indifference. He was used to being called on by Evidently he expected her to call at the hotel.

"I have no appointment for 3:15," McLean told her concisely.

It was during the forenoon of the next day that the first twinge of genuine worry for him. You see, he was masquerading——"

"Again?" thought McLean, involuntarily. Lord, what a hand for the lassies that lad was—and he had thought him such an aloof one!

"Masquerading as a woman—so he could take me to a reception."

Jinny began to falter. Just putting that escapade into words portrayed its less commendable features.

"It was a woman's reception," she began again, "at a Turkish house. A marriage reception——"

She had certainly secured McLean's whole hearted attention.

"A marriage reception—a Turkish marriage reception?" he said very sharply and amazedly as his caller continued to pause. "Do you mean to say that Jack Ryder went into a Turkish house dressed as a woman——?"

There was a pronounced angularity of feature about the young Scotchman which now took on a chiseled sternness.

Swiftly Jinny interposed. "O, you mustn't blame him, Mr. McLean! You see, I wanted very much to go to a Turkish reception and I didn't have the courage to go alone or drag Ryder had all he could do to keep his seat and Aimee in his arms.

some other tourist as inexperienced as myself, and so Jack—why, there didn't seem any harm in his dressing up. Just for fun, you know. He put on a Turkish mantle and a veil up to his eyes and he was sure he'd never be found out. I ought not to have let him, I know—it was my fault——"

She looked so flushed and innocent and distressed that McLean's chivalry rose swiftly to her need.

"Indeed you mustn't blame yourself, Miss—Miss Jeffries. You don't know Egypt—and Jack does. He knew that if he had been discovered there would have been no help for him—and no questions asked afterwards. And it might have been very dangerous for you. The blame is just his now," he said decisively, yet not without a certain weak kneed sympathy with the culprit.

For if the girl had looked like this . . . he could see that she would be a difficult little piece to withstand . . . though any man with an ounce of sense in his head would have behaved as a responsible protector and not as a reckless school boy.

"What happened?" he said quickly.

"O, nothing happened—nothing that I know of. We got along very well, I thought, although now I remember that some people did stare. . . . But I wasn't worried at the time. I thought it was just because I was an American and he was apparently a Turkish woman, but there was no reason why an American might not get a Turkish woman to act as a guide, was there? . . . And then Jack told me to go home first—he said it would be simpler that way and that he would slip over to some friend's or to some safe place and take his disguise off. He wore a gray suit beneath it, and the only funny thing was some black tennis shoes. . . . So I left him. And he hasn't been back since."

She added as McLean was silent, "He told me that he had some engagement for that evening, so I did not begin to worry until the next day."

"Now just how long ago was this?"

"Two days ago. Day before yesterday afternoon."

She looked anxiously at McLean's face and took alarm at his careful absence of expression.

"O, Mr. McLean, do you think——"

He brushed that aside. "And where was it—this reception?"

"At an old palace, forever away on the edge of the city. I don't remember the street—we drove and I had the cab wait. But it belonged to a Turkish general. Hamdi Bey," she brought out triumphantly. "General Hamdi Bey."

McLean did not correct her idea of the title. His expression was more carefully noncommittal than ever, while behind its quiet guard his thoughts were breaking out like a revolution.

Hamdi Bey. . . . A wedding reception. . . . The daughter of Tewfick Pasha. . . .

In the secret depths of his soul he uttered profane and troubled words. That French girl, again. . . . So Ryder had not forgotten that affair, although he had kept silent about it of late. He had bided his time and taken that rash means of seeing the girl again—and he had involved this unknowing young American in a risk of scandal and deceived her into believing herself responsible for this caprice while all the time she had been a mere cloak and it had been his own diabolic desire. . . .

Miss Jeffries was surprised to see a sudden sorry softness dawn in the young man's look upon her. And she was surprised, too, at his next question.

"I wonder, now, if you were the young lady who took him to a masquerade ball—some time ago?"

Lightly she acknowledged it. "You'll think I'm always taking him to things," she said brightly, but McLean's troubled gaze did not quicken with a smile. . . .

He was experiencing a vast compassion. She was so innocent, so unconscious of the quicksands about her. . . . Probably she had never heard a breath of that first adventure.

And it was this fair Christian creature whom Jack Ryder had abandoned for a veiled girl from a Turk's harem!

McLean filled with cold, antagonistic wonder. He forgot the lovely image of the French miniature, and remembering Tewfick's rounded eyes and olive features he thought of the veiled girl—most illogically, for he knew that Tewfick was not her father—as some bold eyed, warm skinned image of base allure.

Sorrowfully he shook his head over his friend. He determined to protect him and to protect this girl's innocence of his behavior. He would help her to save him. . . . She could do it yet—if only she did not learn the truth and turn from him. If ever she had been able to make Jack go to a masquerade—that cursed masquerade!—she could work other, more beneficent miracles.

So now he asked, very cautiously, his mind on divided paths, "Do you say there was nothing to draw suspicion? He did not talk to any one, the guests or the bride?"

"O, yes, he did talk to the bride," said Miss Jeffries, with such utter unconsciousness that McLean's heart hardened against the renegade.

"He talked quite a while to her," she said.

"Did you notice anything?"

"O, I couldn't hear what was said. He was the last in line and he stayed for some time. He said afterward that it was all right. She was very nice to him," said Jinny earnestly, producing every scrap of incident for McLean's judgment. "She showed him some of her presents—something about her neck."

In mid-speech McLean changed a startled "God!" to "Good!"

"She wasn't suspicious, then?" he said weakly.

"Not so far as I could see. O, nothing seemed to be wrong. But I did feel uneasy until I got away, and then, since Jack hasn't come back——"

Again she looked at the young Scotchman for confirmation of her fear, and again she saw that careful, expressionless calm.

"It's no need for alarm," he told her slowly, "since nothing went wrong. I see no reason why Jack couldn't have walked out of that reception. If we only knew where he was going later——"

"Yes, something might have happened later," Jinny took up. "I thought of that. He might have wanted some more fun and felt more reckless. O, I am worried," she confessed, her gray eyes very round and childlike.

And if anything had happened she would always blame herself, thought McLean ironically. . . . The unthinking deviltry of the young scoundrel! . . . When he found him he'd have a few things to say!

"That's why I came to you," Jinny went on. "I hesitated, for he had warned me so against telling any one, but no one else knows."

"And no one must know," McLean assured her crisply. "I daresay it's a mare's nest, and Jack will be found safe and sound at his diggings or off on a lark with some friend or other, but it's well to make sure, and you did quite right in coming to me."

Jinny thought she had done quite right, too.

There was a satisfying strength about McLean. She resented a trifle his masculine way of trying to keep the dark side from her; she was not greatly misled by that untroubled look of his, and yet she was unconsciously reassured by it. . . . And although he refused to be stampeded by alarm he was not incredulous of it, for his manner was frankly grave.

"I'll send out at once," he said decisively, "and see if I can pick up any gossip of that reception. I've a very clever clerk, with brothers in the bazaars, who is a perfect wireless for information. He has told me the night before a man was to be murdered."

He paused, reflecting that was not a happy suggestion.

"Then I'll send out to Jack's diggings. That express doesn't stop tonight, but I'll find a way. And I'll let you know as soon as I can."

"You're very kind," said Jinny gratefully.

His competent manner brought her a light hearted sensation of difficulties already solved. Jack was as good as found, she felt, in swift reaction. If he was in any trouble this forceful young man would settle it.

But probably he wasn't in any trouble. Probably he was just at his diggings—rushing off from her in the exasperating way he seemed to do whenever they were getting on particularly well. . . . She remembered how he had bolted from that masquerade which had begun so happily. He had said he was ill, but she had never completely slain the suspicion that his illness sprang from ennui and disinclination.

She rose. "I mustn't take any more of your time, Mr. McLean, and you probably have a 4:15 engagement."

But her light raillery failed of its mark.

"Eh? No, I have not," seriously he assured her. "You are quite the last one I took on—the last before tea."

He paused confused, with a strange suggestion. . . . Tea . . . His servant did it rather well. . . . And it was time——

Usually he had it in the garden. It was a charming garden, full of roses, with a nice view of the citadel, and his strange suggestion expanded with a rosy vision of Jinny among the roses, beside his wicker table. . . . Would she possibly care to——?

He struggled with his idea, and with his shyness. And then the sense that it wasn't quite decent, somehow, to be offering tea to this girl, whom anxiety for Ryder's unknown lot had brought to him overcame that unwonted impulse.

He dismissed the idea. And, like all shy men, he was oddly relieved at the passing of the necessity for initiative, even while he felt his mild hope's expiring pang.

He stepped before her to open the doors to which she was now taking herself.

In the entrance he saw his clerk—the clever one—going out, and, excusing himself, he went forward to detain the man. For a moment there ensued a low toned colloquy. Then the clerk, a dark browed, keen featured fellow in European clothes, with a red fez, began to relate something.

When McLean turned back to Jinny Jeffries she saw that his look was sharply altered. There was a transfixed air about him, and when he spoke his voice told her he had had a shock.

"My man tells me," he said, "that Hamdi Bey's bride is dead. He buried her yesterday."

There was a moment's pause.

"What? That lovely girl?" said Jinny in a startled pity. She added incredulously, "Yesterday? . . . And only the day before—why, what could have happened?"

That was what McLean was asking himself very grimly.

Aloud he told her slowly, "They say that fire happened. Some accident—a candle overturned in her apartments. And of course the windows were screened——"

"Fire—how terrible! That lovely girl," said Jinny again. She was genuinely horrified and pitiful, yet she found a moment to wonder at the evident depths of McLean's consternation. For of course he had never seen the girl.

Yet he looked utterly upset.

"It's one of the most dreadful things I ever heard of," Jinny murmured. "On her wedding night . . . . And she was so young, Mr. McLean, and so exquisite. She didn't look like a real girl . . . . She was a fairy creature . . . . . I never dreamed there really were roseleaf skins before, but hers was just like flower petals. Jack and I talked about it, I remember. And her face had something so bewitching about it, a something so sweet and delicate——"

She broke off, revisited with that vision of Aimée's spritelike beauty . . . . How little that poor girl had thought, as she stood there in the bright splendor of her robes and diadem, that in a few hours more——

"Oh, I hope that fire—that it was merciful—that she didn't suffer," she said almost inaudibly.

But speech itself was too definitive of horrors.

"It's tragic," she finished simply.

It was tragic, with a complicated tragedy, thought Andrew McLean as he stood there, his eyes narrowing, his lips compressed, his mind invaded with a dark swarm of conjecture, surmise, suspicion, his vision possessed by a flitting rush of pictures.

He saw Jack talking with the girl at the reception . . . . The girl showing him something about her neck—that accursed locket, he thought acutely . . . . Jack sending Miss Jeffries home . . . . Had he arranged that purposely? Was there some mad, improvised scheme of escape in the air?

The pictures became mere flitting wraiths of conjecture, yet touched with horrifying possibility . . . . Jack lingering, hiding . . . . Jack making love to the girl, attempting flight . . . . Jack discovered—and the quick saber thrust—for both.

A fire? . . . Very likely—to screen the darker tragedy. Hamdi was capable of it to save his pride. And it would dispose so easily of the—evidence.

"Yes, if I want I'll come back."

"And I can go at any time?"

"Yes."

"You'll go out into the storm, eh? I become you and you become me? That it?"

"Yes."

"Will you change clothes with me? Take my wet ones down to the last stitch. Will you take 'em off here under the light? And swap with me?"

"Yes."

"And that gun?"

"I'll take it with me. It might be useful. You came out of a life of adventuring—out of the underworld. What would be your advice?"

The other sighed. "I'd advise you to take it," he admited. "Never pull it until you want to kill."

He continued to smile the carved wooden smile, but his eyes moved away from Valentine's and he looked about fixing his gaze at last upon a strange sheathed knife on the great antique table under the light of a decorative oriental lamp.

"What's that knife?" he asked.

"That? Why, that's a curio," said Valentine, drawing it from its sheath. It was thin of blade, with a slight curve in its length—an ugly thing, a thing which makes one draw back as from the hair edge of a razor blade or the fang of a snake. It looked like the fang of a snake. Its curve was like that—like a snake's thin needle fang.

"Where's it from?" asked the other.

"It's from the Argentine," said Valentine quickly. "It's called a Yala."

"I thought you said you came here from Paris. Have you ever been in the Argentine?"

"No. I bought it in Paris. It fascinated me. I bought it. A curio."

"That so?"

The other man appeared to lose his interest as quickly as it had arisen.

"Well?" asked Valentine. "How about it?"

"A boy's whim," replied the other. "That's all."

He looked back into the unreadable gaze of the stranger.

"Guess you'll find my clothes wet and cold," the intruder was saying as he pointed to the repulsive pile he had thrown at Valentine's feet.

"Nothing," said the host, who had seized the other's clothing as if he regarded it as symbolic of all that was desirable in life. "What are you staring at. Why do you look at me so?"

"Who wouldn't?" the other man said. "I don't strike a proposition like this every day. Or a man like you."

The host smiled again as if he did not mind the clammy clinging garments in which he had dressed himself. He said to the other man, "You look the part. I am proud to have you say that you are Edes Valentine. Don't forget the name. Get a shave after I have gone. It will be the finishing touch. Only hurry. I am anxious to leave."

"To go out?"

"Yes."

"Into nowhere."

"Yes, into the great and lovely nowhere," said the host with a laugh. "Are we ready?"

"Sure."

"Then I'll say——"

"Wait!" interrupted the stranger. "I was just forgetting. Feel in that left hand breast pocket. What do you feel?"

"Something like a big locket."

"Yes. Take it out."

Valentine stared down at the gilded thing in his long fingered, well manicured hand.

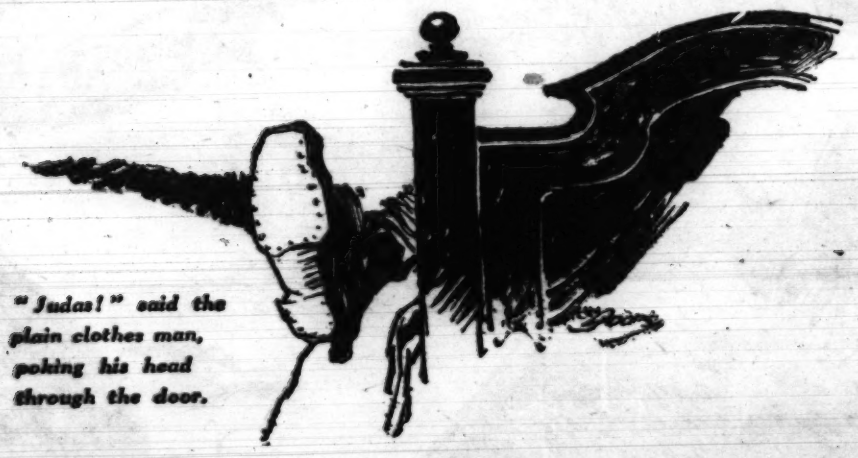
"Do I take this with me?" he said with a laugh.

"No."

"Where did you get it? I suppose in the—er—usual way?"

"Yes. Open it."

Valentine inserted his thumb nail in the flanged edge. He appeared irritated. "I want to have this moment over," he said.



"Judas!" said the plain clothes man, poking his head through the door.

"About what?"

"The change."

"O, yes—the change. Well, go on."

"Go on?"

"Yes. Take off your clothes."

"Ha!" exclaimed Valentine as if he had triumphed.

He put his revolver on the table, threw off his homespun coat and waistcoat, took the silk suspenders from his shoulders, unbuttoned a fine linen shirt.

"Come on," said he. "You too."

"All right," the other said, as if awakening from a dream, but without taking his gaze from the disrobing host.

"I'm kind of ashamed of these clothes," he confessed as he drew off article after article of woolen and cotton, all wet and limp with the rain.

At last the two men faced each other not more than five paces apart. The visitor stood without a shred of clothing. His figure was like that of Valentine, but it was not white of skin like his host's. Exposure had made his hide more leathery and coarse, and there was more hair upon his stark limbs.

"Take off that undershirt," said he to his benefactor. "I want that too. An agreement is an agreement."

Valentine hesitated, but smilingly he drew off the last garment which covered his lean body.

"Hello!" said the other man.

"What?"

"That mark. That mark on your chest. A tattoo, eh? Do gentlemen have tattoo marks?"

Valentine smiled.

"It was done in the folly of youth."

"Looks like the mark of some order, some lodge, some society."

"Before you go out there and through the window I opened and into the blackness—damme, you'll find it black—black and cold—But say—"

"What?"

"Just look at the thing. Open it."

The two sides of the locket sprang apart.

"Who is this?" gasped Valentine, staring with widening eyes at the picture within.

"Why do you ask?"

"She—why she—she is beautiful—beautiful—yes, sir—beautiful!"

As he said the last word the lights in the room disappeared as suddenly as they had been snapped on. Valentine went plunging hither and thither for a moment in a panic of fear. He poked his revolver here and there, stabbing the dark.

"Blank! Blank!" he called.

When the answer came it was close to his ear—a surprise—a soft warm breath.

"You better go," said the husky voice in a whisper. "You better go as you say—out into the nowhere. . . I hear voices at the door. . . . Listen, Valentine. You better go. We understand each other at last. . . Goodby."

. . . . . .

The man who had been instructed in the role of Valentine and who now wore Valentine's clothes shut Valentine's bedroom door and switched on the lights again. He stood alone in the middle of the luxurious furnishings of the living room and listened. Ten minutes had gone, but there were undoubtedly voices at the front door of the apartment. They were faint voices. There were whispers. Some kind of a key was being inserted into the lock. He listened to the sound with the same carved smile upon his noncommittal face. If he had gone into the bedroom to shave he had given up the idea, because the black stubble on lips and chin was the one vestige of his former appearance which interfered with the part he had undertaken to play. On the whole he looked a good deal like the man who had gone.

"Edes Valentine," said he, as if making sure that he would not forget the name, and then he raised his eyes to the door beyond the polished floor of the living room and beyond the Turkish rug in the hallway. That door was opening slowly. A deep and heavy voice said, "That will do, janitor. Keep your mouth shut."

"Come in," said the man inside.

The sound of his voice had an effect. The newcomer flung open the door and closed it behind him with a bang. He was a stout, heavy necked, heavy chinned man, with thick lips and an absurd cropped mustache much too small for his face or the ample bulbous nose above it. He had whipped out a revolver, and for the second time the other man found himself looking down the mouth of a deadly weapon.

"Who are you?" said the new occupant of the apartment.

"I'm an inspector, mister man," replied the other. "I don't want no trouble. I got a couple of men out in the hall and a couple are on their way to your back windows."

"And what do you want?" asked the other.

"What's your name?"

"My name——?"

'Edes Valentine, eh? That's what you gave the agent, that's what you got on the mail box. You don't deny it, eh?"

"I'm not the one to say."

"Huh! You don't deny it. Well, sit down."

The other hesitated.

The inspector stamped hard upon the floor as if he expected trouble. Immediately the door behind him opened and two younger men with raincoats still dripping from the rain stepped inside. One of them said, "All right, Hanavan."

"Just let me tell you that you gotter remember that anything you say may be used against you," Hanavan went on. "You're a bird we been looking for a long time."

"Charged with what?" the other asked.

"Murder," said the inspector, and spat.

The victim raised his hand to his throat, but dropped it again. Whatever his surprise and whatever his inner thoughts he did not change the expression of dull calm upon his long grave face with its faint and baffling smile.

"That's serious," he said.

"We been watching you ever since Friday. I'm satisfied."

"Of what?"

"You ain't any Edes Valentine, my friend." The inspector pointed his fat left forefinger. "You're Edeson Verne!"

"It isn't so. I just came from Paris," said the tormented man.

"You're a liar," snapped Hanavan. "Sit down, I tell you. You never saw Paris. You blew up from the Argentine because you thought we'd gone to sleep up here, old top. We'd have had you extradited six years ago if we'd known where you were. You thought you could come up here and blow some money and we'd never get wise. Well, here I am. And it's murder, my friend. The chair for yours!"

"The chair?" whispered the other.

"You said it, E. Verne."

"I'm not E. Verne," roared the other suddenly. "For God's sake don't call me that name."

"You're not You've forgotten E. Verne, eh? Well, you was E. Verne all right when you met Lily Mansard."

The victim sprang to his feet.

"Sit down!" commanded Hanavan, poking with his gun. "You don't like to have your memory jogged, eh? Well, I'll have you begging for mercy. I'll have you admitting who you are before I ever take you to the booking desk, old squeezer. I know you."

He took a deep breath.

"You were E. Verne all right when you came up from South America in 1911 on the Barbazon. You didn't know the captain of her, John W. Mansard. We got his record too—good, clean, two-fisted he-man all right. But he had a daughter, eh?"

The other man cringed.

"That's it! Shiver, you devil! I'm telling you! Had a daughter, didn't he? Going to school in Baltimore. Pretty? I ask you. Well, like a flower. Pure. Good. Little thing. Fragrant. Happy. Like a little bird, what? You met her, didn't you? And when Mansard went on his freighter for a long voyage you began on her, eh. Smart guy with women you were, E. Verne. You couldn't get her. No sir."

"No," said the other hoarsely.

"Ha! So you're remembering. Well, don't say nothing that can be used against you." The inspector went on. "No, you couldn't get her. Not without marriage—lawful marriage, eh. And you filled her full of your slick talk, old boy. You did! You gotter lovin' you, you snake. Married her. Yes, you did. And then what?"

The other stared without expression.

"Valentine has gone," he said dully.

"You'll have a swell chance to prove you ain't Valentine, as you call yourself. Maybe you'll say you don't remember taking her out in a row boat on Lake Concord, eh? Beat her over the head with an oar, eh? You chose a fine place in this state to do your dirty business—taking the life out of the body and soul of that beautiful little young tender thing!"

"Verne has gone," said the victim.

"Fade away with that guff," replied Hanavan. "Maybe you'd like to see the photographs we got of the marks of that oar on her little forehead. But you made your getaway, didn't you? Been down in the Argentine? And we didn't know. But when you blew in here we got a tip. Your lady friend—the one you left in Buenos Aires, put us wise to you. We trailed you since Friday. Come on now! You ain't going to say you ain't our man? Why did you say you were Edes Valentine when I came in? Answer."

"I don't know," said the victim, staring. "It looks bad for me, doesn't it?"

"You better come along with us. It looks that bad anyhow. It's the chair for yours. If you ain't E. Verne, you'll pass for him all right."

"I'm not E. Verne," said the other. "E. Verne—did he have a tattoo mark——?"

"On his chest—yes!" said Hanavan.

"I suppose you wanted to get him?"

"I've got you and you'll do. You're E. Verne."

"No," said the other. "You're ten or fifteen minutes late. If you'd been earlier you'd have found him trying to make me take his name. E. Verne drew a gun on me. He fired."

"Where?"

"Here in this room. Look at that!" he pointed to the mirror above the fireplace. It had been smashed by a bullet which had traveled straight to its center and had bored a hole with a spiderweb of cracks all around it.

Hanavan looked about for a second, baffled; the other men uttered low exclamations.

"Look out for him, inspector," said the youngest. "He's trying to put something over."

But Hanavan's eyes had fastened upon an opened locket on the desk. He snatched for it.

"It's her!" he exclaimed.

"I said E. Verne had gone," repeated the man sitting at the desk. "Don't you believe me? Go look in there—in the bedroom. He fired at me and I grabbed up a knife. I stuck it through the place where the tattoo marks are. It went in smooth and easy."

The inspector motioned to one of his men.

"Go look."

"Judas!" said the young plain clothes man, poking his head through the door. "I should say so, inspector. He's been skewered proper. He's been flung on the bed. It's through the left lung. Rubbed out!"

"Self defense, eh?" said Hanavan suspiciously. "He shot at you, did he?"

"I said so," replied the other man. He still wore the wood carving smile.

"And why did he shoot at you, eh?"

"Because I told him who I was. He had never seen me before. He didn't know I had hunted for him for nearly six years. He thought I was a yegg. But when I told him who I was——"

"Who are you?" asked Hanavan.

The other man turned his fixed smile and cocked his head as if listening. It was quite still in the room. From the window at the back of the apartment came the faraway sound of the storm, the wail of the night and the wind and the faint smell of the sea.

"I'm John Mansard, the captain of the Barbazon, he said. "I'm Lily's father."

The Fortieth Door

By Mary Hastings Bradley

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a masked ball at her hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from a friend, Andrew McLean, an attaché of the English government, and at McLean's he hears the story of a French scholar who disappeared in the desert fifteen years before. The man was reported dead, and a wife and baby girl were left; now the inheritance of an estate makes it suddenly important to hunt up the child. But all trace is gone. McLean shows Ryder a miniature portrait of the young Frenchman, curiously mounted. At the ball Ryder is fascinated by a mysterious young girl in a Mohammedan costume who will give no hint of her identity. He follows as she slips away and finds she is the daughter of Tewfick Pasha, a Turkish official in the neighboring palace. At parting in the garden, to the girl's horror and amazement, Ryder kisses her. That night her father informs her he wishes her to marry a repulsive old man to save himself from ruin. Ryder sees Aimée again, and when he learns that she is to be married leaves her in anger and returns to the desert to his excavations. There he finds evidence which convinces him that Aimée is the daughter of the Frenchman who disappeared. He determines to rescue her, and returns to Cairo. The pasha is suspicious and on his guard, and says that Aimée is his own daughter. Jack knows that he lies and finds a way to send Aimée the story of her French parentage. Aimée is unable to escape and is forced to carry through her foster father's plan. At the marriage feast Jack appears before the unhappy bride. He succeeds in giving her hope of rescue. The groom, coming later, is surprised in his love making by Jack, who, in turn, is overtaken by Hamdi's slave, made prisoner, and buried alive in the castle walls. He digs his way out with the aid of Aziza, a Turkish girl, who turns upon him and screams for help when he refuses to make love to her. Jack manages to elude the pursuers the girl's cries have summoned and in a hallway of the castle stumbles on Aimée, who has set fire to the building and is trying to escape alone. Together they make their way through a maze of dark passages until they are confronted by a series of doors, one of which they must open.

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT.

MISS JEFFRIES ACTS.

IT was only an instant that they hesitated there, yet it appeared an eternity of indecision. Then nearer footsteps sounded, coming down that hall. No more wavering of the scales!

Ryder turned to the door at his left, at the very end of the wall beyond which came that far stamping, and wrenched it open, closing it swiftly behind him. He saw a light now, a mild, yellow ray, through an opened door ahead, that vaguely illumined the strange old vehicles of the palace and the stables that were beyond.

Some one else was beyond, too, in the stables, for that very instant he saw a black horse backed restively into sight, its tossing head evading the hands that were trying to bridle it.

"The fortieth door!" said Ryder to himself with an involuntary thrust of humor.

The door of the horse! The door of forbidden daring! He knew now the vague associations that had stirred in him as he had stared blindly about that place of doors. But he had opened so many forbidden doors of late that this last was welcome as the supreme test.

And nothing in the world could have been more welcome than a horse—a horse with a way out behind it!

"Stay back," he said, under his breath to Aimée and, clasping his bit of iron, he moved toward the door.

He could see the attendant now, who was finishing his bridling, and it was Yussuf, the eunuch, so busy gentling and smoothing the horse that he cast only one glance in the direction of the sounds he heard, and that one glance misled him in its glimpse of the general's cloak.

"By your favor—but an instant," he called out, "and he is ready."

"Stand aside," said Ryder very clearly, emerging from the shadows at the horse's heels. "Out of the way with you. The horse is for me."

A moment Yussuf gaped. Then he dropped the bridle and his hand went swiftly to the knife hilt in his belt.

"Fool!" said Ryder contemptuously. "Would you tempt fate? Do you think I am such that your knife could harm me? Must I prove to you again that walls are nothing—that I but let myself be taken to prove my powers?"

Ethiopians are superstitious. And Yussuf knew that his brick and mortar had been strong. Yet they have great trust in a crooked, short bladed knife, and Yussuf did not relax his hold upon his, and for all that Ryder could see there was no hesitation in the grinning ferocity of his black face.

Yet his spring was an instant delayed and in that instant Ryder spoke again.

"Look, now, at the wall behind you!" he said quickly.

Yussuf looked. And as he turned his bullet head Ryder jumped close and brought his iron down upon it with a sickening force he thought scarcely short of murder.

To his amazement the black did not fall, but staggered only, and Ryder had need to send the knife spinning from his grasp and strike again before the eunuch's knees sagged and his huge bulk sank at Ryder's feet.

This time Ryder took no chance with a shammed unconsciousness. He snatched down bits of leather from the wall and bound the man's hands and feet in tight security, and, seeing that he was breathing, although heavily, he thrust a gagging handkerchief into his mouth.

Then he dragged the heavy body toward a pile of hay he saw in a vacant stall and concealed it effectively, but not too smotheringly, although Yussuf, he felt, would be no grievous loss to society.

Vaguely in the back of his consciousness he had been aware of the excited plunge of the horse, and then of a low, soothing murmur of speech, and now he turned to find Aimée holding the bridle and stroking the quivering creature with gentle, fearless hands.

"Is he dead?" she asked quietly of the eunuch.

"Stunned," said Ryder, meaning reassurement, and was startled by the passion of her cry, "O, I could kill them all—all!"

"I will, if they try to stop us," he promised grimly, forgetful of that oath to Aziza.

Hastily he glanced about the stalls. There was no other horse there, only a pair of mild eyed donkeys, and though there might conceivably be other horses behind other doors there was no instant to spare in search.

This luck was too prodigious to risk.

The door to the street had already been unbolted, and now he threw it back with a quick look into the dark emptiness of the narrow side street, and then, with a tight hold of the reins, he swung himself into the saddle and Aimée up into his arms, her head on his shoulder, her arms clasping him.

It was a huge Bedouin saddle, with high arched back and curved pommel, and the slender pair no more than filled it, making apparently no weight at all for the spirited beast which tore out of the stalls at the charging gallop beloved of eastern horsemen.

For a moment Ryder felt wildly that he might meet the fate of the rash youth in his patron story. He had never ridden a horse like this, which, like all high mettled Arabs, resented the authority of any but his master, and, though a good horseman, Ryder had all he could do to keep his seat and Aimée in his arms.

Around the corner of the lane the horse went racing, and down the dark, lebbek lined avenue his flying feet struck back their sparks of fire. Across an open square he plunged, while irate camels screamed at him and a harsh voice shouted back loud curses. It seemed to Ryder that other voices joined in—that there was a pursuit, an outcry—and then they were out down an open road, wildly galloping, like a mad highwayman under a pale morning sky.

. . . . . .

That morning Miss Jeffries ate two eggs. She ate them successively, with increasing deliberation, and afterward she lingered interminably over her toast and marmalade.

Still Ryder made no appearance, and since the Arab waiter had informed her that he had not yet breakfasted she concluded that he was not at the hotel, but had spent the night with some friend of his—probably that Andrew McLean to whom he was always running off.

Nor was he in to luncheon. That was rank extravagance, because he was paying at pension rates. His extravagance, however, was no affair of hers. Neither, she informed herself frigidly, was his appearance or his nonappearance. It was only rather dull of Jack to lose so many—well, opportunities.

She was not going to be in Cairo forever. Not much longer, in fact. There were adages about gathering rosebuds while ye may and making hay while the sun shone that Jack Ryder would do well to observe.

Other men did, reflected Jinny Jeffries, with a proud lift of her ruddy head. Only somehow, the other men——

Well, Jack was provokingly attractive! Only, of course, if he was going to rely upon his attraction and not upon his attentions——

Deliberately Miss Jeffries smiled upon a stalwart tourist from New York and promised her society for a foursome at bridge in the hotel lounge that evening.

Later, when Jack still failed to materialize and behold her inaccessibility, the exhibition seemed hardly to have been worth while. And there were difficulties getting rid of the New Yorker the next day. He had ideas about excursions.

It was during the forenoon of the next day that the first twinge of genuine worry shot across the sustained resentment which she was pleased to call her complete indifference. She recalled the vigor of Ryder's warnings about mentioning his adventure and the grave dangers of disclosure, and she began to wonder.

She wished, rather, that he had gone safely out of the house before she went away.

Of course, nothing could happen. He had done nothing to give himself away. He was simply a veiled shadow, moving humbly as befitted a lowly stranger among the high and hospitable surroundings.

But still it would have been better if he had gone.

Those turbaned women had looked queerly at them when they were talking so long in the window. Perhaps it was not simply at the intimacy between a young American and a veiled oriental. Perhaps their voices had been unguarded or Jack's tones had awakened suspicion. Perhaps he had given himself away in his long talk with the bride. She remembered a French woman who had come to interrupt that talk who had looked rather sharply at Jack. And that dreadful eunuch was always staring.

She thought of a great many things now, more and more things every minute.

And still she told herself that she was absurd, that Jack would be the first to ridicule her alarm. He was probably enjoying himself, staying on with his friends, forgetting all about herself. Still, his room at the hotel had not been slept in for two nights now, nor had he called at the hotel, and he certainly didn't have an extensive supply of clothes and linen upon him beneath the mantle.

Particularly she remembered that he had exhibited some funny black tennis shoes which he had thought would go appropriately with a woman's robes. Absurd to think of him as spending two days in tennis shoes, and absurd to say that he would go to the shops and buy more when he had plenty of footgear in his hotel room.

Unless he wore McLean's.

She had always regarded the unknown McLean as a most unnecessary absorbent of Jack Ryder's time and attention, and now that view was deeply reinforced.

By noon she decided to do something. She would telephone Andrew McLean and see if Jack had been there. The Agricultural bank, that was the place. An obliging hotel clerk—clerks were always obliging to Miss Jeffries—gave her the number and she slipped into the booth feeling a ridiculous amount of excitement and suspense.

She had never telephoned in Cairo—only been telephoned to—and she was not prepared for the fact that the telephone company was French. At the phone girl's "Numero? Quel numero, s'il vous plait?" Jinny hastily choked back the English response and clutched violently at French numerals.

"Huit cent—no, quatre vingt—un moment!" she demanded desperately, and, hanging up the receiver, sat down to write out her number in French correctly.

And then she got the bank, and, still clinging to her French, she requested to speak to Monsieur McLean and was informed that it was Monsieur McLean himself.

"Je suis—O, how absurd! Of course you speak English," she exclaimed. "This French telephone upset me. I wanted to speak to Mr. Ryder if he is there—or else leave a message for him, if you know when he will come in."

"Ryder?" There was a faint intonation of surprise in the voice. "I've no idea really when he'll be in," said McLean, "but you may leave the message if you like."

"Hasn't he—haven't you seen him for some time?" stammered Jinny, feeling that McLean must be taking her for a pursuing adventuress.

"Well—not for some time."

Her heart sank.

"Not—not for two days?"

"It might be that," said the Scotchman cautiously.

Two days. Forty-eight hours, almost, since she had left him in that harem! And McLean had not seen him. Of course, there might be other friends who had and McLean might know of them.

"I'm afraid I'll have to see you," she said, desperately. "It's rather important about Jack Ryder—and if I could just talk with you a minute—this afternoon?"

"I have no appointment for 3:15," McLean told her concisely.

Evidently he expected her to call at the bank. He was used to being called on. "Shall I come?" she began.

"I can see you at 3:15," McLean reassured her, and she repeated "3:15" with an odd vibration in her voice.

"I wonder," she murmured, "if I came at 3:10, or 3:20?"

But she didn't. She was humorously careful to make it exactly a quarter past the hour when she left her cab before McLean's official looking residence and stepped into the tiled entrance.

. . . . . .

She had no very clear notion of Andrew McLean except that he was, as Jack had said, Scotch, single, and skeptical; that he was Jack's intimate friend and an official sort of banker—and the word banker had unconsciously prepared her for stout dignity and middle age.

She was not at all prepared for the lean, sandy haired, rather abrupt young man who came forward from the depths of the gratefully cool reception room, and after a nervous handclasp waved her to a chair.

He was still holding her card, and as he glanced covertly at it she recalled that she had given him no name over the telephone and that he had known her only by the time of her appointment. Decidedly she must have made an odd impressio

Well, he could see for himself now, she thought, a trifle defiantly. Certainly he was taking stock of her out of those shrewd, swift gray eyes of his. He could see that she was, well—certainly a nice girl!

As a matter of fact McLean could see that she was considerably more. Rather disconcertingly more! It was not often that such white clad apparitions, piquant of face and coppery of hair, teased the eyes in his receiving room.

"You wanted to see me——?" he offered mechanically.

"Perhaps you have heard Jack Ryder speak of me—of Jinny Jeffries?" began the girl, determined to put the affair on a sound social footing as soon as possible.

McLean considered and, in honesty, shook his head. "He very seldom mentioned young ladies."

"O——!" Jimmy tried not to appear dashed. "We are very old friends—in America—and of course I've seen a good deal of him since I've been in Cairo. In fact, he is stopping now at the same hotel with us—with my aunt and uncle and myself."

McLean smiled. "He said it was a tooth," he mentioned dryly.

In Jinny's eyes a little flicker answered him, but her words were ingenuous. "O, of course, he has been having a time with the dentist. That's why he couldn't return to his camp. What I mean was, that at the hotel we have been seeing him every day until—he has just disappeared since day before yesterday and we are—that is, I am very much concerned about it."

Disappeared? You mean, he——"

"Just disappeared, that's all. He hasn't been at the hotel—he hasn't been anywhere that I know of, and I haven't heard a word from him—so I telephoned you and then when I found he hadn't been here——"

McLean looked off into space. "Eh, well, he'll turn up," he said comfortingly. "Jack's erratic, you may say, in his comings and goings. He means nothing by it. . . . I've known him do the same to me. . . . Any time, now, you're likely to hear——"

Miss Jeffries sat up a little straighter and her cheeks burned with brighter warmth.

"It isn't just that I want to see him, Mr. McLean," she took quietly distinct pains to explain. "It's because I am anxious——"

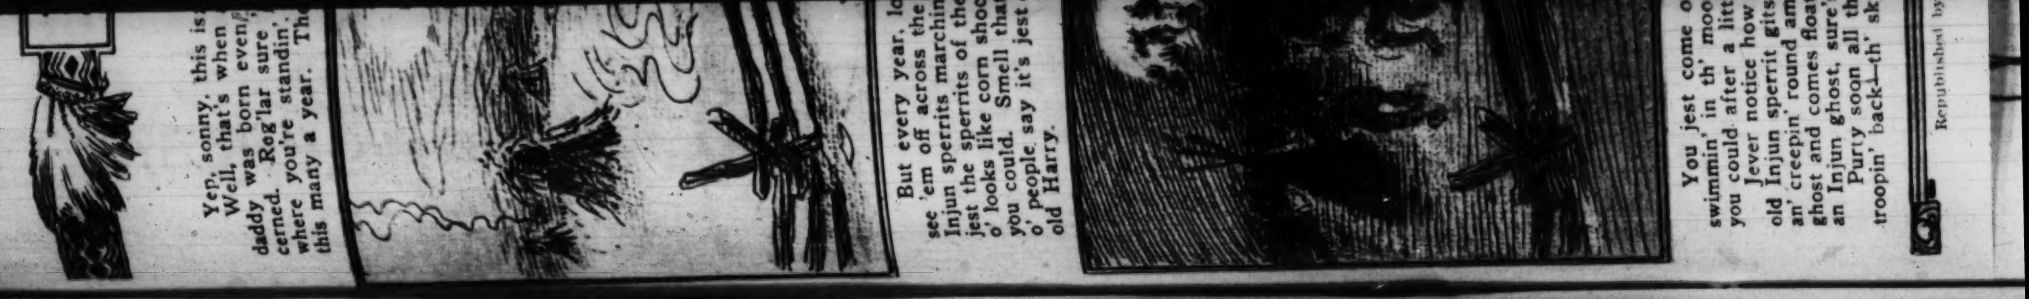
"Not a need, not a need in the world. Jack knows his way about. . . . He may have been called back to the diggings, you know—if they dug up a bit of porcelain there or a few grains of corn the boy would forget the sun was shining."

Perhaps his caller's burnished hair had shaped that thought. "Jack knows his way about," he repeated encouragingly, as one who demolishes the absurd fears of women and children.

"You don't quite understand." Jinny's tones were silken smooth. "You see, I left him in rather unusual circumstances. It was a place where he had no business in the world to be——"

At McLean's unguardedly startled gaze her humor overtook her wrath.

"O, it was quite all right for me," she replied mischievously to that look. "Only not



LEAVES from a PROVOST MARSHAL'S NOTEBOOK

The Wine Swindlers

This is the sixth of a series of short stories by Maj. C. E. Russell, a provost marshal with the A. E. F. in France. Each of these stories is based on actual experience of the major while in France and throws a light upon the side of the service which is so little understood.

"IT IS impossible, my friend! The American army does not supply wine to its men! And even if Gen. Pershing himself desired to issue the wine, he would not dare to, for some of the fanatics at home would be sure to get his official head."

"But," replied my friend, "I know what I am talking about, for my friend Levy is the man supplying the wine! He told me he had an order from Capt. Gordon himself for 500,000 quarts of red wine. And he has already made his first shipment!"

This conversation took place one evening while I was visiting a friend at his home, when the question had arisen regarding the American army customs as compared with the French. As I was a guest there, I did not care to argue the matter with him, yet determined that I would make it my business to look into it on the following morning.

Ours was a busy office, however, and the wine argument slipped my mind until late the following afternoon, when it was quite forcibly brought to my attention by the French interpreter attached to my office, who told me he had a friend who had wine to sell and asked me to use my influence with Capt. Gordon to enable his friend to submit a sample of his wine.

I called Gordon on the telephone and said: "Captain, I have heard a lot about your going into the wine business! What about it?"

"I do not know what you are driving at!" exclaimed Gordon. "I do not drink the stuff, let alone buy it!"

I felt that Gordon was telling me the truth, so I said: "You had better come over to my office and square yourself, for I have heard that you placed an order for a large amount of wine, and I want my share of it, now!"

"I will be right over and find out about it!" said Gordon.

When he arrived, I told him what I knew about it and called in my French interpreter.

"Adjutant, what do you know about this wild yarn regarding the Americans purchasing wine?"

"Well," said the adjutant, "everywhere in town they are talking about the change of heart on the part of the Americans—how you are planning to issue wine to your soldiers—and that Capt. Gordon has placed the first order for 500,000 quarts of red wine."

"There you are, captain! What have you to say about that?"

"It's the first that I have heard of it! I would surely be informed; for I am the purchasing officer for this part of France and would be the person to place such an order."

Just then the telephone bell rang and my clerk told me that the local manager of the Y. M. C. A. wished to talk with me personally.

"What can I do for you?" I said.

"I want to know if it is true that the army is to issue wine to our men? It's an outrage! I want to find out so I can enter a protest!"

"Well," I replied, "you know as much about it as I do! But before you enter any protest you would do better to await the results of my investigation. I will let you know just as soon as possible"—and I rang off. Turning to the captain, I said: "Captain, it looks to me as if we were in for a session with some one over this rumor, for, as you say, you would surely know, if any one."

"Major, I am telling you the truth! But where there is so much excitement and hurrah over it all, there must be something to it besides rumor!"

I determined to get at the bottom of it then and there; so I called my chauffeur and sent him out after my friend, requesting him to bring Mr. Levy back with him.

While we were awaiting the return of the automobile with men, the general's orderly came in with the customary: "The general's compliments to the major. And the general would like to see him at the major's convenience."

While this was in the form of a request, I knew that it mean "at once," so I went up to his office. I could always tell just how the "old man" was feeling by his response to my knock. This time it was a sharp "Come in!" and I entered, wondering what was up. (The provost marshal is the right hand of the commanding general in the enforcement of orders and discipline; on the other hand, he is the "goat" when things go wrong with the "old man.")

I found the general surrounded by some of our so-called welfare (?) workers—people from the States who came to France to "guard our dear boys from wrong," as one of them expressed it to me—and I saw that he was all upset over something. They had been giving him a bad half hour, and I knew at once that I was to be the "goat" again. I did not mind it in this case, however, for I appreciated the situation in which the general found himself. I knew that behind all his bluster he was a kind man and even when calling me down for effect, would know that I realized he did not mean it.

"Major, what's this I hear about Gordon buying thousands of gallons of wine for our soldiers? You know that we do not issue a ration of wine! And why do you allow such rumors to circulate?"

"General, I am working on the case now; as soon as possible I will report to you the results of my investigation."

"I do not want reports! I want action! And it is up to you to get action—quick!"

Although I knew that the "old man" was not in a reasonable frame of mind, I felt that he had gone too far. I could not and would not allow him to blame me for the rumors. "I have already started, sir, and will find out who is doing it."

"Well, the first thing I want you to do," said the general, "is to place Capt. Gordon under arrest!"

I knew that this was unjust and told him that I had already heard Capt. Gordon's story and was convinced of his innocence. "I would suggest action be delayed until after I have heard the Frenchman's story, general. I have already sent for them both."

"Get busy, and bring the guilty man here at once. I am not interested in your interviews!" said the general.

It was much easier to give an order of that kind than it was for me to fulfill it. But I felt the "old man" had troubles of his own with these cranks, so, without replying, I left and returned to my office.

I found Levy and my friend in my private office and called Gordon in. After the introductions were made I asked: "Is this the captain who gave you the order for the wine?"

"Non, mon commandant!" replied Levy. "The Capt. Gordon who gave me the order for the wine has returned to Paris!"

Further questioning brought forth a story of a very clever attempt at a swindle—this was his story: "One day an American officer came to my office. He told my son his name was Capt. Gordon and that he was from the headquarters of the American army in Paris. He said he had been commissioned by the American government to purchase 500,000 quarts of red wine—the wine to be of first grade—and had been informed that my firm was the one who could make the deliveries promptly.

"My son told him we could handle the contract, but it would require some time to complete it. Capt. Gordon urged prompt action and suggested that my son go over to the American headquarters with him while he secured the order. My son and the captain stepped into a taxi and went over to the office, Capt. Gordon telling my son to wait for him while he went inside. After a wait of at least twenty minutes, the captain came out, stepped into the taxi, and they both returned to my office.

"My son was given the contract and the price and terms were agreed upon. We were to make delivery in five car lots each week; and thirty days after the last shipment was made I would receive the money for the wine. The entire contract was to be billed as one lot and the invoice to be sent after the last shipment was made.

"He told my son that he could send any

Again and again our revolvers barked, and each time a man dropped and lost his interest in mail for him to the station where the wine was to be delivered—a place called Soucy, about ten miles outside of Paris. When I returned my son told me about the order. Already I have made one shipment and expect to make another this week. I hope it is all right?"

"I am very sorry for you, Mr. Levy," I replied, "but I am afraid you have been swindled."

Poor Levy wrung his hands when he thought of that five carloads of first grade wine which some one had swindled him out of—but it was too late to help that.

"Do not ship any more! And if you hear from this man Gordon, bring the letter to me! If you wish to save yourself worry, trouble, and money, do not mention our conversation to any one. We will get this man for you if you keep still. The first step is to get your son down here."

"My son has returned to his regiment! He was here on a furlough, and is somewhere on the front, right now!"

He gave me his son's name, rank, and regiment, and I then went and saw Gen. Halloran, the French commandant of this district. I explained the case to him and obtained his co-operation in an endeavor to have young Levy sent back to help us in trying to identify this so-called "Capt. Gordon." Proper papers were secured from the French war department, and young Levy was found and given orders to report to me for duty. Upon his arrival he was questioned regarding the case. He remembered the order and gave us a good description of the man who had purchased the wine.

This description was sent to the central records office with a request that they supply us with the name, rank, and organization of the person described, if he was a member of our army. A report came back that there was no one answering that description who was connected with the American army as an officer.

On the next day Levy came into my office with a letter from Gordon to rush the next shipment of wine, as the army needed it, and to advise, care the station agent at Soucy, when the shipment would be made. A letter was made up and a man sent on the next train and told to shadow the man who called for the letter. We followed the letter through the French postoffice, but no one claimed it, although it disappeared from the station. From this we were sure that the station agent was in league with the gang. Young Levy, with two of our men, was sent to Paris in an endeavor to find the man Gordon there. They came back, however, and reported that they could not locate him.

We then determined to lay a trap for them. So Levy was told to ship five more cars of wine to the same place. Men were detailed to cover the station and also to accompany the wine shipment. Great care was needed in dealing with the situation at Soucy; for if the agent was in the plot, as we suspected, it made it an easy matter for the swindlers to be warned and frightened away—and then we never could catch them. The shipment was ready. We had special orders issued by the railroad officials to rush the shipment through, and we also sent along an American soldier in uniform, who was to act as a convoy and see that the wine cars were delivered promptly.

On the same day that the wine left, I also started for Paris and established myself in a hotel as far from the American headquarters as possible, for I did not want any officious officer interfering with my men or our work. On the second day after my would be necessary to have the assist- of the French secret police if we were e successful. So I visited the French quarters and told the French police we were doing and that we needed They readily agreed to give us all assistance needed. Detective Lupin of French staff and Sergt. Hibbard of our were selected as the two men best qualified for this dangerous mission—Hibbard had lived in France for several years and could easily pass as a Frenchman. They were instructed to join the gang if possible, even to go to the extreme of committing robbery to prove their right to be classed as criminals and worthy to become members of the gang. Then they disappeared into the underworld of Paris, while we waited word from them of their success. While accomplishing their mission, arrangements had been made so that they could communicate with us by mail and a code had been agreed upon.

Days passed, but no word from them was received. After a conference with the French, we decided that something had happened to them, so we ordered out a rescue party. Both French and American detectives were sent out in an endeavor to pick up information regarding their fate. First one and then another came in and reported that not a trace of our detectives could be found. Greatly worried by their silence, and with a realization that they were surely in trouble of some sort, the French chief and myself determined to try our hand and see if we could not find them.

We began by making a tour of the dives of Paris. During this search I saw a man dressed in an American officer's uniform who answered the general description of the bogus captain for whom we had been searching. Moreover, he seemed right at home among these crooks, who called him chief. As we were not searching for the wine swindlers now, but to rescue our two men, we felt that if we arrested this man he could be forced to give us valuable information as to where our two men were or what had become of them. We followed him to his home and that night arrested him, taking him to the French secret police headquarters, where we questioned him.

His story was this:

"Your two men drifted into the café where we hang out and boasted how tough they were. They claimed to have come from Havre, where they had robbed several people on the streets. They were just the type of men that I wanted in the gang, so we accepted them on what they represented themselves to be and initiated them into the gang as brothers. Then the Frenchman, Lupin, was taken sick with the 'flu' and while delirious he talked continually. When the word 'police' was mentioned we listened and Lupin told us the whole story—his real name, why he and Hibbard had joined the gang, and what they hoped to accomplish. We were furious at him for having so successfully fooled us, and some of the men were for killing Lupin then and there. As Hibbard was away when this happened, we decided to await his return, upon which he was seized, and then both were tried by the gang.

"I may be a hardened crook, but I draw the line at killing any one in cold blood without giving him a chance to defend himself. The gang overruled me, however, although I finally persuaded them to postpone action and the final killing until the Frenchman had either died or recovered. We confined them in the cellar of the warehouse where the wine is stored, and a man is always on guard over them. He is to kill them at the first sign of an attempt at rescue and then throw their bodies into the sewer and escape that way himself. In fact, the entire gang, if surprised, will make their escape through sewers and you cannot capture them.

"The only way you can gain entrance to this place is through the house in the next block, and then only by giving the proper signals. If you attempt to break in your men will be dead before you can batter down the first door.

"You must go to No. 20 Rue de Ratt, give three quick raps at the door; then, when it is answered by two raps, give three more quick raps, and then when the slide in the door is opened give the password, 'Montreal,' and the woman will admit you to the first house. You must pass through this house into the kitchen, turn to your left, go down into the cellar, and turn sharply to your right; when you reach the foot of the stairs you will see a door opening into a passageway.

"Go through this tunnel until you come to another door; here you must rap twice, and upon hearing an answering two knocks, rap twice more and then give the password, 'Quebec,' when challenged. If you try to do it without me to lead you, you will surely make a failure of it, for the old woman who runs the first house always looks out through the slit in the door before answering; and, when visitors look suspicious, she rings a bell, which gives warning to some one in the other room where the gang hangs out, and they in turn will come up and, after looking you over, will surely kill the two men and escape into the sewer system, and you will never catch them."

We did not dare to trust this man for fear he would lead us into a trap, so we selected one of our own men and had him disguise himself as Gordon. Then we waited until dark, and with the French chief we presented ourselves at the door of the first house. The signals were made, the password was given, and, after inspecting us, the door was opened and we were admitted. Before the woman could give the alarm we had seized her, and after binding and gagging her, we carried her into the cellar with us—our first step had been accomplished.

In the cellar we found the door just as Gordon had said we would, and upon opening it found the passageway into a dark tunnel. Each one of us claimed the right to be the first to go down through that dark passage—moreover, we did not dare to show a light—but the Frenchman finally won, and we started. It was dark and damp, a gruesome place, and we had to carefully feel our way along by placing our hands against the sides of the tunnel. At length we came to the end and there found our way barred by the third door. We listened and heard men talking on the other side of the door, then we made ready for the final rush. Revolvers were quietly prepared for any eventuality and the safety catches were released, and with a parting handshake we were ready for the last and most dangerous part of the trip.

The soldier who was disguised as Gordon stepped in front, and then the signal was given—two quick knocks. A gangster answered our knock, and we gave the second signal, and then a gruff voice from the inside demanded:

"Who is there?'

And the French chief answered, "Quebec."

We could hear them taking down the bars and chains from the door, and then the door swung slowly open; with our disguised soldier in the lead, we three stepped into the room. There were five of the gang there; three were seated at the table, one was standing near another door, while the last was the one who had let us in.

Just as the French chief stepped into the room one of the gang, recognizing him, shouted "Police!" and made a dash for a door leading out of the room on the opposite side. The others pulled their guns and began shooting. An automatic spoke once. The Apache whirled around, and, with a wondering look of startled surprise on his face, sank to the floor. Again and again our revolvers barked, and each time a man dropped and lost his interest in the fight. When the smoke cleared away there were four of them on the floor, while the fifth had his hands high above his head in token of surrender. When questioned this man told us that we would find the two men for whom we were searching if we went through the door which the first man had tried to reach.

Leaving our soldier to guard the prisoner and the dead, the chief and myself opened the door and, passing along a small tunnel, we came to another door; opening it, we stepped into a small room, where we found our men. The Frenchman was apparently too sick to take any notice of us, but our American boy, half starved, ragged, dirty, and with two weeks' growth of beard on his face, shouted for joy when he saw me and then fainted. Both men were carried out into the yard, an ambulance was summoned, and they were sent to a hospital, where, after receiving proper care, they soon recovered.

The story as we subsequently heard it from Hibbard was this: "We met the gang as instructed at one of the cafés, and by careful work succeeded in gaining their confidence. We had to submit to orders from the man called Gordon and had to participate in several robberies before we were accepted, but we finally made it. The night we joined we were taken to the rooms in the cellar where you found us, and there, with many weird rites, we were made members of the gang and took the oath of loyalty.

"One night I was sent with two others into the country to rob a house. The trip took three days, and while I was gone Lupin was taken sick. In his delirium he told them everything, so the gang knew of our mission. On the night I returned when I entered the room I was struck on the head from behind with a club, and so lost all interest in the proceedings for some time.

"In due time I regained consciousness and found myself tightly bound facing the entire gang. Lupin was brought in and we were tried and sentenced to death. When we joined we took an oath that if we squealed or were guilty of disobedience our tongues were to be torn out by the roots and the veins in our arms were to be opened, allowing us to bleed to death. That was the sentence passed upon us, and some of the gang were for carrying it out at once. Gordon, however, suggested that it would be better to wait until the Frenchman had recovered from the 'flu,' as then he would realize why he was being killed.

"I was detailed to nurse him. My only hope was that he might die or we be rescued before he recovered—thus escaping the terrible fate planned for us. At length he recovered so far that I was afraid they would become aware of it and at once carry the sentence into execution. When he was able to understand the situation I told him about it. We agreed that he should keep up the appearance of being delirious in order that you might have time to find us.

"It was very tiresome to be always on the watch, but Lupin played the game carefully, and it is only due to the fact that he was able to carry it through that we are alive today. The man you shot first was the worst one of the gang, for he took particular delight in telling me how they were going to slit our throats and then feed us to the sewer rats. I am sure he intended to kill us both when the bullet stopped him."

With four of the gang dead and their leader in jail, the arrest of the balance was easy, and we soon had them all. Gordon was the brains of the crowd. He it was who planned the raid on the French wine merchant and impersonated the American officer. Their first move in the swindle was to secure a supply of our official stationery and an official stamp. To obtain these they supplied one of the gang with forged letters of recommendation, and Gordon secured a job for him as clerk in the quartermaster's department at the supply depot in Paris. The actual securing of the forms, letterheads, envelopes, order blanks, and official stamp was then an easy matter. Equipped with all the necessary papers, Gordon was able to successfully start the swindle.

The most dangerous part of it to Gordon, so he said, "Was when I went into the headquarters and had to wait around for twenty minutes while I left young Levy outside. I knew if I was found out then I might be shot as a spy, but no one seemed to doubt that I was other than I seemed—a captain of the quartermaster's department."

After they received the first shipment of wine they bottled it and sold it to the cheaper cafés in Paris. It had been so easy to dispose of the first shipment that they were in a hurry to secure the balance. We caught them before they had a chance to sell the second shipment, which Levy immediately came to Paris and claimed. We turned over the wine and allowed him to dispose of it as he could.

Further inquiries regarding the chief criminal disclosed the fact that Gordon was his real name. "My home was in Montreal," he said, "but I was cashiered from the Canadian army for stealing, and not daring to return home and face the scandal, I drifted to Paris and organized the gang which you have just broken up. We had many a criminal adventure together before we attempted to swindle Levy out of his wine."

When Gordon was tried he was given a life sentence at the French penal colony. I will wager a dollar to a shoestring that they do not hold him there even for a year—he is too clever for them.

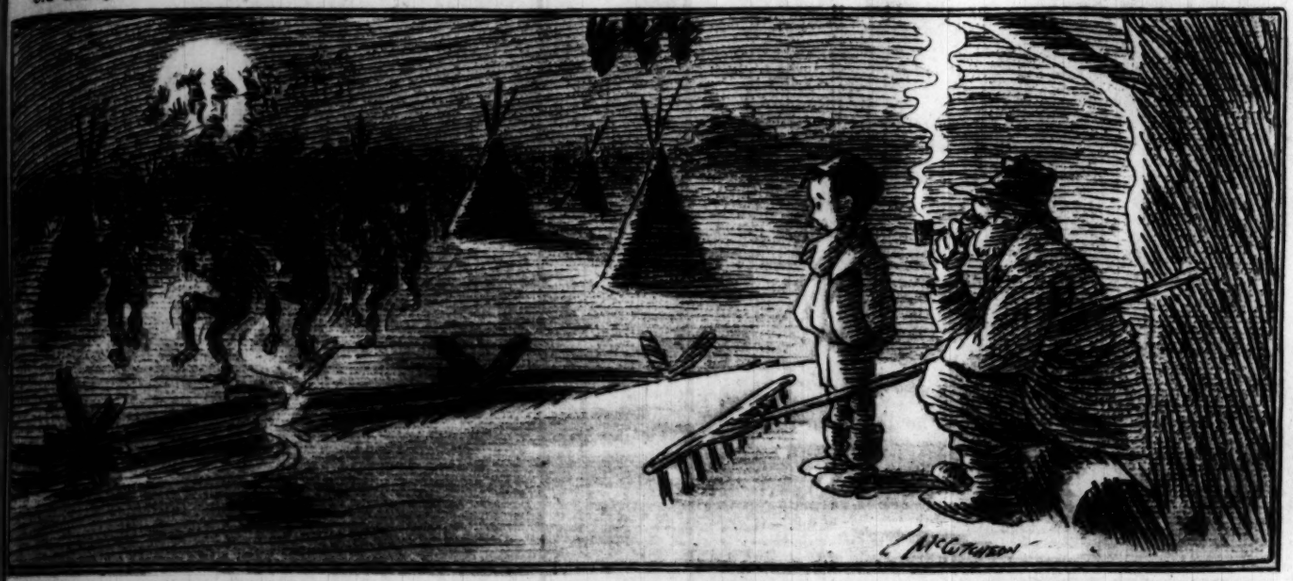
INJUN SUMMER

(Copyright: 1912: By John T. McCutcheon.)

Yep, sonny, this is sure enough Injun summer. Don't know what that is, I reckon, do you?

Well, that's when all the homesick Injuns come back to play. You know, a long time ago, long afore yer grandaddy was born even, there used to be heaps of Injuns around here—thousands—millions, I reckon, far as that's concerned. Reg'lar sure 'nough Injuns—none o' yer cigar store Injuns, not much. They wus all around here—right here where you're standin'. Don't be skeered—hain't none around here now, leastways, no live ones. They been gone this many a year. They all went away and died, so they ain't no more left.

But every year, long about now, they all come back, leastways, their sperrits do. They're here now. You can see 'em off across the fields. Look real hard. See that kind o' hazy, misty look out yonder? Well, them's Injuns—Injun sperrits marchin' along an' dancin' in the sunlight. That's what makes that kind o' haze that's everywhere—it's jest the sperrits of the Injuns all come back. They're all around us now. See off yonder, see them tepees? They kind o' looks like corn shocks from here, but them's Injun tents, sure as you're a foot high. See 'em now? Sure, I knowed you could. Smell that smoky sort o' smell in the air? That's the campfires a-burnin' and their pipes a-goin'. Lots o' people say it's jest leaves burnin', but it ain't. It's the campfires, an' th' Injuns are hoppin' 'round 'em t' beat the old Harry.



You jest come out here tonight when the moon is hangin' over the hill off yonder an' the harvest fields is all swimmin' in th' moonlight, an' you can see the Injuns and the tepees jest as plain as kin be. You can, eh? I knowed you could after a little while.

Jever notice how the leaves turn red 'bout this time o' year? That's jest another sign o' redskins. That's when an old Injun sperrit gits tired dancin' an' goes up an' squats on a leaf t' rest. Why, I kin hear' em rustlin' an' whisperin' an' creepin' round among the leaves all the time; an' ever' once in a while a leaf gives way under some fat old Injun ghost and comes floatin' down to the ground. See—here's one now. See how red it is? That's the war paint rubbed off'n an Injun ghost, sure's you're born.

Purty soon all the Injuns'll go marchin' away agin, back to the happy huntin' ground, but next year you'll see 'em troopin' back—th' sky jest hazy with 'em and their campfires smolderin' away jest like they are now.

Autumn Modes for Morning, Noon and Night

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—To V or not to V—that is the question. If you hark to the elfin notes of Paris styles you wear evening clothes that are decidedly more evening than clothes. Never were such decollettes as are presented this season. Sleeveless little bodices often hang over the shoulders by a frail but brilliant strap of rhinestones or jet or other sparklers. As for the back of the bodice, la la la! The popular conception of covering a back seems to be—well, just merely with goose flesh. For these deep V's often extend to the waist line.

We are showing you today just how these new bodices do behave in the back. The lady being arrayed by her attentive Hortense is wearing a gown from Ida Charles, and the mirror reveals the V of her departing appearance. The foundation of this evening gown is the most supple of black satins, which forms the bodice and extends into a long train. The skirt is not merely a shower but a rain of silver sequins through which one catches the mist of a few pale blue sequins. The three bands used on the skirt are formed of blue beads—a beautiful French blue—that are strung on threads placed so close together that the appearance is solid blue. A motif of silver and blue sequins is placed both at the front and back of the bodice, and this is echoed at the extreme edge of the train.

This frock points out three style features. One is the use of beads and sequins, which still rage through all the domain of evening dress. Often these are arranged so as to give the allover iridescent effect presented here. At other times the stones or beads sparkle here and there like dewdrops upon the cobwebby background.

In this connection I want to speak of a Madelaine and Madelaine model which seems to me the most effective bit of Queen Mab artistry I have seen. The bodice of this gown is of rose velvet and fitted with glovelike smoothness; it is completed by a skirt of rose color tulle. The skirt is draped after the Madelaine manner and when it come to the trimming we can just hear the queen of the fairies saying to Cobweb and Thistledown, "For my new dress get me a few shredded clouds and a number of dewdrops." This trimming consists of single flues of white ostrich caught up with a single rhinestone. The result is really enchanting. And, by the way, the new evening gowns find a use not only for ostrich but for aigrettes as well.

Another feature of this gown is the long line. You know there are really two separate schools of evening dress this year. We may select either the fitted bodice with the crinoline or panniered skirt or we may choose the classic line. To my mind the wise woman will adopt the latter. For, after all, there are only a few women who are slim enough to want to look bunchy. Youth also is a limited commodity and as it seems to me an undisputed fact that only the young can dabble in these Watteau shepherdess effects—most women of 38 don't wish to look quaint any more than they wish to look 38—I fancy that few of us will turn into pannier fanatics.

Of course when we say classic or oriental we are most of us a little bit vague. Almost anything with a long line is dubbed one of these. Yet the true classic note generally denotes a long bloused waist and a draped skirt. It is the former which is so much emphasized in the evening frocks of this year. Practically all of the French designers bring out this silhouette, but the master classicist of the season is undoubtedly Madelaine and Madelaine. This French house, which has scored such a tremendous success in New York, has drawn upon the old Tanagra statues for its inspiration. Its models show the drapery falling from the bust to the hips, where it is confined by a flat girdle permitting the classic bloused effect. A feature of this bodice is that it is shorter in front than in the back.

As for the skirt, this is generally draped slightly in front and the back is often given extra fullness by floating points. Thus you see it—the classic silhouette as presented by Paris. And thus you will undoubtedly find it—with perhaps a few modifications—worn in the New York ballroom this winter.

But we are not only classic. We are positively oriental. If you doubt this, just glimpse at some of the culotte skirts designed for afternoon and evening wear. Combine these Turkish trousers with the long bloused bodice and who is to know that the wearer is not Miss Scheherazade of Bagdad, but Miss Dorothy Brown of New York.

There are a great many black evening gowns this year and these benefit by the Chantilly flounces in either black or white which are now so popular. However, one sees much of rose and metallic tissues and also of yellow. The last color is particularly good and some of the most stunning new evening frocks combine yellow satin with orange velvet. As for materials, there are wonderful brocades, the softest and supplest of satins, velvets, and laces.

Trains accompany many of the late evening frocks, and these are a creature of mood. They may be detachable or stubborn. They may jut out at the side or at the back. Frequently they are pointed. The panel also is with us for evening wear even more strenuously than ever. Paquin, for example, fairly revels in this familiar accessory. She makes her panels pointed and they float out from evenning frocks in all kinds of irregular lengths. Frequently, indeed, the panel at one side is longer than that on the other.

As for tulle, it not only falls, but it storms in the late evening frocks. In this connection I want to speak of the blonde tulle which Paquin employs upon foundations of velvet in green, French blue, old blue, and green. These tulle draperies are exceedingly full and the color is simply exquisite. Net, too, is a feature of the evening and dancing frocks and one of Jenny's youthful dance frocks is of shimmering copper net.

Brown for evening wear! Until last season accustomed us to this vagary we should have just as soon have thought of wearing our skirts over our shoulders. This autumn presents us a few of these brown evening frocks, among which I may mention one of Drecoll's—a lovely little dancing gown which drapes accordion plaited tulle of tobacco brown over a gold foundation. When you imagine as the final touch a garland of ivy leaves over the shoulders you become not merely calloused about the brown evening dress, you end by being enthusiastic. For the color combination here is simply charming.

As for the tunic, its years of service are by no means over. The tunic appears today upon some of the smartest frocks for both day time and evening wear. We are showing one of the latest developments of the tunic in the dinner frock from Premet, which you find at the right of the page. This frock is of brown satin and the overdress is twine colored georgette embroidered heavily in brown chenille, which, by the way, is still one of the most popular of embroideries. The back of this tunic is exceedingly interesting, inasmuch as a cape is formed which reaches to the waist line, where it is joined by a straight long panel such as we see in front. The chenille embroidery is used in a heavy border for this back panel.

That all the foreign styles are not the circus type of which the sedate American woman must be afraid, is indicated by the frock at the left—a Madelaine and Madelaine model designed for street wear. Certainly nothing could be more guileless than the line of this frock of black chiffon with its heavy wide bands of black braid. You will note, however, that here again we are given another proof of the long bloused waist line which is the chief fashion offering of this year. For the girdle of braid is placed down over the hip line.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

STRIKING AND COSTLY.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sometimes husbands say things rather appropriate. One can hardly afford not to listen when they speak. We went to see the showing yesterday at the largest, smartest house in Paris, and as we drove up before its stately stone front I could feel husband gasp a little for breath. He started a sentence and stopped it.

Simple Blue Cloth Gown.

I know that he was going to say it reminded him of a department of state. In his second beginning, he put it better, however. "This," he observed, "is the ministry of styles."

That is just exactly what the house is; in this capital of fashions that house is where the styles are drawn up, framed, and enforced. If it isn't an important part of the government, it is the most important part of the scenic and industrial life of France.

Silk makers league with designers and they create something between them that strikes onlookers dumb. A paltry dozen yards of such and such material is created. If you wanted to buy some of it you wouldn't know what to ask for, and if you did, you wouldn't get it, for the very recipe for making the design of it will be thrown away.

I know a woman in America who thought she was awfully swell because she had a coat made somewhere in New York the material for which cost $10 a yard. She characterized that coat by telling her friends how much it cost by the yard. I should like to hear of any details being itemized on any of the estimates here. You get your amount quoted to you in round figures, and you usually faint on hearing the sum.

A rag of a thing hung over a blue and gold lamp-shade on an inlay cabinet, backed by a crystal candelabra that was set in the wall looking glass. It was a tulle thing bordered and striped in fur. "What's that?" I queried, pointing to it. The reason I asked was that I had an acre or so of that particular kind of fitch fur bought in Russia four years ago.

Mlle. the vendeuse brought it over. I threw it across my shoulders. It looked awfully well in its delicate, almost invisible foundation, banded in soft rolls of golden yellow fur. That represented the very thing to do with any bits of fur one might be possessing—make it into a scarf for dinners and the opera. One didn't need it at all, but how infinitely better at the price of a small sum to be using one's fur!

"What would be the price of that, mademoiselle, I furnishing the fur?" I questioned. Nobody ever quoted a price to you in France offhand and without advisement. She vanished, scarf in hand, and returned.

"We should have to have your fur, madame, to estimate absolument accurately, but somewhere around 700 francs!"

Another little scheme gone wrong. Around $100 for the rag of tulle and workmanship. Here I am, with my million dollars' worth of fur—estimated—and cannot afford the lining and the putting of it on. The incident is valuable because typical. There's hardly anything that can be afforded in Paris today.

All the time a current, a human current, with swells and eddies of pirouetting, undulating mannequins flowed past us, fanning their draperies, dragging their trains, stepping lightly in their tailor mades, gently palpitating their breakfast robes. A green sunflower beside a pink rose on a purple dress, brown and blue embroidered in the shades of the rainbow, a jeweled peacock spreading his tail across an evening coat! I dreamed of masses of color that night. I thought they had weight and sat upon my chest and almost pressed the breath out of me.

"There's a wonderful thing! I don't know where you can wear it, but it's lovely what there is of it." It had a box skirt of wide, straight panniers, and practically no bodice.

"To the opera," replied the woman beside me. "When you sit down in a box, you look as if you had nothing on, and that's the fashion for the opera."

But the moment has come in this article for getting down to practicalities. One of the models we later saw Marie Doro wearing at tea at the Ritz. The sketch of the girl in the afternoon frock and hat represents her. The ground work of the dress was of blue serge—that is the starting point for most French creations for day wear. The ornamentation consisted of gold braid—tons of it—and green embroidery. It flourished in a deep border round the bottom and climbed two trellices up the sides of the front. It was plotted in a landscape garden effect across the chest. It followed much the same spectacular design in the back in the original model, except that it omitted the trellis effect. The girdle was of vermillion colored silk, finished at the ends with Chinese tassels. The frill at the neck, sleeves, and across the bottom of the skirt was of plaited net, in cream color. The mannequin showed the dress without a hat. Marie Doro wore one of brown velvet.

You will need a moment to recover your breath. Everybody did who beheld it. Meantime we may regard a simpler creation which is none the less chic. It consists of blue marine, with panniers, and half circles created around the girdle with white braid. The revers and the cuffs, as well as the gilet, are of white organdy.

Perhaps you are now ready for the last description. To tell the truth, I needed a moment in which to recover after the Marie Doro costume, before starting in on the last. Isn't this cape gorgeous? A new house, Molyneux, made it. I really ought to have a diagram to make it clear.

The cape is of turquoise satin, embroidered in gold figures, and garnished with monkey fur—and, marvel of all, most of this fur is not black like all you have seen, but is white; and white monkey fur is—to put the truth conservatively—rare. Running along with it is another strand of the fur in black, and it has a high value as contrast. The collar of the cape is of mustard colored velvet, piped with lemon yellow and deep blue and sage green satin. The lines edging the fur over the arms and down the front are of gold braid. I am guilty of an anti-climax when I close these remarks with the statement that the manteau was striking.

Calling on the Colonel.

In the regular army, it is one of the customs of the service, when at a regular army post, for the junior officers to call upon the senior officers. To comply with this custom without making the calls, the junior officer frequently waits until he knows the senior officer is away and then calls at his home and leaves a card. One night when I was stationed at a post in Texas, I saw the colonel downtown and on my way home stopped at the colonel's quarters and put my card under the door. I was just leaving the porch when I noticed a car at the gate and on closer inspection I noted that the colonel was in the car and was awaiting me at the gate. He laughingly said, "Kind of late to make a call, isn't it Lieut.?" This became one of the colonel's best stories, and to say that I was more than once embarrassed would be putting it mild.

Kitty Liked Them, Too.

Mine was when my gentleman friend was coming to our house for dinner. He was fond of cream pie and didn't hesitate to tell me beforehand. He had not come, so I decided to get my pie done before, so I could go in and talk to him when he did.

My pie was a beauty and I set it on the table. Just then I heard him come and went in, forgetting to hook the screen door.

I boasted of my pie, and because he wouldn't believe that I had made one I said, "Come on, I'll show you." We went to the kitchen and there I saw that the cat had gotten in and eaten just one-half of the pie. Kitty was sitting on the floor and washing her face and my friend saw in a minute that she was the thief.

We didn't eat the pie, but we are married now and my husband has eaten many of my cream pies and believes that I can make good ones.

J. L.

Coming Up.

had gone to a party the night before and did not get home until 3 o'clock. The two of us went to church that morning and my chum, dozing in the middle of the sermon, suddenly fell out in the aisle. Imagine my embarrassment when on picking herself up she said, "I'll be right up, ma." When she goes to church now I give her the inside of the pew.

The Bundle Rode Away.

Recently while waiting for a car, I set a large bundle on the running board of a machine standing nearby. My attention was attracted elsewhere for a moment, and when I turned to get my bundle the machine had started down the street. As a result I was forced to chase it for nearly two blocks before I could attract the driver's attention.

The Diet that Reduced 9 lbs in Two Weeks

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sallow hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flabby, or frail looted? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them, and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Daily Tribune."

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

ABOUT this time every year a call for help is sounded loudly by the heavily laden for a quick disposal of ten pounds or thereabouts. The sufferer is usually just returned from a shopping tour or from the modiste's.

Her figure, she found, was not just what it used to be. A lazy summer and its indulgent food offerings are more often than not what has brought her to the ten point increase.

She is rather the type who has been sitting around on summer porches while others played golf and tennis, and who, to keep herself from actual atrophy, has rocked herself mornings in the old arm chair to the tune of a half pound of candy or a brick of ice cream. Or she may be the business woman whom summer days and the best thereof have swayed entirely from the good habit of a daily walk, and whose inertia interfered with her daily exercise.

At any rate, she is all the same when she finds herself trying to fit her now 38 or 40 figure into a 36 size. She is full of woe and good resolves and honest intentions of going right straight home and starting on a diet and an exercise path that will lead her straight back to the old "girlish figger."

"It is a good thing we women have to buy new clothes every now and then," said Mrs. J., the woman who reduced nine pounds in two weeks. "I knew I was getting puffy, but it took that clerk's 38 appraisal of me to jerk me into action.

"I am too short," she added, "to let myself get a pound heavier. And nobody knows that better than I. But you know when I tried on that 38 and found it fit me, it terrified me. And I said to myself right there: 'I won't buy a suit until I get myself down eight pounds. I can do it—because I did it before. And I will come back and buy my old size again. If I buy this larger size I will fit in it and be content, perhaps, to stay there. I'll just fool that girl, I will.' Besides, I'll live up to you, my figure is my vanity. It has brought me more compliments than any other asset—but that was in the good old days before I added ten pounds. I have been at this diet exactly two weeks today and weigh nine pounds less than when I started," she added.

"Tell me all about this diet." I urged.

And this is what she did eat and what she did without: She worked the diet out with the aid of a physician, and was warned by him, as I warn you, that this is a temporary relief system only. In order to stay at the reduced figure you have to hold your diet down and the addition of some daily exercise is necessary always and more healthful in the long run.

BREAKFAST—A peach, pear, or apple; coffee without sugar and cream; a gluten wafer or thin slice of rye bread.

DUNCHEON—Soup (any kind but cream soups), with wafers or crackers; thin slice of rye bread; tea or coffee without cream or sugar. Instead of the soup some days she took egg salad with French dressing (not mayonnaise) or a medium portion of one or two vegetables such as spinach, cabbage, tomatoes, or string beans.

DINNER—Meat or fish of any kind she felt like eating; one or two green vegetables; salad with French dressing; fresh fruit for dessert, such as sliced peaches, melon, and sliced oranges, without sugar or cream; tea or coffee without cream and sugar.

Potatoes once a week were added, and on Sunday she ate a regular dinner such as she would have eaten before the diet term, except to eliminate rich pastries.

In addition Mrs. J. drank plenty of water between meals, and if she got too hungry between meals she ate an apple. Her physician told her that she might add an egg for breakfast if she found that necessary, but being determined not to pamper herself she eliminated that; but you may have the egg in the beginning if you find it necessary.

One thing—highly important in reducing—she saw to it that there were no constipation troubles; but the diet, she found, naturally took care of that. If you have trouble, however, see that by some measure your bowels move daily. The water drinking will help greatly.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

A. E. S.: ONE HUNDRED AND eighteen pounds or thereabouts is the standard weight for a woman 24 and 5 feet 3 inches. This bicycle pedaling exercise reduces thighs, buttocks, and hips. Lie down on the floor or on a mattress without a pillow, and with hands clasping knees, thighs flexed on abdomen, feet extended, and toes pointing outward, push legs forward alternately with resistance. S. L. ANXIOUS: I WONDER WHY the sudden consciousness of noses! So many complaints on noses have been heard around my desk lately. I investigated to see if there was a new style in noses to breed the discontent, but found none. My advice is to leave your facial centerpiece alone and don't worry about it. If you have golden hair, large blue eyes, and a pretty mouth and figure, the gods have been kind to you. But remember the same gods fashion every one with some beauty sorrow to keep them from becoming too vain. Accept the nose as yours and be thankful it wasn't a wart thereon you drew. You can not make it smaller, anyway.

JANE: PERSONALITY IS THE ability to attract people. "It is more than character. It is character forcefully expressed. You may have character without personality, but you can not have personality without power." So saith a wise man. In addition to character developing personality may be achieved by a careful study of two things—dress and address. A French orator once said: "There are no ugly women—only those who do not know how to be beautiful." Enthusiasm and poise are features of address. To be enthusiastic one must be happy and hopeful. The poise of one with personality has enthusiasm that glows, not flashes, and carries a strain of humor with it.

POVERTY AND PRIDE.

WE were poor, I'll admit. Father, no hand at work, spent what he earned playing cards with his fellow workmen; mother with six of us on hand had all she could do to feed us. I was 13 when I graduated from grammar school. Unable to work, through the advice of a teacher, I took a course in stenography at night school.

When I was 14, I secured a position in a large office as stenographer. Here I, in my poor drab, untidy, unkempt, met some of the nicest girls. I began to take notice, spent noon hours manicuring my nails, evenings mending and making clothing. The girls took a liking to me, I soon became one of them.

Every other week, one of the group of twelve girls entertained the office force at her home—a supper with loads of fun afterwards. I was timid about going, but the girls insisted. The first few times the girls overruled my protest, insisted on allowing them to at least escort me to the car when going home—their beaux called for them—I hadn't any—thank goodness.

Margaret, my deskmate's, turn came to entertain. She made a big fuss, invited the girls' beaux to come up a little earlier in the evening, and when they came, Margaret's brother Lawrence, filled in the party as my partner. Games were played, time slipped by, 1 o'clock it was before we started for home and then Margaret simply wouldn't hear of my going home alone, so Lawrence did the honors.

Frightened, panic stricken, I didn't know what to do. I couldn't take Lawrence to the broken down section of the city we lived in—to our neglected cottage, with probably the shades up, window curtains flying, father and his friends playing cards, smoking the room up! Impossible! I couldn't let the girls know what kind of a home I came from. I dared not face the results of such a visit! So my thoughts ran as we silently rode out, then suddenly an idea came to me.

On the boulevard, six blocks from home, lived a family carrying, our name. I'd take Lawrence there; he need never know that they were not my parents. I did! We got off the car, walked up half the block, stopped at a two story stone house and I, on pretext that I had not the front door key, went through the side, hid in the little passage-way until Lawrence was gone, then ran homeward.

What terror I went through, what unhappiness, when Lawrence called me at the office, time and again, pleaded with me to allow him to keep steady company! And although I refused again and again, he loyally came to me each time the girls entertained and each time I took him to the house on the boulevard.

When my turn to entertain came, I took the precious few dollars, I managed to save, engaged dinners for the girls at one of the restaurants, and followed it with a theatre party, excusing my act by mother's pretended illness.

It was a warm summer evening; the boys were waiting at the theatre to take us home. Lawrence faithfully among them. We got off the street car, but as we neared the house, supposed to be my home, I saw people sitting outside. Panic stricken, I didn't know what to do. Lawrence remarked he thought my folks were sitting outside. At the house, he stopped, hesitant. I, terror running down my spine, fairly dragged Lawrence on, then broke down and told him all. Against my wishes I proved to Lawrence I wasn't exaggerating my description and took him to the place we called home.

But a man's a man, when he loves he loves fondly. Lawrence didn't let this prevent our happiness. Instead, after giving me all he possibly could, a home, garden and all, he turned and dug father and mother out of the rut and brought them to a self respecting life.

Strange Weddings Contest.

It Rained Cats.

At a fashionable church wedding recently everything was proceeding in quiet solemnity when suddenly there was a snarl and a jump and two cats fell on the minister's head from the balcony above. I don't think anybody remembers just how the ceremony was concluded, for even the minister joined in the laugh that followed. S. L.

The Skeleton at the Feast.

My brother's wedding took place at his bride's home, which was next door to us. A telegram came to our house and the delivery boy was told my brother was next door. And arriving when we were at the dinner table, my brother, thinking it was words of congratulation, opened it and gave it to the best man to read. He stood up and read aloud: "Send money you owe me, need it at once." Loud laughter was heard from the guests. E. S.

One of the Family.

We had a beautiful outdoor wedding for our sister on a September morning. Elaborate floral arches, altar, etc., had been arranged. Our guests were assembled. From out the house came the procession, the minister leading the bride and bridegroom with their attendants, when to the merriment of all, our family dog joined in the procession, walking along slowly as the rest, and he laid down by the altar during the ceremony. Difficult to Keep Your Hair Wavy? Read This

If you have not yet tried the new way, the Silmerine way, by all means do so. You'll never again use the ruinous heated iron. The curliness will appear so perfectly natural and the hair will be so beautifully lustrous, instead of dried and parched. This liquid Silmerine serves also as a beneficial dressing for the hair. It is neither sticky nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use. It should be applied at night with a clean tooth brush, drawing the latter through the hair from root to tip.

The hair will have the loveliest curls and waves imaginable in the morning, and it will be easy to manage, no matter how stubborn it may be. A bottle of the liquid from your druggist will last a long time.

LUDEN'S
MENTHOL COUGH DROPS
SWEETEN THE BREATH

FROM time immemorial and among every kind of people, nothing has made a greater impression upon credulous and superstitious mankind than the mysterious, imagining children of night—dreams.

According to the general belief, dreams to have any significance must occur during a healthy and tranquil sleep and the sleeper must have, after being fully awake, a vivid conception or clear remembrance of the dream. Shadowy, indistinct, or half remembered dreams are considered of little or no significance by dream authorities.

For your amusement, I am going to give below a dictionary of dreams with the one request that you do not take them too seriously:

ABSENCE—Seeing absent persons in your dreams denotes their speedy return.

ACCIDENT—Witnessing one, passing worries; being the victim of one, slow but finally successful in your favorite enterprise.

ACCUSATION—Being accused by a man, great danger, success; being accused by a woman, bad news; accusing some one else, sorrow.

ACQUAINTANCE—Having a fight with an acquaintance, financial distraction.

ACROBAT—Seeing acrobats, much joy; to see yourself acting the acrobat, great troubles.

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES—Seeing them, fulfillment of your desires; to dream that you are one yourself, much anxiety.

ALMS—Asking and receiving, bad luck; being asked and refusing to give, want and misery; being asked and giving them freely, good luck, joy and long life.

ALTAR—Happiness and a speedy marriage.

ANGEL—Good luck, happiness, good news.

ANGER—Trouble, beware of powerful enemies.

ANIMALS—As a general rule, domestic animals signify a hasty return of absent friends, family happiness and reconciliation of quarrels; wild animals signify secret enemies.

APPARITIONS—To see ghosts, spirits and the like in your dream is an unlucky sign.

APPETITE—Having a good appetite denotes the departure of a friend or relative.

APPLES—Seeing them, great troubles; eating them, heavy losses.

ARM—Seeing one, true friendship; if it is broken, a quarrel; if it is a hairy arm, fulfillment of desires.

ARMY—A quarrel with those whom you love best.

AUTOMOBILE—Seeing one, a visit from an old friend; riding one, a speedy journey.

BACON—Eating some, triumph over enemies; cutting some is sometimes a sign of death and sometimes a prediction of failure in business.

BARBER—Troubles.

BALL—Attending one, pleasure and joy; playing ball, good fortune.

BAND OF MUSIC—Money.

BANK—Disappointment.

BANKRUPTCY—Prosperity and great success in business.

BANQUET—A caution to avoid pleasures which may cost you dear.

BATH—Taking a bath that is either too hot or too cold, domestic grief; moderate temperature, pleasure and wealth.

BEDBUGS—Bring strife.

BEES—Wealth and success in business; if they sting you, a friend will betray you; if the dreamer kills a bee, he will have great losses; seeing bees leave their honey is a sign of honor and fortune; if they fly into their hives, losses through enemies.

BEGGAR—To be a beggar, you may hope for wealth; to see many, sickness.

BELL—Misfortunes for the person who hears it ring.

BET—To dream that you bet with any one shows that you will suffer from your own imprudence.

BILL—If presented to you and you settle it, good luck; if you cannot pay, it signifies that you will be slandered.

BIRDS—A good sign; they bring friends and fortune; to catch them, speedy marriage; to kill them, bad fortune; to shoot at them, beware of treachery; if you see them fighting, you will be exposed to great temptations; if they fly toward you, you will fail in business; if they sing, some happiness is in store for you; to dream of birds of prey brings misfortune.

BITE—To dream that you are bitten foretells much jealousy and sorrow.

BLASPHEMY—If you dream that you are using it, it foretells bad fortune; if you are cursed, all your expectations will be fulfilled.

BLOOD—To dream that you see blood is a good sign; you will fall heir to an estate. To lose blood signifies sorrow and disappointment.

BOAT—Seen in a clear stream, happiness; in muddy water, disgrace; if it is in danger of capsizing, trouble.

BOOKS—To be reading serious books shows honor and station in life; to read lascivious books, shame and disgrace.

BOOTS—If they are new, success in love and business; if they are old, quarrelling and failure.

BOTTLES—A good sign; to a man, success in business; to a maid, speedy marriage. If they are broken, they signify sorrow.

BOUQUET—To receive one, much pleasure; to give one signifies that your lover is constant.

BRIARS—To dream that you are among briars and get pricked foretells that you will have an angry dispute with somebody.

BRIDGE—To pass one shows success in life through industry; to fall from one, loss of business and disappointment in love.

BURIED ALIVE—You will be rich and powerful. To wealthy people, it is a sign of addition to their wealth.

BURNING—To see in your dream one or more houses burning, but not wholly destroyed; for the poor, they will become rich, and for the rich man—his riches will be augmented; if the fire is furious and the houses fall down, the dreamer may expect losses, disappointments, shame, etc.

DIGGING—To dream of digging in clean and healthy ground is a sign of thrift and good luck generally; if the ground be dirty or wet, it shows trouble; if you are digging for gold and fine large and rich lumps, it shows you'll have some good luck, but if the product is meager, or if you don't find any, it foretells disappointment. If you lose any of your tools, it is a sign of a quarrel.

DINNER—If you dream of sitting down to dinner with a large company, it is a sign you will either go a journey or change the present location either of your dwelling or business.

If it is clean sand or soil, and you do not get befouled with it, it is a sign of thrift and good fortune. If some one throws dirt on you, it foretells that you will be abused.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By Mary King.

THE TATTLER.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago

THE author of the following letter is justified to some extent for her grievance against one of her business associates who, judging from stories I have heard from other workers, is not the only offender, but is typical of a group of girls in business.

They are the girls who lack the courage to stand by their own deeds and take the consequences for them, whether right or wrong, and who are imbued with the mistaken idea that to succeed themselves it is necessary to do so at the expense or everybody with whom they come in contact. They never lose an opportunity of bringing some slight omission or error on the part of an associate to the attention of the person in charge. Especially as in the case cited below do they feel it incumbent upon themselves to cover their own shortcomings by calling attention to those of others in the office:

Dear Miss King: Lately I have been so provoked by one of the girls in the office that to relieve my feelings I feel that I must tell somebody about it. Knowing you will understand and perhaps help, I come to you.

"With one exception the girls in the office work harmoniously together. This one girl, however, is a trial to the rest of us. Whenever she is reprimanded for breaking a rule of the office, abusing some privilege, which she does more than anybody else, she tries to excuse herself by telling the boss that she isn't the only one in the office who needs to be called to account and everybody takes the same advantages she does, intimating that they are careful not to do it while he is there, and representing herself as the only honorable person in the office.

"Instead of allowing herself to be lectured, she wards off any such intention of the boss by lecturing him about the rest of us, telling him that we are the ones who need to be watched and not her.

"Occasionally she has been right in stating that she is not the only one of us who takes advantage, but oftener she blames some of us unjustly.

"She has an idea that in this way she is promoting her own stock with the firm, while undermining ours, but as far as I can see she has gained nothing by it. She has been with the firm for years—longer than any of us—but she is no better off as far as job and salary are concerned.

"It seems to me that the girls who cannot bear to be told they are remiss in any way are the very ones to run to the boss with a complaint about some one else. A. R."

You have my sympathy, A. R., for having to work with the sort of a person described above. Be sure to not give her what she would call an excuse for tattling by attending well to your duties and observing strictly office rules and regulations. Try to bear her unjust accusations with a good grace for, according to your own account your business associate has neither helped her own cause nor injured your position.

To be courageous enough to stand the consequences of a mistake or breach of office rules is to possess one of the characteristics that makes for success.

AVIATORS discovered the warmth and protection of leather coats, and Franklin Simon their smartness and adaptability to many uses and occasions. They are soft and supple—light in weight—comfortably warm and defy the elements, for winds cannot ruffle them nor storms mar their pliancy or coloring.

Hence a leather coat is the one satisfying protective coat for the motor enthusiast or for those who heed the call of the great outdoors. And for steamer wear or on severe Winter days, a leather coat meets every demand of smartness and of cosy warmth.

And further, it plays a dual role in the modern woman's wardrobe, for it may also serve as a general utility coat in town; in fact, a leather coat is ideal for immediate wear and later, in the Winter.

The smooth surfaces and round corners are two features exclusive with the "Kitchen Maid." Then there are the removable flour bin, easy to remove for cleaning, simple to fill; the automatic sugar bin, with no valves to clog—a tip forward opens, a tip backward closes the bin; the pastry compartment, where delicate cakes and pastries can be kept fresh for days.

AN EDIBLE BOILED DINNER.

THERE are boiled dinners which are repellently poor from the boiling. Unfortunately the boiled dinner best from boiling usually makes an unnecessarily poor table appearance. This is because it is nearly always served in hit or miss fashion.

To raise the status of the family boiled dinner it must be served as seductively as possible. The first objection offered to that idea may be that to arrange a collection of vegetables with meat on a platter requires that they be much handled. With two spoons, one of the strainer type, it is possible to lift each piece of a boiled dinner from a kettle and set it in a well determined place with no waste of motion or touch of fingers.

It is a little queer that a lot of cooked vegetables may seem hateful when served separately and so good when chopped together and heated up. The clever mother may lead her child to eat vegetables each and every time by chopping them together on a plate or fixing them in some attractive fashion. I am presuming that these vegetables are rightly cooked, as they are not when boiled instead of simmered with exceedingly salty meat.

For one of the reasons why no part of a boiled dinner may be worth eating we must hark back to the time when every family was a host in itself and only went to market for tea, coffee, sugar, rice, and such stables. In every cellar then there were bins of fruit and apples, and barrels of salted meats, while in cold dry storerooms hung fresh pieces of pork or smoked meats of home curing. The meat used for the boiled dinner might then be, according to the old saying, "as salt as the briny ocean." Such meat is coarse and harsh. The salt is not food and must be eliminated from the body with unnecessary wear and tear. Vegetables cooked with anything so salt are never so tender as when cooked with something like salt pork, which cannot be so much hardened with salt as lean beef. Potatoes would not cook to pieces in such water, and they will in water less salt, but that is but a trifling advantage.

First, a boiled dinner should be worth eating, and some are not, and then it should be served so pleasingly that every member of the family, and particularly every child, will eat generously of it. If the meat is the traditional piece of corned brisket it should be thoroughly washed, soaked if necessary, rolled, and tied, but a piece of salt pork has advantages as the center of the dinner. For one reason, if fat it contains about 3,600 calories, while the beef contains less than 1,400 calories. And even when lean it is likely to contain nearly 3,000 calories.

A piece of salt pork scored in squares, as in the picture, may be quite as fine looking as a similar expanse of opera caramels, be as useful cold as any piece of corned beef, and of a good deal more value in sandwiches for a school child. I have given it to women and men brought up to despise all fats and have had them eat it down clear like a piece of candy. If to be eaten hot, children will be more sure to like it if it is cut in slices before it is cooked. All the surfaces are then scaled and there is not the salvy or shiny appearance of the freshly sliced piece.

In preparing the vegetables one should have an eye to the garnishing value of fancy cutting. It is hardly more work to cut round and round the top of a carrot than to slice it, but large carrots may be sliced and the pieces used to advantage in setting up the dish. Small carrots cooked whole may be arranged picturesquely. By cutting round the top of the carrot a pretty little basket shape may be made, the top thinner and more spreading edge notched if we choose. This fancy reddish gold ring set up at the edge or end of the platter easily may stimulate the eating imagination of the child. Out of the half of a small turnip you can make several little dish-like pieces in which to set small pieces of other vegetables.

Prepare the pork and put it into the boiling water, and add the vegetables in turn, according to the time required to cook them. Turnips, carrots, cabbage, and potatoes cooked in the kettle with meat represent the traditional collection, but either salt pork or beef will have a pleasanter flavor if we add some celery, cut variously, to this collection. Tomatoes boiled with their skins on go well with the meat and add greatly to the appearance of the dish when served. These should be put in during the last twenty or thirty minutes of the cooking. A sweet red pepper boiled whole with the rest adds its seasoning and is a pretty garnish.

If hard boiled corned beef is poor stuff, and but slightly digestible, it must be simmered. If hard boiled it is but slightly seasoned by the collection of vegetables, while it may be deliciously seasoned by them if gently cooked with them. A pound of thick salt pork or a little more for a good kettle full of vegetables, gently cooked with them, is far finer eating than most people accustomed only to crude uses of salt pork could guess. In order to get it for use cold, particularly in sandwiches, it would be almost worth while to boil the vegetables with it and use them for hash merely. Remember that it is a solid lump of calories and at eatable as sugar.

Beets must be cooked separately and the potatoes almost need to be unless they can be packed on the top and steamed. They may be put in a steamer over the boiling collection. With fat salt pork they will cook tender and go to pieces inside of half an hour.

Even the liquid in which a boiled dinner is correctly cooked is serviceable. For one thing it may be jellied with slices of meat, garnished with bits of the vegetable. The boiled dinner is, in fact, a great variorum of possibilities, but these cannot be guessed at until its first possibility is understood.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of medicine size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Six-teen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Boiled Corned or Fresh Beef Tongue.

Wash and drain a corned or fresh beef tongue. Place in a kettle and cover with cold water; bring to the boiling point and let boil five minutes. Skim. If a corned tongue is being cooked and the water is "briny," the water may be changed several times if necessary or the tongue may be covered with cold water and allowed to soak over night; then drain and cover with cold water and cook slowly until tender (from three to four hours). Remove from the water when slightly cooled and peel off the thick skin; return tongue to kettle and let it stand in the liquor until cold. Fresh beef tongue needs no soaking. Wash, drain, cover with cold water, and bring quickly to the boiling point; skim and cover closely and let cook slowly until tender. Add one tablespoon of salt to the water the last hour of cooking. Peel and cool the same as corned tongue. If served hot, dispose on a bed of boiled spinach, garnish with hard cooked eggs. If served cold, thinly slice and arrange around a mound of potato salad or baked beans. Pass mustard or horseradish sauce.

Beet and Horseradish Relish.

Boil red beets in the usual way; drain and plunge at once into cold water; with the hands, slip off the skins and finely chop the beets; there should be two quarts. Finely chop purple or white cabbage; there should be two quarts. Add to prepared beets one cup of fresh grated horseradish. Mix thoroughly, and add two cups of sugar, one tablespoon of salt, and ground black pepper to taste. Add cold cider vinegar to cover. Turn into sterilized pint glass fruit jars, shake the jars until the mixture settles to within one-half inch from the tops; then fill jars with more vinegar. Put new rubbers on jars, set covers in place and seal. Store in a cool dark place. Wrap each jar in brown paper to prevent beets fading if not stored in a dark closet. Serve with hot or cold meats.

Stuffed Sweet Potatoes.

Bake three large sweet potatoes; cut in halves lengthwise; carefully scoop out the pulp and press through a ricer (reserve the shells). Season with one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of paprika, one-half tablespoon of powdered sugar, three tablespoons of butter, and one-third cup of hot cream or rich milk; beat thoroughly, then stir in one-half cup of finely shredded blanched almonds. Refill shells. Cut marshmallows in four pieces and cover each portion with pieces. Bake in a moderate oven until heated through and marshmallows are plumped and delicately browned. Serve with broiled spring chicken, roast pork, or braised pork tenderloin.

Butter Scotch Pie.

Cover an inverted pie pan (measuring 9 inches in diameter and 1¼ inches deep) with rich pastry, place on a baking sheet, and bake in a hot oven until delicately brown. Carefully remove the shell from the outside and place it on the inside of the pan. Fill with the following filling mixture and spread with a brown sugar meringue:

Cream one-fourth cup of butter, add gradually one-third cup of flour; then gradually three-fourths cup of rolled light brown sugar mixed with two whole eggs and one egg yolk slightly beaten, and one-half a teaspoon of salt. Scald two cups of milk in a double boiler, add gradually one tablespoon of caramel syrup, stirring constantly until caramel is dissolved. Pour slowly into first mixture, stirring until well blended. Return to double boiler and cook fifteen minutes; continue stirring until mixture thickens, afterwards occasionally.

To make caramel syrup put one-half cup of sugar in an iron skillet and stir constantly until sugar is melted and slightly browned; then add one-third cup of boiling water and continue boiling until a thick syrup is formed.

Chicken Tamales.

Chop cold cooked chicken fine. There should be three cups. Finely chop six mild red Mexican peppers. Mix with one-fourth cup of finely chopped onions and soak in one-fourth cup of vinegar one hour. Drain and add one cup of fine bread crumbs, one cup of thick tomato pulp, ten finely chopped olives, and one egg slightly beaten. Season with salt. Mold in cork shapes croquettes, roll in cornmeal, and wrap in corn husks. Tie the ends with clean twine to keep the mixture in place, trim off the ends one inch from where tied, and steam three hours. Then set in the oven ten minutes to dry off.

Lift Off Corn

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon the bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

Tiny bottles of "Freezone" cost but a few cents at drug stores

Regular Habits Produce a Beautiful Complexion

Daily elimination rids the system of poisons. Women should realize that!

MANY women complain daily of their complexion, of their headaches and general ill health little realizing that the trouble is constipation. Women, too, are much more subject to such congestion than men, and much more careless of it. The result is seen in lusterless, weary eyes, in sallow, pimply complexion, in lassitude, bad breath, and in that word so often used, "indisposed."

At the first sign of these symptoms the wise woman will take a laxative, and will see that the young girl and others in her care do likewise. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite with thousands of women because it is mild and gentle in its action and in the end trains the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work naturally without the aid of medicine.

This combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1 a bottle, the latter for families, for it is also a very sterling first-aid in colds, fevers and other sudden ills that make it advisable to always have a bottle in the home. It is free from narcotics and safe for the tiniest baby.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there bring over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

large to allow generous hems top and bottom, for material often shrinks in dyeing. Seven inches above the edge where you have planned the hem, rule the two lines of the lower edge of the design, using light charcoal lines; two and three-quarters inches above it rule the second pair of lines and then the final pair two and three-quarters inches above the second set. Leave a blank space of three inches and then rule two sets of lines for the upper border. The pen and ink drawing suggests the arrangement. Draw the double lines twice across the valance just above the place where you will stitch the hem.

Cover the back of your design with charcoal rubbed entirely over the paper so that it is equal to a piece of black carbon paper. Carefully place it between the double lines and trace. Trace the second one immediately beside the first one, so that the pattern becomes continuous. When both curtains and the valance have all borders traced, heat ordinary laundry paraffine in a skillet until smoke begins to issue from it. Using your No. 8 brush for the broad lines, paint this wax on the border lines. It is quite easy to paint with, but be careful not to let a drop fall on the material, as it is difficult to remove. Repeated drops of hot water over a blotting paper will do it. Paint in those portions of the design that are covered with shaded lines, using the wax and brush No. 3. When all the lines and the designs are covered with wax prepare the dye bath.

Use the dye according to instructions except that it must be cold when you put the curtains into it [else the heat will melt off the paraffine] and it must be about twice as strong as the directions demand, as you have not the aid of heat in getting the color into the material. Mix enough dye for all the pieces to be dyed at the same time in order to avoid differences in shade.

Allow the curtains to remain in the dye bath until they are of the color you desire. Remember that wet material appears darker than when dry and allow for this in deciding. Remove from the dye bath and rinse in cold water if you wish a lighter shade or dry with the dye in it if you wish to keep it darker.

From cotton crepe or unbleached muslin the wax may be removed with boiling water. But gasoline is preferable, as it has less effect upon the dye.

When the wax is removed you will have white flowers between lines of white upon a rose tinted or blue ground.

BATIK FOR CURTAINS.

Batik is simply painting designs on cloth, using melted paraffine, then dyeing the cloth. The waxed portion of the material remains the original color, the remainder being dyed the selected color or colors, for the process may be repeated a number of times in order to obtain the more elaborate effects.

Today's design is intended to be used on bedroom or sun parlor curtains of white cotton crepe or unbleached muslin. One unit of the design is given and this is to be repeated between straight lines until a border pattern is the result. If the newspaper design wears out in repeated tracings you can transfer it to medium heavy white writing paper and trace from that. The best medium for tracing the design is charcoal. Blacken the entire back of the design, lay it in place between lines that have been ruled inches apart on the curtain or valance, and trace with a medium hard lead pencil.

The outfit needed for dyeing the curtains consists of several large mixing bowls for rinsing and for holding the dye, a large enameled or porcelain lined kettle, in which to heat or boil the dye, a small skillet in which to heat the wax, a No. 3 bristle brush to be used in painting fine lines, a No. 8 bristle brush to be used for covering larger surfaces, several packages of dye, either medium blue or cardinal, if you wish blue or pink curtains [use dye soap or chips], a gallon of gasoline, and several sticks of the sort of charcoal which art students use.

First cut the curtains sufficiently

HOOSIER

— the Kitchen Cabinet that saves miles of steps

Where 90 per cent of your work is done

You can't afford to face a handicap as you sit at your cabinet, ready for work. The work space must be free from partitions, shelves and other cluttering hindrances. Only in the Hoosier can you get the scientific arrangement shown here. It is the vital section—the feature that assures efficiency in your work.

The most famous kitchen cabinet in the world

HOOSIER fame is quality fame. More women have bought Hoosiers than any other. And the judgment of these women must surely be respected. Now, as you read, over a million and a half of America's housewives center their kitchen work in the Hoosier. The nation's leading household authorities, domestic science experts and schools have also chosen the Hoosier.

Reasons that prove

All thinking women will agree that there must be a sound reason for this universal preference. There is! But that reason is not found in one, or two, or even more features. It is evident in every part and detail of this highly developed laborsaver.

Hoosier conveniences were created for the sole purpose of saving time and toil and to enable the housewife to conserve her strength and health. No change has been or will be made that does not conform to this ideal. This is your guarantee of easier work.

Investigate, then decide

See the Hoosier demonstrated. Note its scientific arrangement, its sanitary construction. If you do not find them conveniently near, a post card to us will bring you the names of Hoosier merchants.

We will also send "New Kitchen Short Cuts" —a book of valuable facts.

Ready for More

The growing boy knows what's good. He just naturally comes back for more when mother has steaming, golden brown pancakes for breakfast—the fluffy, crispy, melt-in-your-mouth kind made only from VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR.

Children and grown-ups alike relish such pancakes—thrive on them, too. With plenty of wholesome syrup they're simply delicious.

The correct proportions of properly milled wheat, corn and rice in VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR makes cakes that are light, digestible and substantial—a breakfast easy to get and always satisfying.

Waffles made from VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR are lighter, smoother, brown better, and do not stick to the waffle-iron.

As for muffins, you'll never make another muffin from "just flour" when you've seen the results you get with VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR.

Treat your family to these VIRGINIA SWEET goodies. Surprise 'em with something differently appetizing:

VIRGINIA SWEET BRAND SELF RAISING PANCAKE FLOUR

GRIDDLE CAKES

Mix thoroughly with two cups sweet milk or cold water to a batter, two cups VIRGINIA SWEET. Bake on hot griddle and serve with syrup. The addition of two eggs, well beaten, will improve the cakes.

DELICIOUS WAFFLES

Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one cup milk, three tablespoons melted butter and one cup VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR; mix thoroughly, then fold in the whites of two eggs, beaten dry. Bake on hot, well-oiled waffle-iron.

DELICATE MUFFINS

Beat one-third cup butter to a cream; beat in one-fourth cup sugar and one egg, beaten light; add one cup milk and one cup and three-fourths of VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR and mix thoroughly; bake in a hot, well-buttered muffin pan about 25 minutes.

All good grocers sell VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR. Say plainly to yours: "I want VIRGINIA SWEET" and insist on getting it.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a steady reader of your column. I am now asking you for a little advice. I am in love with a fellow 23 year old. He seems to like and care for me very much when he is with me, but he tells my girl friend he does not like my company. At the same time he doesn't know I know it. Would you kindly advise me what to do?. Would you let him know all about it or keep on going with him and see if he tells her any more? BRIGHT EYES."

Well, Bright Eyes, your eyes are not very bright if you would tolerate a boy who would belitttle you that way behind your back.

The "Good Sport" Type.

"Dear Miss Blake: If you will allow a mere man to have his say I have a few comments to make on 'Peggy's' letter. I am 30 years old, have lived in a good many states, and am married, so that I feel that I have had sufficient experience to give my remarks some weight. I went to a university and have lived in a university town for ten years, and that is a mighty good place to get experience with women and girls, and to learn just how the young man looks at such matters.

"The average young man at the age when he attends college thinks of having a good time; he does not want to get married. When he spends an evening with a girl, if she permits any liberties, he is sure to tell his boon companions all about it, so that any girl who is taken out much is catalogued and just what she will permit known in advance. If these girls only knew what was said about them afterwards they would 'die of shame.' I have seen a girl—yes, scores—extremely popular year after year, but they never seemed to get married, though engaged more than once.

"The primeval sense of ownership is still pretty strong in the average male, and when he looks for a wife he doesn't want a woman who has been too free with her kisses in order to be popular. He wants a girl that he can respect, and he wants other qualities than those he found in the 'good sport' type. A girl need not permit liberties in order to be popular; neither need she be a prude.

"In conclusion I wish to indorse your stand in this matter, and allow me to remark that I am not a 'stick in the mud,' either.

"AVERAGE MALE."

Daily the query comes to me whether to permit kisses or not to. My views have been exrpessed frequently and firmly, so for a change this "average male" opinion may be of interest. Peggy's letter contained the oft repeated query.

Considering Matrimony.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man 20 years old, considered good looking, and am deeply in love with a girl of 17, and I know my love is returned. My present wages are sufficient to easily support a wife. She is a girl talented along many lines and she is a lover of dancing and all other gay amusements. I do not dance, although I do not oppose dancing. Do you think that a couple could be happy united under these conditions, or do you think her social life would interfere with our happiness? HARRY."

You could be happy if you take up dancing yourself and become proficient in the art. You could not expect her to give up dancing at her age, for it is one of the healthy amusements normal youth craves. However, I do think it is not quite fair of you to ask a girl so young to assume the responsibilities of matrimony. Why not wait a couple of years and in the meantime save your money so you can have a nice little flat and a little bank account maybe besides?

DOLLY: If you do not want to accept the man's invitation to the theater, simply tell him that you are sorry, but you already have an engagement for that night, that you are going to a dance, or to have a caller, or any definite—and therefore inoffensive—excuse. Never make the mistake of saying you cannot accept and offering no reason.

Walter's mother trades with a certain peddler, who comes into the alley every few days. The other day Walter asked his mother if she wouldn't buy from another peddler and she, curious, asked why, to which the little chap replied: "Well, he has such a nice horse!" F. M.

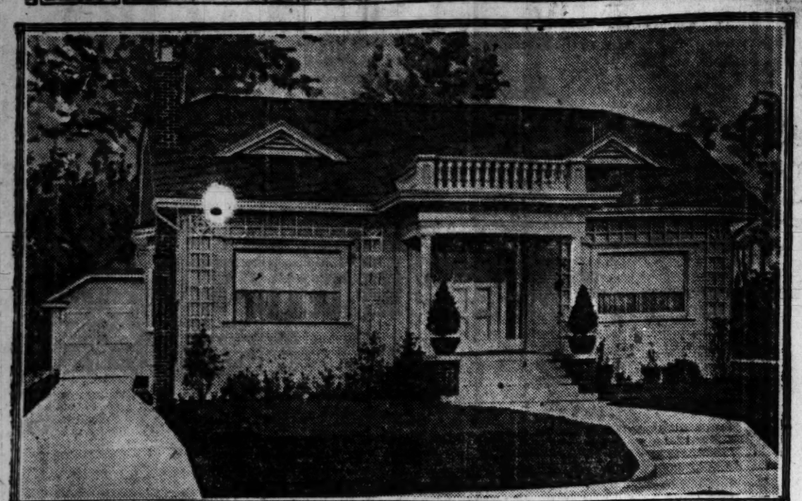
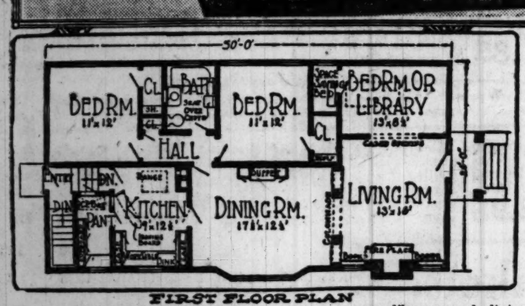
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



COURTESY OF THE AMERICAN BUILDER.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the Home makers in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

CONVENIENT AND ARTISTIC.

ARCHITECTS now are transplanting into other parts of the country the sort of home that is so common in California—the white bungalow. It makes a most attractive home, as will be seen by the accompanying illustration. But while the walls are painted the virginial color, contrasts are secured by the natural color of the brick fireplace chimney, face brick in the porches, and the roof.

The colonial style is used in the exterior of the bungalow shown, as the door is placed exactly in the center, and the balance is maintained by narrow windows on either side of the house and duplicate windows in the front. The porch, with its round columns and the balcony atop of it, also hints of the colonial. The high hip roof, with dormer gables, and the garage following the same style make this a most excellent home design from the exterior.

Six rooms and bath are provided inside, their arrangement being shown by the floor plan that accompanies the exterior view. Ranged on one side of the bungalow are living room, dining room, and kitchen. On the other side are library and two bedrooms, with the bathroom between.

There are several features of the interior arrangement of this bungalow that will have a strong appeal to the modern home builder. For example, the living room, library, and dining room all are connected by wide openings that between the living and dining rooms being a colonnade. This arrangement gives the home owner a great opportunity for artistic furnishings and decoration. It also will be noticed that there is a closet in the library, designed especially to accommodate a space saving bed. The dimensions of the house are 26x50 feet. Under it is a full basement for the accommodation of the heating plant, the fuel supply, and sufficient additional space for storage rooms.

Such a little bungalow as this will provide a great majority of families with a comfortable, convenient, and artistic home. This is not expensive to build, but it has all the comforts included that the modern family wants and will have.

The desirability of having a home of our own has just been forcibly impressed upon us—especially on those who were forced to move Oct. 1. Rents are higher than ever before, and I notice that the real estate men are predicting that they will advance to even greater figures. That makes us think that if we only had a home of our own, we would not be forced to live where we don't want to or to pay more rent than we really can afford.

Owning a home is an easy matter for the renter, if he did but know it. The one thing that stops and has stopped most families that live in a rented house, or in apartments, is to get together the initial payment required to own or build a home. That drawback will soon be eliminated by an ingenious plan that the banks now are using throughout the country.

Recently I have been hearing a great deal about "Own a Home" savings clubs, and I have found that they are great aids to those who want a home but have not saved enough to make the first payment—"down payment," the real estate men call it. The "Own a Home" savings clubs are patterned after the Christmas savings clubs, that banks throughout the country are conducting. The members of the "Own a Home" clubs agree to deposit a certain sum each week. The bank adds to it a certain amount of interest; and, after a period of time, shorter or longer, according to the amount the home will cost, the club member has enough money saved to make the first payment. Then the home is secured and the balance is paid as rent.

By this plan every family who is renting can secure within a few years the same sort of home they now occupy and it can be paid for at the same monthly rate that the renting agent receives. The beauty of the plan is that it provides an easy method of getting that first payment together.

ROXANE

THE Whole Wheat BLEND

Pancakes

Everyone loves Roxane Pancakes so—it is well they are so digestible and so good for everyone. The craving for Roxane is healthful, beneficial—the more you eat the better for you. The mineral salts and bran of the WHOLE WHEAT aid digestion. No other pancakes are so nourishing. They supply exactly the nourishment the body needs most.

Golden Wheat Puts Red in Cheeks

Golden WHOLE WHEAT is Nature's finest food. It makes ruddy cheeks, sparkling eyes, and iron muscles because it has proteins and vitamines; minerals and bran.

The body demands a constant supply of these elements. They are essential—vigor and vitality depend upon them. Roxane WHOLE WHEAT Pancake Flour has all these strengthening elements. Common pancake flour has not. That is why Roxane Pancakes are the best pancakes possible. You should serve them frequently.

The Delicious Roxane Blend

The wonderful flavor of Roxane Pancakes is due to the secret Roxane blend. To the foundation of WHOLE WHEAT, corn flour and rice flour are added in correct proportion. Thus the golden brown, nut-like richness of the WHOLE WHEAT has added to it a delicacy of flavor that is irresistible and a lightness and tenderness that make Roxane Pancakes simply melt away. Roxane is a prepared, self-rising flour, so Roxane Pancakes are easy to prepare — five minutes from package to plate.

Begin with tomorrow's breakfast and serve them often.

If your grocer can't supply you, send his name and address. We will see that you are supplied.

Be Sure You Get An "American Beauty"

You can afford to pay a little more for its years of unfailing service.

Remember, when you buy an inferior iron, you must contend with its faults and flaws, time after time. Repair bills, replacement of coils, ironings interrupted by breakdown, are a few of the worries that recur constantly.

Can the little you save on the cost of an ordinary iron pay for such repeated vexations?

With the American Beauty you are positively free of these annoyances. Just hear how owners praise it. Ask any of the 2,000,000 users what they think of their American Beauty irons.

They chose it, as a skilled workman buys a fine tool—not because it cost less, but upon knowledge of its dependability.

Its scientific balance and specially shaped nose make the work easier. The flexible cord is protected for hard service.

Don't hesitate to let the laundress use your American Beauty. She won't damage it. And she will do your work better.

Get an American Beauty today. You will find a new pleasure and satisfaction in ironing, that more than repays its slightly higher first price.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune will pay $1 for each children's saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to 'Aunty Lee,' The Tribune, Chicago."

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Bobbie was taken to the boys' department for a new overcoat. After looking up at several small boy models he remarked, "Is dis where dead boys come?"

Last summer my little brother made his first visit to a small town. The first day after his arrival he set forth to meet the boys of his own age. On his return at noon the first thing he said was: "Mother, I'll have to have some overalls; they are all the style out here."

Peter was out exercising his bulldog when a small white poodle ran up to the gate and began barking through the cracks of the gate at Peter's bulldog, which made him growl and raise his bristles as if he would chew the poodle up. It was a make-believe burglar game. Francis, with a toy gun, was the burglar. He "held up" Dick and twice "shot" him. But Dick kept on running. Finally Francis, disappointed because Dick was not playing dead, called, "Gee, whizz! Lay down! Don't you know when you're deaded?"

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Winter Season Promises to Be Lively in Chicago

By Mme. ?

Madame X is not able to contribute her article this week, and the following was volunteered as a substitute by one of her friends.

CHICAGO promises to be a hectic place this winter. Every one who has been abroad is returning, and dinners resolve themselves into little whirlpools of talk about each hero.

"Y" women full of amusing reminiscence—Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, Miss Mary Waller, and Miss Isabella Holt being the latest arrivals; officers who hate to talk, but are worth waiting for when they do; Red Cross angels of mercy once more enmeshed in civil life and glad to be out of khaki; sailors who have bobbed on the North sea for two years and are taking an unprecedented delight in home; war correspondents cynically telling us all that our ideas of the war were all wrong; anti-administration people assuring one and all that the war was won in spite of incompetence of Democrats; pro-administration equally certain that we turned the scale regardless of Republican efforts to block progress; laborites, over the soup, crucifying Judge Gary, and conservatives, during the salad, declaring that he is the greatest of men.

"You pays your money and you takes your choice," and either way you have a fair chance of a good argument.

The opera is offering new delights and it is no wonder that Mrs. Edward F. Swift, chairman of the box committee of the Friends of Opera, reports the greater part of the boxes gone for the season. The policy of the opera company in putting up the prices of the remaining boxes on Nov. 1 is an indication of assurance that all will be sold, and already a gayer season than any we have ever had is assured us.

Jewish Relief Next Drive.

The Chicago Jewish relief committee for war sufferers is the next drive to occupy the public stage, and it is to be hoped that this belated appeal for funds will receive the support that it deserves. In the stricken nations of eastern Europe—Poland, Galicia, Lithuania, and the new states of Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia—there are whole populations starving while we in America are feasting, in our reaction from anxiety.

Those are the countries which have needed no Mr. Hoover to urge patriots to use less butter and to please be so kind as to cut down on sugar. Men and women are ill nourished and starving, and of the children of 5 years and under who have lived few know what it was ever to have had enough to eat.

This population is largely Jewish, but the relief furnished through this drive is to be distributed to Jew and Gentile alike, and money, food, and clothes are being sent. It is perhaps because of this, but I think it is more likely to be in recognition of excellent service from Jewish women, that several Gentile women most closely associated with war work have joined the Chicago committee under the leadership of Col. Abel Davis.

Mrs. George A. McKinlock is chairman of this woman's committee and enrolled under her are Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Robert Dunham, and Miss Grace Dixon, as well as the leading Jewish women of the city. It is a pleasant indication of the friendliest sort of cooperation—a survival of the sort of thing that made Chicago—Chicago.

Speaks for Harvard.

Thomas W. Lamont comes to town tomorrow to speak to Harvard men at luncheon at the University club of the actual conditions at Harvard, and the reasons why the graduates and other public spirited persons must see to it that the professors are better paid. Later in the afternoon he goes to the Casino club to meet the Harvard women of Chicago, and to repeat his talk to them.

No subscriptions will be taken at either meeting. Mr. Lamont is traveling as a propagandist only, leaving it to the local committees to reap what he has sowed. I am told that one of the appeals it is planning to make is to bring home to each well to do graduate the fact that in receiving an education from Harvard university and paying for it only the modest tuition fee demanded, he was really the recipient of charity, as the cost of his education was vastly beyond that sum. He is, therefore, requested to figure this deficit, with interest compounded at 5 per cent, and to put himself upon a full pay basis by sending a check for it to the Harvard endowment fund committee.

Lake Geneva in Autumn Tints.

These autumn days see Lake Geneva decked in a bravery of color the like of which does not glorify the shore of Lake Michigan. The Wisconsin maples turn a warm gold or a vivid red, and those summer residents who stay late are rewarded by the most beautiful time of the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutchinson are among those who most keenly appreciate the country, and their long, low house, with scarlet vines clinging to the beams, is never really closed. Mrs. Hutchinson's books testify to her enjoyment of every Lake Geneva season, from earliest bud to deepest snow, but the autumn has especial joy for Mr. Hutchinson, whose chrysanthemums carry off many honors in the annual show, where the competition is keen.

The John J. Mitchells also linger late, although their sons have returned to college, and their little granddaughters—the children of Mrs. Robert Hunter—are soon to return to their home in California. Mr. Mitchell's interests are varied, as the specialties of his maison include prize flowers and vegetables, a splendid Jersey herd, a kennel or two, a chicken farm, and one of the best stables in the country.

It is here, one fancies, that Mr. Mitchell gets the maximum of pleasure from the summer, for every morning he may be seen driving himself to the station with a spirited pair of hackneys which has taken blue ribbons at numberless shows, and every afternoon another equally fine pair meets him. One does not wonder, seeing his arrivals and departures, that Mr. Mitchell is the only Lake Geneva resident of the summer colony who commutes.

Sunday Morning Horse Show.

On fine Sunday mornings he has the flower of his stable led out for him to look over, and as the ceremony amounts to an interesting horse show in itself, a generous group of friends and neighbors collect weekly on a sunny knoll near the garden. The horses are brought out in a white show harness only, and are trotted up and down by indefatigable English stable boys; to the ordinary twentieth century person the ceremony resembles a scene from the English melodrama, "The Whip," so unreal does it seem in these gasoline ruled days.

Horses, by the way, have an unrecognized importance in Lake Geneva. Lake Forest, with paper chases revived and hunting in the offing, is more dramatic, but an increasing number of horse men and women may be met in the grass-grown lanes that meander through the "back country" at Lake Geneva.

The two young daughters of Walden Shaw are but every day; the William G. Wrigley family all ride, and even carry the sport far enough to maintain, throughout their farm, hunting gates that may be opened from the saddle, so that fellow riders may take advantage of the turf. John Borden has recently added hunters to the attractions of his newly acquired place. Miss Helen Isham and Miss Mary Porter are enthusiastic horsewomen, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and her children boast a mileage in the neighborhood of 100 miles a week on horseback.

Steam Yachts Out Again.

The boats have come back again this year, now that the war and the coal shortage are over. They are a unique type of craft, those Lake Geneva yachts—they lie long and seaworthy on the water, their white sides rising boldly, and a salt sea experience connotes cabins and coal bunkers, fo'castles, and cuddies down below the water line, instead of which there is nothing at all under the spotless decks. Their draft is only a few feet, and their sole purpose is to serve for a pleasurable afternoon or evening, as a sort of moving piazza.

Sunday supper on the lake is a custom that many families observe; the Edward Swift's boat, the Hortense, may be encountered every week, with a large house party aboard; Mrs. H. H. Porter occasionally takes her numerous grandchildren and their friends out in the Whileaway, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ayer habitually use their boat for Sunday supper. Sailing, which used to be the chief sport of Lake Geneva, has for many years languished, as golf throve, but this summer the "small fry" have revived it, and white sails flash about the lake again, as the small Henry Porters, John Bordens, Kellogg Fairbanks, and Walden Shaws meet and race each other back and forth across their end of the lake.

Miss Lucretia Crawford, daughter of Mrs. J. B. Smith Jr. of 831 Ainslie street, has just returned from overseas service and is busily engaged in aiding the several charities in which she is especially interested. She will take part in the Spanish operetta, "Marcelle," which the Service club will give on Nov. 7 and 8 in the Aryan Grotto, and also will assist at a tea dance to be given on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 1, at the Congress hotel, under the auspices of the Relief club shop committee. The proceeds will go to local and foreign charities.

Miss Caryl Dunham will be introduced to society on Saturday, Nov. 22, when her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham, will give a reception in the afternoon at their residence, 1521 North State parkway, followed in the evening by a dinner dance at the Casino. Miss Dunham would have made her debut last year had there been such things as debutantes, but since there weren't she took an active part in war work and delayed her formal coming out until this season.

Miss Marian Gallery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gallery of 79 East Elm street, also will be a debutante this season, although no date has been set for her debut. Miss Gallery is Thursday chairman at the Chicago Babies' Free Milk Fund shop at 205 North State street.

FUTURE EVENTS

Elaborate preparations are in progress for a vanity fête to be given on Nov. 5 and 6 in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone by Mrs. Walter Brewster for the benefit of the fatherless children of France. The fête promises to be unusually interesting as designers are hard at work evolving costumes which will be shown to the greatest advantage by the prettiest of Chicago's debutantes and young matrons.

The curtain will rise upon a boudoir scene, just as coffee and rolls appear for a young woman in negligee. The audience will perceive at once that it is being permitted an intimate glimpse of a house party, for presently other young women in negligee will troop in. Miss Elizabeth Granger is chairman of this group.

Following the boudoir scene is to come a glimpse of the Country club, where the smartest of sports clothes of every description will be shown. Among the Country club girls will be the Misses Elizabeth Farwell, Dorothy Keeley, Louise Thorne, Betty Quick, Margaret Carry, Gladys High, Chesney Letts, Edith Cummings, Helen Hoyne, and Louise Thorne, and Mrs. Leander McCormick and Mrs. T. Phil Swift. Miss Janet Pauling is in charge of this group.

In quick succession the curtain will disclose a luncheon at the Blackstone, an afternoon tea, a formal dinner at home, a box at the opera, the dressing room at a dance, and finally a glimpse of Coacoanut Grove, Palm Beach.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Annual Tag Day Tomorrow to Aid Chicago Orphans

THOUSANDS of unfortunate tots who are inmates of orphanages, hospitals, and day nurseries in Chicago will be helped tomorrow by the annual October tag day, to be held by the Chicago Children's Benefit league. Members of the league will act as captains of several teams of young girls who will be on the corners and at various vantage points in the loop to enlist the support of the public in the worthy cause of which they are champions.

The league, which was organized in 1908 with five charities as its beneficiaries, has grown until at the present time there are forty-nine organizations on its roster. More than a million and a half children receive a day's care from the proceeds of the league's efforts.

The banding together of these many interests prevents the great number of individual solicitations which used to be asked on the streets almost every week during the year. Every charity on the list is indorsed by the Association of Commerce, and there are no paid workers, all of the many details of the league's affairs being managed by a board of directors, of which Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal is chairman.

For several years, since tag days came into vogue, and especially during the war, it seemed necessary to have members of them in order that all deserving institutions might share in the proceeds of the public's generosity. Only this year, however, it has been decided that two tag days a year must suffice; one in October for children's charities, and one in the spring for those institutions which care for people from adolescence to old age.

This is but fair, to make but the two demands upon the purses of those who are always willing to give. But in giving it is well to dig deep, think it over, then dig again, for to remember the motto of the league, there is no better investment than to help "The child, the unit for which we work."

Evanston's Community Kitchen Proves That "It Can Be Done"

The Evanston community kitchen is a private venture independently conducted as a civic service, but on a business basis by Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes, Mrs. H. H. Kingsley, and Mrs. James A. Odell, who have given their time since the 1st of March to this work. The Evanston Woman's club is deeply interested in the undertaking, but is in no way responsible for it, except as it rents its kitchen and equipment to the organization.

The community kitchen is a success—financially as well as in every other way—and its growth is so rapid that a trained manager has been placed in charge and much new equipment added within the month. The organizers believe, and are proving, that a delivered dinner service, properly conducted, can be made a success in any community. The times imperatively demand some such solution of the present perplexing household problems.

In the following article Mrs. Kingsley gives an account of the development of the Evanston kitchen.

By Nellie F. Kingsley.

WHETHER the shortage of help in our own kitchens, largely accounted for by the crowding thousands of workers on New York docks returning to their European homes, or an intense conviction of the waste and duplication of individual kitchens, coupled with the imperative need of preserving the individual home and family table, had more to do with the establishment of the Evanston community kitchen I do not know. I only know it was established, and in the face of kindly but solemn warnings from business men who were sure it could not be done and significant smiles from the intensively domestic women who believed it should not be done.

One man made a special effort to call and say: "Be sure to charge enough. We started a lunch club of our own not long ago. It has run $400 behind in two months." Another said: "Our entire income from club meals wouldn't pay the three largest items on the monthly food bills." A third said: "Of course you must know that hotels never expect to make anything from their food service." The women said: "No one could ever cater to suit my family—they are very particular," or dismissed the subject by saying: "Community kitchens always fail." To the latter we agreed, and even went the length of saying that this one might also fail. The first engines failed—but after years of failure airplanes helped win the war!

So a few venturesome souls, imbued with the pioneer spirit, good sports, and driven to distraction by domestic problems and complications, daringly said: "Well, the meals can't be any worse than we are having at home now and I'm going to help try out this experiment." They bought their containers and began with the first meal, and are still enthusiastic patrons of the whole scheme.

Encouraged by few, but firm in their own convictions of a great need, the organizers began to lay their canny and conservative plans, the result of years of domestic experience and unconscious preparation, and months of a definite formulation of their ideas.

They made a flying trip to various kitchens in New York, Boston, Princeton, Cambridge, Montclair, and Cleveland, which while not conducted as they were planning to conduct this one, offered many valuable suggestions. All were distinctly discouraging from the financial standpoint.

Still undaunted but wiser, the organizers came home, secured some experienced helpers, donned huge white aprons, and one brilliant May morning unloaded great trays of doughnuts, cool, crisp salads, luscious cakes, and good food of various kinds on a wabbly table at the annual garden market in the park. They never had an opportunity to arrange their wares, for in a few moments they were swept away by the thronging shoppers and the saleswomen were left empty handed and gasping with surprise.

A week later the community kitchen was in full swing in the basement of the Woman's club. The spirit of this club can always be relied upon to forward any undertaking which promises to help the community and the offer of the club kitchen at a nominal rental for a few months' experiment made the start an easy one.

Daily since then the garden market experience has been repeated, for a steady stream of young mothers, their babies clinging to their skirts; teachers cannily selecting the best "buys"; reporters airily helping themselves to anything on the counters; bonny brides sighing rapturously at the sight of unexpected dainties; sunburned golfers satisfied with anything in sight; jolly picnic parties smacking their lips over the sandwiches and cakes; competent club women eagerly looking for club suggestions; representatives of women's magazines judiciously making copy, and mechanical and government experts interested and responsive, pattered up and down our humble basement stairs resembling an army of grasshoppers, judging from the devastation in their wake. Every day, too, interested buyers would whisper, "How is it really coming on?" "Can you keep it up?" "Are the finances all right?" The proud answer has been: "The finances are all right, the bills are paid and the balance is on the right side of the ledger."

As soon as it was evident from the Blackstone hotel to Lake Forest that the community kitchen food was known and appreciated, the organizers boldly undertook to make their lifelong dream of a delivered dinner service come true. Evanston liked the food, but could not believe that food could be cooked and delivered hot at meal time satisfactorily. The organizers believed it could if the right "container" could be found. In an exciting contest many containers were offered for tests. The judges were the interested organizers and an expert engineer from the Commonwealth Edison company; the audience, officials from the various companies whose containers were under examination.

Each container was filled with boiling water, sealed, locked, and left for five and one-half hours, then opened and tested for heat retention. All the containers stood high in thermal efficiency, but were unattractive in design, made of metal which was insanitary and even dangerous in some cases, and not intended for table use. The organizers wanted a sanitary insulated, glass lined metal dish, attractive in form, of high thermal value and designed for table use, thus avoiding the transference of food and the use of extra dishes which must be washed. One man caught this idea and after weeks and months of effort, in which every one joined, we succeeded in producing the dish desired.

The rest was comparatively easy. In these containers large dinners have been served for college functions. Luncheons have been sent to Chicago which were served steaming hot three or four hours after they were cooked. The mail aviator who flies between Chicago and Cleveland has carried his hot luncheon with him, and many picnickers have been made happy with a hot meal prepared hours ahead and served piping hot by lake or roadside.

Every night now a modest little motor truck filled with cheerful looking blue containers hums about town delivering savory hot dinners to seventy or eighty persons who gratefully receive "what the gods provide" and promptly send in their checks with the most heart warming messages of encouragement and appreciation.

These patrons were asked to purchase their own containers and allow the organizers to plan the meals for one month without consultation, thus saving printing bills and clerk hire. At the end of several succeeding weeks every patron was called up and asked if she would prefer to plan her own meals. The answer was invariably "no," and the original plan has never been changed.

This plan is to send a two or three course dinner consisting of either meat, poultry, or fish, potatoes—one hot vegetable or a salad—and a dessert. The patrons furnish bread and butter and tea or coffee. When cool weather comes on it is hoped to add a soup without extra expense. The price of this dinner is 85 cents to the regular patrons who own their containers. The Sunday dinner is more elaborate and costs $1. The casual patrons pay $1 and $1.25 for the same service.

For the encouragement of other reckless souls who may wish to undertake similar kitchens we offer the following plan for a community kitchen, which has been worked out through four months of experimentation:

Plan to open a shop for the daily sale of good homelike foods. From 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. seem the best hours, as the kitchen staff has time to prepare fresh food each morning and patrons can get hot food in time for luncheon.

Start in a church, club, or school kitchen if possible in order to avoid large initial expense.

Secure the best women cooks, one for meats and hot dishes, one or two if necessary for pastries and cakes. Add a dishwasher if needed.

Offer for sale such foods as cooked meats, spaghetti, creamed cheese, Saratoga potatoes, salad, meat pies, biscuits, and genuine home made pies and cakes. On special days add seasonable delicacies such as blueberry muffins, shortcakes, special salads, oyster patties, etc.

Run your shop with prices based on cost of material plus labor, rent, interest, deterioration, and all possible overhead and a percentage for profit.

If you wish to emphasize the community idea which the Evanston kitchen considers a vital point, ask your friends to help in the sales room during the busy hour from 11 to 12:30.

When you have won the confidence of the public by the quality of your food you are ready to establish a delivery dinner service.

Secure containers which are sold to the customer. This requires less capital; the containers are better cared for and the coöperation of the patrons is greater.

Have containers washed at the community kitchen, thus securing careful handling and sterilization.

Require regular patrons to take at least five dinners during each week and payment should be made weekly in advance or send statements semi-monthly.

Confer with patrons frequently, asking for suggestions and constructive criticism. In this way coöperation for the good of all will be readily and happily secured.

The next thing to prove is that this can be kept up and at least a comfortable living made for the person who does the work, for the "workman is worthy of his hire." Of this result the organizers have not the slightest doubt.

You owe it to yourself and others to do your bit in preventing disease

EVERY person is continually threatened with influenza, sore throat, colds and other contageous diseases through crowded street cars, theatres or wherever thrown in contact with other people. The air we breath each minute of the day is laden with germs and dust that, if the body is not properly taken care of, bring sickness and sometimes death.

These germs find their way into the mouth, throat and nasal passages. They find their way into the body only in this manner. The only way the effect of these germs can be warded off is by keeping the mouth, throat and nasal passages free and clean. Disease can most always be cured, but the cure is more costly than prevention.

Boracetine is a safe and harmless antiseptic that destroys germ life and effectually prevents its development. Thousands of people are using Boracetine twice each day as a spray and gargle for the mouth, nose, and throat. It destroys all germs, leaves the mouth, throat and nasal passages pure and clean, and makes you feel refreshed.

Boracetine has many other uses that recommend its general daily use in the household, the hospital, the doctor's and dentist's office. It is excellent for cuts, bruises, burns, sores, pimples, insect bites or other inflamations where an effective antiseptic is needed.

Do your bit in preventing a recurrence of the "flu" and other disease by keeping your own body "fit" and healthy. Use Boracetine, the guardian of health, twice each day as a spray and gargle. At druggists and department stores. Two sizes: 50 cents and $1.00.

Callus? "Gets It" Will Peel It Off!

Nothing on Earth Like Simple "Gets-It" for Corns or Calluses.

A callus, or thickened skin on the sole of the foot, which often makes walking a misery, is of the same nature as a corn. "Gets-It" removes it as easily as it does the toughest corns. By using a few drops of "Gets-It" on the callus, you will be able to peel it off with your fingers, in one complete piece just as you would a banana peel. It leaves the skin free and smooth as though you never had a callus. You need no more fussy plasters, sticky tape, "packages", bandages, knives or scissors for corns or calluses. "Gets-It" is the national corn remover, the biggest on earth, used by millions. It never fails. You'll work, play and dance at ease in spite of corns.

Use "Gets-It" and ... Pain, Even with Corns

"Gets-It," the only sure, guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by B. F. LAWRENCE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

'Injun Summer'—The Story of a Much-Loved Cartoon

On Sept. 30, 1907, there was printed for the first time in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE a cartoon by John T. McCutcheon called "Injun Summer." Two weeks ago the cartoon was reprinted by request, as it has been each autumn since it appeared, and with it was given a little story written by Mr. McCutcheon telling in brief the manner of its conception. Of such intimate consequence is the story with the cartoon that—acknowledged plagiarism—we venture here to repeat some of the facts given there.

The cartoon made its appearance first at a time when a succession of beautiful autumn days turned the mind easily to poetic fancy. The country was hazy with the fires from burning piles of leaves and from the flames that smoldered in the stumps where farmers were clearing the land. "It was not difficult," says Mr. McCutcheon, "to imagine the haze a veil cast from the distant happy hunting grounds, giving the braves passage again, in the spirit, to the fields and forests of their earthly hunting days. And it was not an impossible feat of the imagination to see this veil of smoke twisting and shaping before one as a band of Injuns trooping back to their old sports."

This fancy was the starting point of the cartoon, and around it was built the completed structure. The shocks of corn suggested naturally the tepees of the Indians; the burning leaves suggested the campfires, and the crimson of the autumn leaves the red paint of the warriors.

So aptly did the cartoon suggest the spirit of the season that its charm made for it lasting friends. At least such might be judged the case when one reflects upon the number of appeals made each year for its republication.

Since its first appearance it has been reprinted many times. On one occasion it was printed in tints in the rotogravure section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. At one of the banquets of the Indiana society the gold room of the Congress hotel was decorated in a reproduction of the cartoon. The original of the cartoon is owned by Howard F. Gillette of Chicago.

This year the number of requests for the reprinting of the cartoon has been greater than ever. In fact, so numerous have been the letters received on the subject that it was decided to publish it in a manner suitable for framing and as such give it away to its hosts of friends.

There is but little more to add. The wonder of the fall does not translate itself easily into print, but it is there, every magic bit of it, in the country that lies at our door—your door and my door. So if you would see the cartoon in the life, go you to the places out of the city and dream.

A reproduction of Mr. McCutcheon's cartoon, "Injun Summer," accompanies this issue of The Sunday Tribune as a supplement.

Why GRAY HAIR is no longer necessary

New, Clean, Easy, Harmless, Treatment.
First Bottle Gives Satisfaction.

After having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers, leading stores throughout the country are recommending "Canute Water" for Gray Hair to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Buck & Rayner, MacLean's Drug Store, Rothschild & Co., and The Walgreen Drug Co. sell it in Chicago on a positive guarantee of absolute satisfaction or your money back. "Canute Water" restores color to your hair so naturally and evenly that no one can possibly tell you are using anything. A questions one naturally asks are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use "Canute Water" for Gray Hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal-tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. "Canute Water" for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A CRUDE DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. "Canute Water" is a simple method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that "Canute Water" is not a crude dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair. While as the reader knows the crude dyes are put up in packages marked with the different colors of hair or numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply require a retouching at the roots once in a while as the new hair grows out.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores, your own druggist or by mail direct upon receipt of price, $1.10 per bottle. Friedman Canute Co., 18 East 17th Street, New York City, New York.

NOTICE—Beware of sales people who get commissions to sell worthless imitations. To be SAFE, accept no substitute for "CANUTE WATER".

Millions of Germs
Breed in Tooth Film—Keep It Off

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Film Wrecks the Teeth

THAT slimy film which you feel with your tongue causes most tooth troubles. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. In crevices and elsewhere that film clings. That is why your brushing fails to keep teeth white, free from tartar, clean and safe.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So all these troubles have been increasing despite the wide use of the tooth brush.

Dental science, after years of search, has found a film combatant. Able authorities have amply proved this by careful clinical tests. Leading dentists everywhere now urge its daily use.

The method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we offer a 10-Day Tube free now to everyone for home tests.

See the Results, Then Decide

The results of Pepsodent are quickly apparent. Some are instant. We ask you to see them—watch them ten days—then decide for yourself about them.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has discovered a harmless, activating method. The inventor has been granted patents by five governments already. It is that invention which makes possible this efficient film combatant.

THE PUSILLANIMITY OF AMERICAN FICTION.

English literature magnifies the British empire. The English fiction writer is born a propagandist. He may be conscious or unconscious of it. He may be as simple as G. A. Henty in his series of boys' stories or as the imperialistic Kipling. The great volume of English literature is a song to the glory of England.

The tradition that there is something inherently superior in the English character, a superiority selected, cherished, and maintained, is gently satirized at times, but it is the tradition of English writing.

The American boy reads "Tom Brown's School Days" or G. A. Henty, and unconsciously half accepts the traditions. His father reads Kipling or "Mr. Britling" and unconsciously half accepts it. The intensity and prolixity of English writers with their all pervasive language fix the tradition upon the world. Not only is the British boy stimulated to know that great heroes are his national heroes, but other nations accept the British hero.

Many susceptible American boys have had doubts of their own national qualities arise from devotion to Henty's stories. They could not resist the stories. They were vaguely dismayed by the infallible virtues of the English youngsters whose exploits filled the tales.

American fiction writers have no intense national consciousness in this respect. They fail to serve a purpose which they could serve, and we think they fail to reach a market which would buy. If all American fiction were bent upon furious propagandising it would be a ridiculous output, but when little American fiction consults the national instinct there is another obliquity.

The national instinct finds expression in literature. Its most primitive and some of its highest forms are in glorification of clans and nations.

The singer gets his inspiration from the soil which bears him. It is not parochial. It is the essential spirit of his creation. The glories of his people and the beauties of his land are the breath and soul of his production.

These people rationally may reflect that this glorification is glorification, but their spirituality feeds upon it. They have exaltations, and exaltations are useful when they are not complete obstacles to self-criticism.

Is the soil of America so poor and the spirit of its people so small, the traditions and legends and deeds of its life so negligible, that they cannot produce a writer moved by them? Must American writers find the exploits of every other nationality more inspiring than American exploits?

Booth Tarkington has a healthy Americanism, and observe what it has done for him. Robert Chambers started as an American writer and became a pink exotic.

Americans went to see "The Man from Home" in droves for years, because it was grateful to their sense of nationality. Most American novelists do not care whether their characters wear the strong fabrics of nationality if only they may have the robings of the bedroom.

In a recent popular book, written by an American woman, the villainy sought American embodiment, heroism English. The man designed to inspire contempt was American, the man characterized for admiration was English. In another, by another American woman, a war story, the hero was a Belgian. The woman was uninspired, evidently, by what American men had done. They were negligible. The Belgian was important. Certainly a current of thought is thus revealed. Does it show what American women writers think of their own country?

This is not a wholesome literature for a nation to produce. It is not the literature of a nation. It has no relation to the nation. It has nothing to do with its soil, traditions, ideals, or accomplishments.

The writer who has some of the instinct of Ulysses for the smell of his own glebe and the sight of the smoke from his own hearth will win a place in American affections. And he will do the nation a service without hurting whatever he may regard as his art.

THE SNUG BUTTERY.

In this season of falling leaves and rising prices we are moved to speak of the sense of protection against the inclemency of the first and the relentlessness of the second—the sense of protection there is to be extracted out of contemplating the buttery all snugged down for the winter; the buttery all snug and smug, with fat smiling quart jars and jam pots and jelly glasses.

There is also the sense of protection that comes of the ruddy glow of the fireplace and the snowflakes whirling against the window pane. A fine sense of luxury this, even if the ruddy glow is only a mental exercise produced by the clanking of the steampipes or the rattle of the poker in the old base burner.

Again we say it is a fine sense of luxury; warmth and the boisterous snow; but how infinitely reassuring to be thus genially conscious of protection while at the same time conscious of that abundant fortification in the pantry—a fortification built by your own homely initiative and prudent forethought.

What will tomatoes fetch this winter? You should worry with your dozens of quart jars portly and sagely nodding approval of your wisdom. How much will jelly be; clear as ruby—breakfast cheerless without it? No matter, the top shelf will tell you it doesn't matter.

Does the price of the sestful chili sauce appall you? Certainly not, for a dozen, two dozen quarts of it grin in the buttery. Dill pickles? A huge crock is in the corner, with a stone holding the contents under the brine. Stuffed peppers, fine for blustering December? They, too, hide in the brine.

We can't all have Ichabod Crane's dreams come true—"every roasting pig with a pudding in his belly and an apple in his mouth; the pigeons snugly put to bed in a comfortable pie and tucked in with a coverlet of crust; the geese swimming in their own gravy; and the ducks pairing cozily in dishes, like snug married folks, with a decent competency of onion sauce—" but we can have the sense of honest and prudent comfort and protection which come of wise and economical provision.

High prices always will be high if our native wit and forethought fall into disuse. Housewives no doubt will resent the imputation that they lack the creative impulse; yet the first blast of winter will be proof to many that a dozen jars of tomatoes preserved at home is worth more than whole years devoted to developing temperament.

Let's think of higher things, but also of potatoes in the bin and squashes that make pretty fair "pumpkin pie." Let's have art and also artichokes; music and muffins; aesthetics in moderation and asparagus in cans; culture and cabbage and philosophy and flapjacks. The caveman would have taken a house in town much sooner had the cavewoman known how to put up stuff for the winter.

COMB OUT ALIEN REDS.

Senator Poindexter of Washington, which commonwealth has had a taste of revolutionary radicalism, has introduced a resolution asking the attorney general why the department of justice has not proceeded against revolutionary propagandists preaching the overthrow of our government.

At the same time in the house the foreign affairs committee has reported favorably on a resolution continuing, for one year after the proclamation of peace, passport restrictions aimed at preventing the entrance of bolsheviki and other undesirables.

Congress seems to be taking this problem seriously and we hope will see to it that if necessary effective measures are enacted not only to protect the country from any further infections but to expel the foreign poison we already have in our system. To this end the executive also must be induced to act with energy and thoroughness, for the mere passage of resolutions or of statutes will not protect us. There must be vigorous enforcement.

We shall have high voiced protests against anything done in this line, and there will be appeals to the principles of free conscience, free speech, free press, and free assembly, and to the tradition of asylum. All are notable conceptions to be jealously guarded. But jealous guardianship includes protection from abuse and all are being abused in this country by the revolutionary radicalism of aliens. None takes precedence over the law of self-preservation, yet all are being abused to destroy what Americans have been building for through generations of free citizenship.

In short, there is no moral duty upon America to throw its people open to the contagion of the old world's ills. We have saved Europe, we believe, from one form of domination. European radicalism rewards us by threatening us with a worse form. We are not in duty bound to absorb all the political and social poison her age long evils have secreted. Yet pretty much that will happen unless we protect ourselves. Russia especially is a focus of contagion. An essential of the Lenine-Trotsky formula is world-wide propaganda and Ambassador Davis reports from London that genuine American passports are in the possession of the bolshevik government and will be used to get Red emissaries into America. The Russians already in America are in the thick of our disturbances, remaining ignorant, unassimilated, and rebellious.

If bolshevism retains power in Russia its propagandism will continue. If it falls its propagandists will flee to America and, demanding entrance as political refugees seeking asylum from oppression, will, if they enter, carry on their work without gratitude or scruple. Trotsky himself is an example of this species, which prides itself on regarding no code of law or honor, but only "the cause."

But Russia is not the only quarter from which we may expect this contamination. As conservative government prevails in other European countries in the inevitable reaction from the destruction and chaos of radical revolutionary outbreaks, their radicals will escape if possible, doubtless in many cases with the connivance of their governments, and will seek the United States especially as a land where square meals are to be had and propagandism is comfortable.

To keep these gentlemen—and ladies—out, while encouraging an inflow of desirable immigration which we may hope for from some of the countries stricken by the war, is a problem to which both branches of the government should address themselves at once. But there is the complementary duty of ridding the country of alien mischief makers, and we think this process has not been pushed with enough energy. The discovery and disclosure of the conditions at Gary had apparently to wait for the arrival of the regular army. Why? It is not the business of the army to rout out sedition but to put down rebellion or maintain order. The duty it is now forced to do and seems to be doing so efficiently should have been done by the civil authorities and done before the strike. The law officers of the government and of states and cities ought to lose no more time in combing the country of alien Reds.

Editorial of the Day

WHAT IS NEEDED.

[Saturday Evening Post.]

It would help tremendously just now if everybody with a general theory on any subject would retire to the back of the hall, sit down and keep still. The business of this present meeting is not to discuss theories. Half the town has been swept by fire and the other half is in considerable confusion. What the meeting needs is definite, concrete, practical ideas as to how various definite, concrete things are to be done.

If anybody knows where there are a dozen camping tents for the homeless or exactly what machinery is necessary to start up the gas plant and where it is to be found, let him stand up and speak. If he wants to discuss the general subject of indoor versus outdoor sleeping or whether the rebuilt gas plant should follow the classic or the colonial style of architecture, let him wait for a more propitious moment.

Theory always has the illimitable reaches of space to roam around in. It mainly belongs there, where it gets in nobody's way and where no collision with ponderable objects can damage either the theory or the object.

Trying to Hegelize a boiler factory is bad for both Hegel and the boilers. The world has been stuffed to the neck with theories, which is partly what ails it. The immediate doing of practical, concrete things—homely things like finding a bolt that will fit the broken reaper and patching the rat-eaten bushel measure—is all it has time or patience or need to hear about now. Men who know something about that and can do something about it move up in front.

[From the Largo, Fla., Sentinel.]

Yes, there is still a Dixie. A Dixie in the hearts of some of us older ones and in that realm of the spirit's fancy may summon visions of the most beautiful of scenes. The loveliest of faces, and days of cloudless blue; Dixie, the East to which those of us who stand on the rim of the fading day turn in devotion while the shadows creep; Dixie, the glory land of the past, the golden boone of memory's silent rambles, the hallowed solitude in whose cool depths the lost cords of life breathe their music into the soul; Dixie, love's shadow-land, peopled with unfettered spirits of the noble and the great, redolent of memories that do not die because they cluster about things immortal, tempted with the dream fabrics of a nation that drew from out God's boundless deep and after four years of romance, poetry and glory turned again home. Dixie, the beautiful and glorious, the sweetest chapter of history, the noblest epoch of the ages, the light of yesteryear, whose effulgence gilds the crest of time's swift onward tide. Dixie, the stainless mother of the nation, indestructible kingdom of the twilight; Dixie, the incomparable South of our dreams. Yes, there still is a Dixie, and for Dixie land we'll take our stand, to live or die for Dixie.

CITY ZONING AS HEALTH LAW.

A ZONING plan for a city is a health measure as well as one for stabilising the values of property. The courts and even the Supreme court of the United States repeatedly have held that the exercise of police power to bring about zoning is proper.

Under zoning ordinances which make use of the police power the community has the most far-reaching rights in saying what a man may or may not do with his real estate and other property not only for the time being but for a half century to come.

This use of power is based upon the rights of the people to comfort as well as health. In fact, questions of comfort run into those of health, and no man can satisfactorily separate them.

For instance, if a multitude of twenty story buildings on a quarter section of ground make it necessary to pack people into street cars like sardines in a box, the community has a right to prevent the building of twenty story buildings in order to prevent discomfort to those who must use the street cars during the rush hours.

Whenever people are packed into street cars like sardines in a box conditions favorable to the spread of influenza, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, and diphtheria are created.

Nor is the matter entirely free from moral considerations. Such exceedingly close contact between the bodies of males and females, as is customary on street cars during the rush hours, would cause some other institutions to be suppressed for the sake of good morals. Certainly there are many fatal accidents due to overcrowding. The courts are justified in sustaining zoning laws because they promote comfort, health, morals, safety, and, in addition, they stabilize land values.

In arguing for the proposed St. Louis zoning plan Dr. G. A. Jordan, assistant commissioner of health, spoke for the health department. He said:

"To maintain good resistance against disease many things are essential, the most important of which are sunlight and pure air. This means largely sun bathed air, pure water, pure and wholesome food, and quiet and restful sleep. The rays of the sun are the most powerful and destructive of the disinfectants fatal to all forms of germ life.

"Living and working quarters bathed in sunlight are necessarily healthful quarters, and quarters occupied for either living or working which are not, for at least a portion of the day, exposed to sunlight or at least strong daylight can not continue to be healthful.

"Disease germs preserve their vitality for a long time in dark rooms. Nothing is so essential to man as pure air. Quiet, undisturbed sleep is another essential.

"Buildings should be so restricted and controlled that in no manner should they be allowed to become an obstruction to free access of sunlight and strong daylight either in themselves or in buildings or open spaces which adjoin them. The homes or residence districts should be assured an atmosphere as pure as possible, and to this end such districts should not be contaminated by the odors, smoke, and dust of factories.

"Congestion of individuals is a menace to health and morals. Congestion facilitates the spread of contagion."

I would like to add to the opinions of Dr. Jordan the following: Every form of bacterial disease is coming under control except those of the respiratory tract. These are worse than they were a half century ago. To control them we will have to protect the air supply as we now protect the water and milk supply. When we do so the respiratory diseases will lessen, just as typhoid and diarrhoeas, water and milk borne diseases, have lessened.

To Dr. Jordan's arguments Dr. M. A. Bliss added some which appeal especially to the nerve specialist and which further show some of the ways in which comfort and health are interrelated. He says:

"If we make a clear separation of business and factory from the places where we live and where our children play; if we get away for twelve to sixteen hours from the rattle of machinery, the grinding of cars, the pounding of hoofs, the slamming of boxes on and off trucks, then nature has time and opportunity to restore the fatigued nerve cells and we issue from our homes in the morning fresh for another turn on 'the front line.'

"The man who establishes his home on a modest street expecting to live in quiet and free from nuisances, where his children may play in floods of sunshine and open air and in safety from the hurried traffic of business, is entitled to protection from the encroachment of livery stables, garages, factories, and stores.

"The nervous stability of the worker and his family will certainly be enhanced by such protection. Work will be better done and more of it. Children will grow up in better health and less inclined to nervous instability."

These are some of the health arguments offered in support of the zone plan prepared by the St. Louis city plan commission. This plan and the method of its presentation is pronounced by Mr. C. B. Ball of the sanitary bureau of Chicago as the best that has come to his notice. Mr. Ball is assigned to the zoning work, now being under instructions to study what has been done elsewhere that he may better counsel with the city commission on zoning provided for by the last legislature.

The foundation for the St. Louis plan was laid by a series of city wide studies of existing conditions. One set of maps was made showing the use to which every piece of property in the city was put. A second set showed the percentage of each lot in the city covered by a building or buildings.

A third was made showing the height of each building in the city. A fourth showed the assessed value of each piece of property. A fifth showed the buildings used for industrial purposes. A sixth set of maps showed the location of all new buildings for five year periods going back to 1902. A seventh, known as the time zone map, showed the time consumed in reaching the postoffice from all parts of the city.

With this series of maps in hand the commission was ready to study.

Of the property in St. Louis at the time of the study 29.8 per cent is vacant or unimproved, 32.3 per cent is public or semi-public, including street space, 27.4 per cent is residential, 7.7 per cent is industrial, and 2.8 per cent commercial.

The report says:

"It is almost startling to see that 29.8 per cent of the present city's area is unimproved. The zone plan would be justified if it could accomplish the occupation and development of this idle land which constitutes such an economic burden upon the community."

They predict that uses found for this land under the zoning system will justify the wisdom of the city plan. A study of light projection on various streets indicated that in a general way no building on the south side of an east and west street should exceed in height one-half the width of the street which it faced if the sun's rays were to reach the first floor of the house on the north side of the street.

The height of buildings on the north and south streets could safely be twice the width of the street. This observation was made at noon on Dec. 21. Figured on this basis, the height of buildings on Delmar avenue west of King's Highway could be 54 feet; Washington avenue, Fourth to Grand, 46 feet; St. Louis avenue, west of Grand, 67 feet; Arsenal street, west of Grand, 43 feet; Bates street, 67 feet; California avenue, 120 feet.

But other studies were found necessary. For instance, it was advisable to know the maximum density of traffic on a street and to predicate the density of traffic a number of years from now. The routes of travel were also inquired into. The carrying capacity of the sewers was another matter that had to be studied in the light of both present and future conditions. The routes of railway and boat travel, and particularly the freight routes and switch track possibilities, were esteemed to be matters of importance.

The present density of population in different areas and the directions in which population is shifting were made subjects of inquiry. The report says the intermingling of factories and homes is not conducive to good health, and yet the maps showed a very marked tendency on the part of factories to invade densely populated residence districts. No one who has not had occasion to study the subject has any suspicion of the degree of this invasion, not only in St. Louis but elsewhere. The development of the automobile has made it possible for light manufacturing enterprises to avoid the high priced lands accessible to switch tracks.

In determining the allowed height of buildings they took into consideration the width of the street, transportation facilities, the size of sewers, and value of property. They established five height districts—45 foot, 60 foot, 80 foot, 120 foot, and 150 foot.

I was surprised at the statement of Mr. Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust company of St. Louis, that:

"A careful analysis of the office building situation in St. Louis has demonstrated the fact that no building higher than three or four stories used as an office building will pay for a period of twenty-five years if proper depreciation on the building is charged against the property. An analysis of the net incomes for the buildings between Third and Twelfth streets will prove the correctness of the statement."

The commission recommended that certain districts be set aside for industry, others for commercial purposes, and still others for residential purposes, and that each district be protected in its use. They found that the corner grocery in a residence neighborhood was a commercial fallacy and bad practice.

The various recommendations of the commission were embodied in an ordinance which was passed by the city fathers and goes into effect this winter. It is not retroactive; property now used for a purpose contrary to the law is permitted to be used in the same way.

It will take fifty years for St. Louis to get all the benefits from the law. But no new enterprises will be allowed to grow up in districts forbidden to them.

One of the great hazards attendant upon owning real estate in a city is depreciation. Every city has its blighted areas. In such areas the lifetime savings of thousands of good citizens have been lost. The really impelling motive behind the rapid growth of zoning plans all over the country is to stabilize the land values.

WHERE THE NUTS COME FROM.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I was interested in reading in this morning's issue, an article headed, "City a Dumping Place for Insane and Defectives."

About thirty years ago I was told by a hotelkeeper in one of the small towns in Illinois that he knew of a case of a whole shipload of insane people or criminals or both who had been shipped to this country from Germany, and I think it would be well for the city to come in touch with the railroads centering in Chicago to prevent any defectives, insane, or criminals from being shipped into this great city, because it is a great deal easier for a community to get rid of their defectives by passing them on to somebody else than it is to take care of them.

TRAVEL ALLOWANCE AND THE VICTORY BUTTON.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Would thank you very kindly if you will publish in your column the proper place for me to take my discharge papers to secure the button which the government now has for distribution.

I also understand that I have a claim for mileage. When I was discharged at Camp Mills, New York, in January, 1919, I was allowed 3½ cents a mile. Since that time it has been raised to 5 cents, a difference of 1½ cents a mile. To whom will I make my claim for the additional mileage?

As you are a resident of Chicago, take your discharge papers to the local recruiting office, 520 South State street, and a discharge button will be issued to you.

For the extra travel allowance apply to the zone finance officer, Lemon building, Washington, D. C., and mark the envelope "travel allowance."

INSURANCE AT FORTY-ONE.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 15.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I am a discharged member of the Blackhawk division. My age is 41 years. Have not yet converted my army insurance, but have kept up the payments right along. Can you give me the premium rate per thousand dollars on each kind of policy we may choose from? When I convert my policy would it be possible for me to make a change in the beneficiary. My wife is the present beneficiary, but I also would like my son to be a beneficiary, too. Shall I do this all at the same time? Would the Chicago office of the war risk insurance bureau look after all of this for me?
B. L. J.

At the age of 41 the monthly premium on each thousand dollars is $2.09 for ordinary life policy, $2.23 for a thirty payment life policy, $2.60 for a twenty payment life policy, twenty year endowment, $3.53; thirty year endowment, $2.45; endowment at age 62, $3.36.

It is possible to change the beneficiary at any time. In your case it is doubtless advisable to make all the changes you wish made at the time you convert the policy.

The local branch of the war risk insurance bureau, located in the Stock Exchange building, will attend to the converting of your policy and also the change in the beneficiary.

NATURALIZATION FOR SOLDIERS.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Many discharged soldiers of foreign birth feel they are being unfairly treated in regard to their naturalization. While in the army in the A. E. F. we were given the opportunity of becoming fully naturalized by appearing before a specially appointed board and complying wit its instructions. We were then informed that we were citizens of the United States and our citizenship could not be taken from us by any one, and that upon return to this country to apply to the court and we would be given our papers. Now when we ask for our papers we are told that the papers relating to our cases have been mislaid and that we are not citizens.
DISCHARGED SOLDIER.

Soldiers stationed overseas were given an opportunity to file petitions for citizenship there, in which they designated two persons residing in the United States who could testify to their character. The petition was executed before an army officer authorized to administer oaths, and the oath of allegiance was taken at that time. The petitions were then to be sent to the commissioner of naturalization at Washington, who, in turn, was to refer them to the appropriate chief naturalization examiners, with a view to have the designated witnesses called before the court and give their testimony, and the naturalization examiner representing the government was to sign the petition as attorney in fact for the applicant. After hearing the testimony the court was to order the naturalization of the soldier.

However, as the war was concluded and most of the soldiers returned to the United States before the contemplated action could be taken, it has been deemed advisable to naturalize the soldiers without regard to the petitions filed overseas, as much time can be saved by so doing, and all such soldiers residing in this vicinity, should apply to this office for naturalization. The filing of the petition overseas did not confer citizenship, as so many of the soldiers seem to think.
FRED J. SCHLOTTFELDT,
Chief Naturalization Examiner.

THE RURAL HIGH SCHOOL

by H. A. Hollister—HIGH SCHOOL VISITOR, UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

THE one room school and training in the three Rs were the dominant features of our common schools of the nineteenth century. The public high school, true to all, will characterize the people's schools for the twentieth century. In the nature of things the United States demands that high school education be universal. Our continued progress and the integrity of our free institutions require this much of education for the children of the masses as a prerequisite to competent citizenship. Heretofore we have thought of education largely as of advantage to the individual. Our recent experiences have taught us that it is a highly essential factor in insuring our national security and in preserving our social order.

The evolution of our peculiar institutions puts a special emphasis upon the demand for a more common and widespread knowledge of the social sciences. But the effective teaching of these except in a rudimentary way is not possible earlier than the high school period. The extension application of the principles of natural sciences to the solution of the problems presented by the rapid development of our fundamental productive industries naturally requires a much more widely disseminated knowledge of mathematics, physics, and chemistry than is possible without the education, at least through the high school stage, of a much greater number of our young men and young women than have heretofore received training in these subjects.

The public health requirements under our rapidly growing population and the concentration of life in our cities render imperative a more definite and practical understanding of the fundamental principles of biology than is now generally realized. So, also, the ever increasing aesthetic demands of our people call for greater extension of instruction in art principles, especially as applied to dress, architecture, home decoration, and landscape than can possibly be managed in the elementary school. And then there are always the great fundamental social arts of language and literature, music, and the drama calling for a large place in our scheme of popular education.

FOR these reasons and several others which might be given if the theme were dwelt upon in detail, there is urgent need for universal education, at least up to the level of that which may be obtained during the high school period. The wide diversity of demand, due to varying capacities and capabilities of individuals, points definitely to the need of breadth and comprehensiveness in the lines of training which the secondary school should offer. It is not sufficient that only the great fundamentals of education as above characterized be provided in the curriculum of a high school for all the people. There should be training to skill in language and in the industrial arts. The present organization of industrial work fails to make provision of an adequate and dependable nature for the training of the skilled workman. And where such provision is attempted it is usually on a limited basis which precludes that broader intellectual outlook which good citizenship demands.

Furthermore, it is in the high school period of education that most pupils discover their abilities and weaknesses as related to the various callings in life. But in order that they may do this fully the offerings of the school must be broad, within the scope of educational possibilities, up to and including that grade. Thus the real high school for the youth of a democracy is a very composite organization of studies and exercises representing the fundamentals of human attainment in the various arts and sciences.

In thus providing broadly for the various individual needs, our city schools have long enjoyed a peculiar advantage. These schools are large enough and usually sufficiently financed to make quite readily possible such a composite character in their organization as has been suggested. Naturally no single pupil can, in four years, successfully carry all the subjects and exercises offered in such a school. There must be a reasonable amount of election for the sake of individual adaptability over and above those subjects and exercises which are held to be essential to all. Hence it is true that a high school may be too small to admit of full freedom of election. Even though the required number of teachers may be employed, yet the classes would become so small as to rob the school of the peculiar inspiration which larger numbers afford.

OUR rural communities have long been lacking in any adequate provision for high school education. This has been due to two causes chiefly—rural conservatism in regard to any education except that of the elementary rudiments; lack of sufficient numbers in rural districts to make practicable the organization of a complete curriculum. Various efforts have been made to remedy this latter condition. By the consolidation of rural districts small high schools have been established. But these schools are usually too small to admit of the variety of work which should characterize the schools of all the people. In some of the more sparsely settled states township and even county high schools have been provided. The township, however, as organized territorially in most of the states, does not lend itself readily to such a plan, while the county, for the country generally, is too large. In most states recourse is still had to a tuition charge as a basis for admitting to the city high schools such pupils from the rural districts as may be able to take advantage of what the city high schools offer. In such a situation the city boards are apt to plan the school activity according to the demands of city life and the rural pupils find little consideration given to any of their peculiar wants. The result is that the children both of the city and of the rural communities are the losers; for both should be able to find, through the high school, a way out into the career for which nature has best fitted them.

In many quarters the idea has prevailed that we should develop a special type of high school for rural districts, with agriculture as the dominant feature. Such a provision would seem to be undemocratic, and, according to the belief of some, would tend to develop a peasant class in this country. For these reasons such a plan has never found much favor in Illinois. Our conception is that the development of the real spirit of American democracy requires not only a common content for the general education of children and youth, but that in matters of vocation also the mingling together of different groups in mixed types of vocational education is most highly conducive to the cultivation of such a spirit.

HOW, then, may we secure such a type of school for our rural communities? The answer is best found, we believe, in the community high school. The way was prepared for this type of school in Illinois by a law enacted in 1872. This bit of legislation followed as a result of an organization by the people of Princeton, Ill., of a high school district comprising the entire township. This local action was taken in 1866 and legalized by legislative enactment the following year. Under a more general enactment in 1872 the people of any township in the state were permitted to organize similar high school districts.

It very soon became evident, however, that townships in the middle west do not lend themselves readily to high school organization. In townships containing no nucleus of population, as a village, town, or small city, centrally located, it was difficult to locate such a school satisfactorily. It frequently happens that large portions of a township are naturally tributary in a business and social way, to cities or towns located in adjoining townships or counties. These facts led to a radical modification of the township district law in 1911, by which a district could be organized out of any "contiguous and compact territory" regardless of township or county boundaries. Up to this date a total of only fifty-seven township high school districts had been organized.

In 1916 this new law of 1911 was declared by the Supreme court to be unconstitutional, but in the five and a half years during which it was in force 190 new districts were organized. This rapid increase in the larger unit for high school organization thoroughly demonstrated the prevailing sentiment in favor of "community" rather than "township" districts. As a result the legislature in 1917 enacted the community high school law of Illinois. The salient features of this law are: [1] That it permits of the organization of a district which may include territory from two or more adjoining townships; [2] that the district is to be "formed about a community center and have sufficient territory, assessed valuation, and prospective high school pupils to form a satisfactory and efficient high school."

Thus the fundamental idea of a community is recognized, and the high school is organized as a common service for town and country alike. This is in real accord with our ideals of democracy. By such an adjustment opportunity is equalized for both country and city. The country boys and girls are broadened in their outlook by contact with boys and girls of the town, while the latter learn to respect the abilities of country bred youth. The friendships thus formed and the mutual respect engendered form a basis for a much closer relationship and mutual understanding between country and city folk.

IN 1918 the Supreme court declared the law of 1917 unconstitutional, but the legislature reënacted the law last spring, with the offending clause properly modified. Under this law, in the first year and a half of its existence, were organized thirty-six new community high school districts in spite of war conditions. Under the recent reënactment the organization of new districts is proceeding with great rapidity and with the prospect that the next two years may see from 100 to 200 more community high schools established in Illinois. Through the organization of such community districts the advantages of wider coöperation in maintaining high school facilities are practically demonstrated. Thus the people of the state are rapidly advancing to the point where a similar coöperation in rural elementary education through consolidation of districts will be possible.

In a city system of schools it is common practice to have several elementary schools tributary to a centrally located high school. There is no reason why, with the development of better roads, we should not have a similar arrangement of consolidated rural elementary schools of these larger high school communities grouped about their central high school. To be sure, there would remain, for many years to come, a residuum of territory too sparsely settled to admit of organization into economical high school districts. But such territory is already provided for in Illinois through the organization of the non-high school territory of each county into a taxing district for the creation of a tuition fund. By means of this fund all children qualified for high school may attend the community or city high schools most readily accessible and have their tuition paid by the nonhigh school board.

Thus this great commercial and agricultural state of Illinois has laid a broad foundation for the full development of a system of free common schools. For it should be remembered that a free school, in the full sense, implies not only free tuition, but a school also which can give to the individual that type of education for which he is by nature most readily adapted. A high school which offers only a general literary training cannot, therefore, be said to be wholly free to all pupils, even though it might be accessible and with no tuition charge to the individual or family. Likewise a school which should emphasize the teaching of agriculture to the exclusion of a literary curriculum or curriculums leading to other vocations would be lacking a very important quality essential to a school that is wholly free. It is such a freedom of opportunity in education through the higher grades of the common school that an adjustment like that of the community high school makes possible.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"The Secret City" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.
"Saint's Progress" [Scribners], by John Galsworthy.
"The Moon and Sixpence" [Doran], by E. Somerset Maugham.
"The Branding Iron" [Houghton Mifflin], by Katherine Newlin Burt.
"The Gay-Dombeys" [Macmillan], by Sir Harry Johnston.
"Dangerous Days" [Doran], by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

NONFICTION.

"Theodore Roosevelt" [Houghton Mifflin], by William Roscoe Thayer.
"Russia in 1919" [Huebsch], by Arthur Ransome.
"Seven Purposes" [Harpers], by Margaret Cameron.

AND now the mysteries of the stage are all explained. David Belasco has spilled, so to speak, the beans in "The Theater Through Its Stage Door" [Harpers]. Aren't any of our sacred mysteries to remain sacred? There's love, for instance. After all these years of novels and Havelock Ellises and Freuds and Jungs and Kraft-Ebings, to say nothing of the Arabian Nights and their progeny, there comes an anonymous burst of confession, "The Story of a Lover" [Boni & Liveright], told with all of the naïve lack of reserve of a C. Columbus explaining his jaunt to the West Indies. "One of the few truthful autobiographies in the English language" it is called. If this be truth, give me fiction. Dr. Marks, author of "Peter Middleton," aptly remarked that the lover is unconsciously crying out on every page for psychoanalysis.

The inspired note writer of the George H. Doran company says anent Richard Dehan, whose volume of short stories, "A Sailor's Home," has just been published: "The author has proved his versatility of style and command of original situations in his past books, but there is a lightness and modernity about these stories which will interest those who know his earlier work." As who should say: "George Eliot wrote in 'The Mill on the Floss' a tale much more touching than his earlier one, 'Romola.'" Richard Dehan isn't he. He's she.

"Violin Mastery" [Stokes] is a collection of interviews with the great violinists of the day by Frederick H. Martens. It contains invaluable suggestions by such men as Ysaye, Kreisler, Mischa Elman, Heifetz, Spiering, and all of the others.

"The New Decameron" [McBride] is one of the things that are seldom what they seem. It is skimmed milk which is masquerading as cream. Far from being a new decameron, it is a stodgy and dull group of tales, "by various hands," most of them clumsy. At least the first four tales are hopelessly dull. I couldn't bring myself to a further acquaintance with the others. "The New Decameron" is an alluring title. The idea is a jolly one, the marooning of a sort of Cook's tour composed of all types of searchers after adventure and travel. But the stories they tell to keep themselves from being bored! And it might have been a wholly delightful volume, say with a dash of James Stephens, a flicker of P. G. Wodehouse, a sniff of James Branch Cabell, a dust of Lord Dunsany. Since a "New Decameron" must of necessity be a moral decameron, one may at least demand cleverness from the volume.

Every musician and the rest of us who wish we were will want Camille Saint-Saens' "Musical Memories" and Massenet's "My Recollections," which Small, Maynard & Co. have just published. It is interesting, by the way, to notice how many great men are writing their memoirs these days. It used to be that a great man was biographed after his death, or his journals were published or volumes were written about him after he had ceased to be a great man except in the hearts of men. But now, as soon as a man climbs on the top rung of the ladder, somebody writes his autobiography for him. Witness the hordes from Chase Osborn to John McCormack.

Edith Wharton has written in "French Ways and Their Meaning" [Appleton] a little book which no one can afford to miss. It is the most sincerely fundamental of all the things which have been written about France and the spirit of her people. It is as profound as a tome would be. But it has none of the dullness nor the stodginess of a heavy volume. It has the lightness and sureness of a sketch, unhazed by working over. Mrs. Wharton writes without sentimentality, and yet with a deep sentiment for the French as a nation. Her emotional understanding of them is able, through her wondrous power of literary coherence, to translate into words which appeal emotionally to the reader without losing any of their purely factual values. Others have interpreted the heart of France, the spirit, but it has remained for Mrs. Wharton to interpret the complete life of France, and that in a small volume composed of informal papers.

When Nat Gould died England's title to the international best seller began to totter, though it may not fall for a few years. Nat Gould's novels, all of them about race horses and racing, total 150, and over 20,000,000 copies of them have been sold in the last fifteen years. Mr. Gould turned out four novels every year. Owing to the rationing of paper during the war, no less than twenty-two of his later romances are still unpublished. They will be published without undue haste. One of Mr. Gould's stories was imported by Frederick A. Stokes, but it was not popular here. But that was in the early days of the war, before our men had been converted to him by the adoring Tommies.

Speaking of the kind of American novels which are given to the English public as samples of our best, here is a list of the authors chosen by J. M. Dent & Co. for their Wayfarers' library: Arthur Somers Roches, Marjorie Benton Cooke, Helen R. Martin, Sophie Kerr, Annie Hamilton Donnell, Howard V. O'Brien, Fannie Heaslip Lea, Maria Thompson Davies, Corra Harris, and Thomas R. Dixon. Comment is superfluous.

George Moore has just finished a tour of France, where he has been absorbing atmosphere for the new version of "Abelard and Heloise" which he is writing.

Mme. Laura de Gosdawa Turczinowicz, author of "When the Prussians Came to Poland," says that she is the only woman member of a European cabinet. She has been appointed commissioner of charities in the new Lithuanian government. She is back in the United States after six months abroad in behalf of the National Lithuanian council. The record of her experiences in Lithuania and Poland will be published soon by the Putnams.

"The Will of Song" [Boni & Liveright] is the published form of the two day community festival which Harry Barnhart and Percy MacKaye wrote. It has already been produced successfully in Buffalo and the Oranges, N. J. It may be produced by any community if permission to do so is obtained from the director of "The Will of Song," New York community chorus, 130 East Twenty-second street, New York city.

Volume VII. of "The Tales of Chekhov" [Macmillan], translated by Constance Garnett, contains "The Bishop," "The Letter," "Easter Eve," "A Nightmare," "The Murder," "Uprooted," and "The Steppe." Mrs. Garnett has made translations which seem to me remarkable in their preservation of the Russian atmosphere. I do not know Russian, but I can feel the language through her translation.

The public library has posted a list of the books by and about Theodore Roosevelt and has placed the books in the open shelves. This is a peculiarly opportune time to spend a literary week with the great man. The memorial which is proposed should be a reality, a monument to the greatest man of our day. William Roscoe Thayer's biography, the latest of the books about him, is the loving tribute of a lifelong friend, and the skillful work of a biographer whom the great fighter respected for his literary as well as his human qualities.

"The Carringtons of High Hill" [Scribners] is a tale of the old south of antebellum days, written by the dean of American women novelists, Marion Harland. She is the only author now actively writing whose experience dates back to a quarter century before the war.

"Own Your Own Home" [Bobbs Merrill] is Ring W. Lardner's latest contribution to the joys of life. It is the correspondence of Fred Gross, who owned his own—midst pleasures and palaces, but mostly midst bills and neighborhood fusses. I suppose if Ring Lardner weren't the funniest man in the world, sometimes we wouldn't expect him to be all the time. "Own Your Own Home" would be very funny if anybody else had written it, but because he did I expected more.

"The Hidden Valley" [John Lane] is Muriel Hine's latest well fashioned and pleasantly written tale. Of course the hidden valley is happiness, which the heroine finds at the end of the book. The missing of the path, wandering in strange ways, and the final stepping into the valley make a good story.

B. W. Huebsch was in Chicago this week on his way to Madison to complete the plans for the institution of a course of book selling in the college curriculum there. Mr. Huebsch has been the promoter of such a course in New York for three years with marked success. The Publishers' Weekly, the trade paper of the book business, published the courses, which make very interesting reading. They make us lay readers feel much less like lay figures. If the University of Wisconsin offers a course in book selling, the other universities and colleges will probably soon follow. It is certain that the more intelligent and well trained salesmen and saleswomen there are in the book business, the more the joy of books will be shared. And no work in the world is more satisfying than giving the right book to the right person at the right time. It is a sort of combination of doctor, minister, theatrical manager, and social service job.

Solomon Eagle, the pseudonymic gossip of "The New Statesman," has acquired by his gentle wit and his leisurely fun as well as his keenness about books and things bookish a following in America who will be glad to know that his whimsies have been collected in a pleasant little volume called "Books in General" [Knopf].

W. L. George, whose "Blind Alley" [Little Brown] has had unstinted praise from the Georgians, says that he is coming to America to find out for himself whether "American girls are as sexless and American men as cold as American fiction would seem to indicate." Poor dear. He will find out.

Hugh Walpole

HUGH WALPOLE is neither the squinting eyed, pedagogical propagandist of 60 that some of his readers thought, nor the upstartish, swanky brained literary prodigy that others who read his New York Sun letters suspected. Neither is he, since he has been in Chicago in person and not through the medium of that versatile modern writer, Ouija, the well known prime minister. But the prime minister contingent is the "warmest" of any in the game of "find the author." He is a perfect picture of the prime minister in his youth—looks exactly like a young American bank president than whom nobody could be more prime ministerial. Great-grand-pa-pa P. M. Walpole would be proud of Hughie's looks—when he's just looking. But when he starts to talk, Hugh Walpole is just jolly cosmopolitan youth, not one hastens to add, of the Cosmopolitan type. How he manages to look so much like the Bank of England and to be so little like a sound and well managed institution I don't know. But he manages. And talking to him is a joy. It is his first visit since he was 8 years old, twenty-six years ago, and he has all of stout Cortez' thrill at the Pacific in his discovery of American literature.

"We don't know your best American writers. No one takes the trouble to see that we do. We are just discovering Hergesheimer, for instance, and he is having an amazing popularity in England now, which he deserves. But what about that greatest of all American women writers, Willa Sibert Cather? I have just read 'The Song of the Lark,' and it seems to me a perfect piece of work. I am reading 'My Antonia' now. Then there is James Branch Cabell. I have just read 'The Cream of the Jest.' Great writing he does. And yet I have never seen his name. Men and women of that kind ought to be known in England. (I didn't enlighten him as to their popularity here.) There should be some sort of entente between the novelists of England and America. There is, informally, between the poets. But the novelists have never known one another. I am hoping to become friends with such men as Hergesheimer, Mencken, Cabell, and through them to establish an informal exchange of ideas which may result in our knowing American literature better.

"America's knowledge of contemporary English literature startles me. We are as well known here as we are in England, some of us better. Let me ask you, does the American public know my two closest friends, J. D. Beresford and Frank Swinnerton?"

When I assured him that the Jacob Stahl trilogy won a permanent place in the hearts of Americans for Mr. Beresford and that "Nocturne" was one of the best sellers he said: "But such a great artist as D. H. Lawrence. Has America ever heard of him?"

"Not only heard of him, but he has become an integral part of the literary life of the cognoscenti."

And then it was time for the lion to be put back into his cage. When he comes to lecture the last of November he will pursue the subject of modern literature.

FANNY BUTCHER.

JULY 14-15

by Frederich Kroner

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—In July, 1918, when Germany was beginning to feel the full force of the "enemy's" power, Friedrich Kroner, a writer of some reputation, sat in a dugout on the west front and recorded the events of a day in the trenches under shell fire. His graphic narrative was considered powerful—too powerful for the eyes of the German nation at that time. "Its artistic value is undoubted," read the decision of the censor, "but it describes in such a thrilling way the events of battle and, above all, the physical and mental experiences of our soldiers that it might endanger the public confidence which is so essential at this time." But now—with little danger for the public confidence, it is admitted—it has been published in the Vossische Zeitung and has made a tremendous impression. German critics hold that it is one of the most masterly pieces of prose of this nature brought out by the war. Faulty translation may have weakened it, but even incomplete knowledge of the author's language cannot have removed all the "punch." Here's the story:

PARKE BROWN.

TEN days of this. Ten nights of it. No pause, no time to catch our breath. We curse the sun, the sky, the moon. We curse every day, every night, every hour. We are no longer men. Hope—longing—faith—home—they are nothing but tatters of thought in dried up brains.

Death alone lives—he with us—we with him. On the edge of every shell crater he sits and, amid the laughter of the air, howls our lives down to hell. We creep past him on our knees, mumbling our orders with withering lips.

Twenty-seven steps down into the earth, each step half a meter, and there is heaven. Heaven deep in the earth, fourteen meters deep. Hell is above us.

Here we draw breath and fall down on wooden cots. We don't sleep. We lie dead, motionless. They shake us awake when the time comes. That means new orders.

Or we try to keep awake, try to think about something, perhaps this: "The rations may get through today. For two days nothing but bread and stinking crater water. Not a crumb of tobacco—" Ah!

"Got a cigaret?"

"No."

He's still got three. I know it. The tightwad! But, I'd do the same thing in his place.

* *

BUT to go on thinking—My mother lives on a strange planet and at this minute she may be saying: "The boy hasn't written for a long time." And there a steeple clock sounds 12 over a town wrapped in blue darkness, wrapped in silence and peace. When the sun shines men walk in its light through the park, past budding bushes, on yellow gravel in clean shoes, in white linen, happily cool from the morning bath.

O, you earth, you strange planet! The moon is nearer to us than those things longed for by a brain gone blunt.

* *

The sergeant sits with a distorted face before the little switchboard. He plugs in, bellows something, pulls out the plug, and turns around.

"Two men toward Dresden. Liegnitz'll meet 'em."

Two men get up. It's their turn. They put on steel helmets, hang gas masks around their necks, pick up the cable drum, and vanish—twenty-seven steps upward into hell—without a word.

The buzzer on the table howls, it howls, it snarls with the deep voice of a man, with the shrieking of women, the sound of girls' voices.

"Hello, Berlin! Berlin! Berlin! Hello! Breslau, have you got Berlin? Berlin is shot to pieces! Give me Eisenach (the next battery)."

Over seven kilometers of cable sound a shrill voice:

"Increase fire on given point. Stop."

And the answer: "Increase fire on given point. Stop."

That was the brigade commander speaking to a gunner.

THE commander—O, you manly man! Ten days I lived with you, you with us—the commander carries behind his small, high forehead the destiny of the division—10,000 men waiting in the trenches, at the guns, at the telephone, underground and above ground, crowded together in one square kilometer, welded together, bodies, bones, blood, and quivering flesh.

Every morning he comes creeping down from the hell above, brushes vainly at the clay on his coat, clears his throat, throws his head back, looks around with kind, cold eyes, his face full of deep Prussian furrows, each one a chapter in his life, and says:

"Mornin', boys!"

One man gets up, stands at attention.

"Keep your seat, son. Just say 'Good morning.' Have you got a cigaret for me, son?"

How many hours longer? The night is a snail, slimy, black. It creeps slowly over the living and the dead. The attack doesn't begin until 5.

Three times tonight we climb to the surface, Franz and I. There the air is a whirlpool, shaken and torn every second by new bellowing. The shells howl at the bright moon. Franz and I together along the wire to Bremen, on hands and feet. Twenty-one minutes for 200 meters. But we must reach there alive.

Three lengths of wire shot to pieces. We patch it up lying flat on our faces, and then start sliding back, our short pipes between our teeth.

"Lower, Franz! Get down!"

"O, let go. My life's insured. We go much faster than this in Berlin in Leipziger strasse."

"Leipziger strasse! Big, busy streets filled with smooth movement!"

But at quarter to 5 o'clock the attack starts.

SIXTY-FIVE minutes patching wire. Under other circumstances it wouldn't take a thousand seconds. The dim moon hangs on the horizon, careworn and veiled. Twilight among the craters.

There comes the "wild hunt" across the field, yelling, cursing, amid the crashing of shells, lashes making the horses wince and rear, all looking like charred skeletons come to life. The drivers are the furies. We throw ourselves into the craters, for one must look out for them. Those drivers have their glassy eyes fixed on the road, they see nothing but the road, past boxes, over corpses, dead horses, and crawling men. Death rides in those wagons—shells by the hundreds.

Those are the trains, Franz, the trains which in '70 lost only one man, and he died of inflammation of the bladder not treated in time. Ha, ha! Franz, the chaps here are their sons, do you understand? Heaps of them have inflammation of the bladder and gout. They have only four fingers or hammer toes, they have bad kidneys, varicose veins and sour stomachs, smoker's heart and pains in the chest. They're deaf in one ear, they're blind in one eye. Instead of teeth they have black stumps in their mouths. They have three dozen diseases, each one, and with their three dozen diseases they carry their shells into the maw of death twice, yes, three times every night.

Those are the trains, Franz, the trains.

"Here Stay here, Franz. Mines are going off. You could throw houses into the craters. Later they'll be nice ponds. Duck your head, Franz.

"The infantry's sitting in the trenches now, smoking. Two hours from now it'll be altogether different.

"Do you believe we'll go to heaven if our brains are scattered around in the air ten seconds from now? I guess God doesn't bother about every hunk of bone. There are too many, too many, Franz. At Fromelles, you remember, where they were lying since '15, and at Neuw Chapelle, since '14, rotted by the sun, those white skulls and sharp ribs. Between their trench and ours—nothing but Tommies. You could tell them by their shoes and the brown rags on the white shins and thighs——

"Franz! Almighty God! Franz"

"Fifteen steps ahead of me the ground has blown up!"

"Why didn't you stay with me, Franz? Poor Franz——"

The way back is endless. The night is endless.

At 3 o'clock I crawl down the twenty-seven steps. The moon is gone. The land is black. The hellish pounding rages more wildly than ever in the darkness.

They ask me why I come back alone. I shrug my shoulders. I yelled at him to keep down; I told them, but he crawled ahead. A mine blew up. I never saw another sign of him. Nothing. I was crazy enough to spend ten minutes looking for his pipe. It might have been all that was left of him. And I didn't find it.

The earth is roaring even down where we are. But fear is no longer in us. With glassy eyes we sit and wait for orders.

The walls of the dugout groan. A piece of the timber caves in. We only stare at each other. Nobody stirs.

Those hounds are pounding us hard! They're chopping up the ground over our heads with big shells, looking for us where we're hidden fourteen meters down. They're hammering the dirt down on us so we can't look up.

Four o'clock. Our stomachs ache with emptiness.

Half past four.

The sergeant listens in on a conversation.

The division general to the brigade commander: "Are you ready?"

The answer, slowly, syllable by syllable: "Ready, your excellency."

"Is there anything you want?"

"Nothing, your excellency."

"Zero hour has been announced?"

"Zero hour has been announced, your excellency."

A pause, a long pause.

"God be with you, colonel."

"He and my men, your excellency."

The listening sergeant, with every muscle tense, stares rigidly into the mouthpiece.

Quarter to 5. Quarter to 5 o'clock, marked by a sudden stillness as though the turmoil had been cut with a knife. In front of us the torn earth lies quiet. A few belated shots are still coughing.

In the morning dawn the bare land gleams. A bright strip, like a yawn, lies sleepy looking against the horizon.

Our eyes are swollen. Our bones are lead. For an instant we are cut off from the world, from the war!

The infantry leaves the trenches.

The infantry advances.

SLEEPY ALLEY

By Guy F. Lee.

I have a most delightful room
In which to woo my rest;
Four windows on the south side loom
And two on north and west;
The soothing breezes gently stall
Around my bundled head:
It's lovely in my In-a-Wall-
Door-Bed.

I slide into the old pajams
All set to get a doze;
Alas, alack, and several dams,
For me there's no repose.
The milkhound, yea, the icefiend, aye,
The mail, the moving van,
Combine and to my slumber tie
The can.

I live upon a one block path,
I call it Flivver way,
For every jit the city hath
Drives down it every day;
They always kill their engines there
And try to bring them back:
O man, the anguish and despair
They clack!

Upstairs a woman walks, and walks,
And walks, and walks, and walks;
Across the porch another talks,
And talks, and talks, and talks;
I am a mild and genial moke,
A calm and peaceful bloke,
But these two dames—I hope they choke
And croak.

The ol' clo' hellion's there with vim,
The peddlers never shirk,
The organ grinder helps to jim
Friend Somnolence's work;
At least six dozen kids raisel
Till midnight every day—
That street of mine's a quiet dell
I'll say.

I want to rent a blacksmith shop,
A flat beneath the L,
A foundry with a house on top,
Or else a padded cell;
But my best bet's another war:
Perhaps then I could go
Up to the front and sneak a snore
Or so.

Give Your Cows a Chance — Underfeeding Seldom Pays

By Frank Ridgway.

QUESTIONS pertaining to the feeding of milk cows seem to worry the dairyman more than any other phase of dairy industry. Throughout the national dairy show frequent inquiries were made concerning feed problems. The visitors were not all experienced dairymen, however, they all owners of pure bred cattle. Practical questions that are helpful to the owners of grade herds were discussed among groups of men around the ring side.

Particular emphasis was placed on the fact that in general well fed cows make a profit, whether of the pure bred or grade class. Most dairymen think that, even with the present high price of feed, both grain and roughage, milk can still be produced at a fair profit, and under feeding will do more to cripple the industry than any other factor. Good breeding is being appreciated, but there is a great deal to be learned about feeding. Improper feeding has caused many good cows to be classed as "boarders" and consigned to the butcher.

"Give your cows a chance, don't depend on the butcher to improve your herd, but assume your own responsibilities," says Hugh G. Van Pelt of Waterloo, Ia., a leading authority and breeder of dairy cattle. He is not only one of the foremost breeders in America, but for years has judged dairy cattle at all of the leading shows and fairs. "One good breeder and feeder in a community is worth a thousand members from the standpoint of improving dairy cows. Good feed, care, and management, including an abundance of fresh air and sunshine, is all that is necessary to double the average production of the 23,000,000 cows that are being milked today in the United States," he said.

Mrs. O'Grady, a grade Jersey cow, was exhibited at the National by Mr. Van Pelt as proof that good cows are often classed as being unprofitable before they are given a fair test. At last year's National Dairy show, held at Columbus, O., Mrs. O'Grady was on exhibition with nineteen other dairy cows for the purpose of demonstrating that one cannot tell anything about dairy cows by looking at them. The demonstration was conducted by the United States department of agriculture in conjunction with the dairy division of the Ohio State university. The twenty cows were placed in a row with their production records on the back of a card.

Thousands visited the exhibit and were asked to pick the five best cows. Mrs. O'Grady, with every outward appearance of a good producer—deep, long body, good milk veins, and a rather desirable type—stood fourth from the left end of the row. Naturally she was placed among the five best, but, according to her records, Mrs. O'Grady was the "terrible example" of dairy cows in Ohio—she was considered the poorest of them all and an undesirable cow for any farmer to keep.

A great deal of interest was aroused when the two noted dairy cattle judges, Mr. Van Pelt and W. S. Moscrip, looked the cattle over and both of them placed the "terrible example" at the top. Van Pelt believed in his judgment and explained that the "poorest dairy cow in Ohio" had not been given a chance. He bought the cow for $100 and shipped her to his farm, "The Home of Financial Kings," where she was properly fed and cared for along with a herd of 200 pure bred jerseys.

In fifty-four days she produced 663 pounds of milk, testing 6.06 per cent of butter fat, or a total of 40.19 pounds, while her demonstration records showed that she had only produced 321 pounds of milk, containing 149 pounds of butter fat, in a year. She freshened in February and in 200 days produced 7,263 pounds of milk, testing 5 per cent of butter fat. Her milk was sold to a hotel in Waterloo, Ia., at 20 cents a quart, or a total of $726 in the 200 days. It cost approximately $125 to feed and care for her, leaving a profit of about $600. The calf was sold last spring for $20.

"There she is!" was the remark frequently heard as visitors approached Mrs. O'Grady's booth at the Dairy show. She has been exhibited at several other fairs this year and is considered the most educational cow in the country, and an inspiration to those who own grade cows that are not producing what they should. They scratch their heads and wonder if they have been feeding their cows properly.

"Put your cow in the barn and feed and care for her," is the advice of Van Pelt. "Do not condemn her until she has been fairly tested. The Babcock test and scales are assets to every dairyman, but we should not allow them to mislead us. Lay more stress on the proper interpretation of the test and the elimination of the incorrect interpretation of the test. I have men come to my farm to see my herd and ask me many questions about how to improve their dairy cattle and my answer in most every case is: 'Go home and feed your cows better; care for them properly—give them a chance—and they will usually do the rest.'

"There isn't a cow in the United States so poor but what, if bred to a good sire, her heifer calves well raised, properly developed, and given a chance, she may be made a benefactor to mankind. The secret of successful dairy husbandry is not a hidden secret, there's nothing mysterious about it, it is not difficult to understand. It can be summed up in these words: Give your cows a chance by using good sires, generation after generation, raise calves well, develop them properly, and in turn give them a chance.

"I expect to make even better records from Mrs. O'Grady. Up to this time she has been given the care that every dairy cow should have, and now we expect to give her the chance that some of our sensational individuals have had."

Many do not realize the importance of feeding dairy cows, and it has required years of experience for some cattle owners to learn that it pays to feed milk cows well. The cow is a milk factory, and it is necessary for her to first eat enough to maintain her body, and this amount remains about the same throughout the year.

"The poorest cow, Mrs. O'Grady, in the Barnesville, O., Cow Testing association, was evidently being given only a small amount of food above what was required to support her body, and men were told to dispose of her kind. But when she was given enough to maintain life and all the feed she could use to manufacture milk her production was increased several thousand pounds. This is an excellent example of what may be done with hundreds of other milk cows that are not paying their way.

"Give your cows a chance."

News of the Religious World

Year's Campaign of Community Evangelism, Plan

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot.

THE Garfield park district of the Chicago Church federation has planned a campaign of "community evangelism," to last through the coming year. This campaign is to be correlated with the interchurch world movement.

Today is "visitation day," when teams of church officers will call upon all the church members, urging them to more definite service in the church, especially along the lines of church attendance. Next Sunday will be "go to church Sunday."

The month of November is set apart for recruiting new members from people who do not ordinarily attend church. December is "ingathering time," when membership in the churches will be urged on the new recruits. In January family religion will be stressed, in cooperation with the Family Altar league. A week of prayer will be observed. February is set apart for fathers and sons, and in March an intensive evangelistic campaign, with gospel meetings during the two weeks before Palm Sunday, is planned.

The great "ingathering day" is Easter day, April 4, when the fruit of the intensive campaign will be seen in additions to church membership. Adequate follow-up and instruction is provided for during the month.

The Rev. Ernest B. Allen

The Rev. Ernest Bourner Allen is the new pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church of Oak Park. Dr. Allen was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., educated in the public schools, and after taking a business college course, engaged in business for seven years. He graduated from Olivet college in 1895 and in 1907 received the honorary degree of D. D. from that college. He is also a graduate of Oberlin Theological seminary, receiving the degree of B. A. Dr. Allen was ordained to the Congregational ministry in 1895 and has been pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church at Lansing, Mich., and the Washington Street Congregational church at Toledo, O. He was trustee of the Ohio Congregational conference, 1907-1916, and moderator of the Ohio Congregational conference, 1910-1911. On Sept. 19 he was installed as pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church of Oak Park.

Various activities mark the beginning by the Chicago diocese of the nation-wide campaign for the church's mission recently started by the Episcopal church. The Fox river parishes will have an automobile parade this afternoon, beginning at Elgin and going to Aurora, where a regional rally will be held at 4 p. m. The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Patton and the Rev. L. G. Wood, national directors of the campaign, will address the meeting. The parishes in Batavia, Dundee, Elmhurst, Geneva, Glen Ellyn, and Wheaton will participate in the parade and in the rally.

Last night, at a dinner held in the Morrison hotel, these leaders met the Chicago diocesan and parish committeemen and outlined the plan for this diocese. Tonight two city rallies will be held, one at the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Peoria street and Washington boulevard, where Dr. Patton will speak, and the other at the Church of the Redeemer, Backstone avenue and Fifty-sixth street, to be addressed by the Rev. Mr. Wood. Diocesan headquarters are at St. James parish house, 666 Rush street.

Today has been designated as memorial Sunday by the Roosevelt Memorial association and the association's executive committee has asked that all ministers devote a part of their sermons to a reference to the former president. The campaign of the association dates from the 20th to the 27th.

Next Sunday will be the fortieth anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. L. B. Hix, pastor of the Millard Avenue Congregational church. Today is reunion and fellowship day in this church and a former pastor, the Rev. W. A. Waterman of California, will preach at the morning service on "The Contribution of Congregationalism to American History." The fellowship program will be at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when messages will be received from former pastors.

The national council of Congregational churches will meet at Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct 21-29.

The annual Illinois Baptist convention will be held at Jerseyville on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

The annual meeting of the Chicago Deaconess Aid society of the Methodist church will be held at the Deaconess home, 22 West Erie street, Tuesday, at 10:30 a. m. At the program hour Miss Katherine Dockery, a deaconess who has served for over twenty years among the coal miners of Pana, Ill., is to speak. She will have with her a living product of her labors, Amelia Grande, now of Firman house, Chicago. Miss Grande will sing and tell something of her work. Austin, Broadway, and Diversey Boulevard churches are to serve the luncheon.

The opening of McCormick Theological seminary this fall has brought some reassurance to the leaders of the Presbyterian denomination with regard to ministerial supply. Seventy-seven young men were new matriculants, though twelve of these were former students, whose studies had been interrupted by the war.

J. Campbell White, associate general secretary of the inter-church world movement, will speak at a young people's rally Tuesday evening, Oct. 21, at the New First Congregational church, under the auspices of the Church federation.

The Chicago Christian Endeavor union held a successful two day "challenge convention" at the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, Friday and Saturday. On Friday evening the players from Evanston, under the direction of Mrs. A. Starr Best, presented a pageant, "The Life of Moses." Among the speakers and conference leaders were Daniel A. Poling, national association president; F. D. G. Walker, Harry Wilkins, Nellie Johnson, Fred Spear, George Witt, and Laura Bell Stevens. Marguerite MacLean was convention chairman and Henriette Mertz director of publicity. Reports showed a substantial increase in membership during the last year.

The Y. M. C. A. noonday meetings for business men are well under way. The speakers for this week are: Monday, Dr. R. R. Bigger, superintendent of the adult department, Chicago Sunday school association, who will speak on "The Man Behind the Gun;" Thursday, the Rev. William M. Holderby, superintendent of the Family Altar league, who will speak on "Hitting the Solar Plexus." The meetings are held in the Auditorium, 19 South LaSalle street and begin at 12:10, closing at 12:45.

The Rev. Prof. L. C. Lewis of the Western Theological seminary ecclesiastical history department has been engaged by Trinity Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan boulevard, as preachar at the eleven a. m. services. The Rev. Nicholas B. Clinch has become priest in charge of the parish. The evening services will be held at 7:45 hereafter.

The Hyde Park Christian church has recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. At the banquet, which was presided over by Prof. W. T. MacClintock of the University of Chicago, the first pastor of the church, the Rev. Herbert L. Willett, D. D., was the principal speaker. A gift of $25,000 towards a new church building was announced, which brings the building fund up to $50,000, half the amount needed. The church contributes $2,500 per year to foreign and city missions. Its budget for the coming year is $3,500. The Rev. Edward S. Ames, D. D., is pastor of the church.

The Y. M. C. A. in Chicago has been of great service to returning soldiers and sailors. There have been issued since the war 9,290 free memberships. The interviews held were 14,386; positions secured, 2,818; religious interviews, 6,568; Christian decisions, 102; men referred to churches, 4,348. This work indicates that the association in the home land is appreciated by the men.

The Home Missionary society of the Congregational denomination has opened a department of rural work and has called to the secretaryship of this department the Rev. Malcolm Dana of Charles City, Ia. He is an alumnus of Carleton college and Hartford seminary. He will make his headquarters in New York and his program will be put into operation in many rural Congregational churches.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

SHOWING UP THE CARTOONERS.

I have seen a wistful victim
Gayly belted on the attic
For a minor indiscretion
Or a sentiment erratic;
I have seen him castigated
With a dornick on the bean,
With a mission-freighted missile
Shunted swiftly o'er the scene;
I have watched the pert pulsations
Of a vibratory bludgeon
On the flat cephalic onion
Of a turbulent curmudgeon;
But he never did his exit—
O, he never did, I swear!
As the cute cartooners draw him—
With his feet up in the air.

I have seen a fellow mortal
Do a brodie in the drink,
Take a header in the dampness,
Try a Kellermann and sink—
Yea, go down as would a biscuit
Manufactured by a bride,
Coming back to see the surface
With some bubbles on the side.
I have seen a fellow mortal
Go beneath the lapping wave
To what fancy fiction writers
Deftly call a "watery grave,"
I have seen him drown completely—
Rotten luck! But here's the rub:
When he struggled to the surface
He did not remark "Glub glub."

The School Teacher Says:

"Restlessness in the schoolroom is often caused by dry throat. I never expect serious study from any little pupil until this irritating throat condition is relieved"

THE School Teacher recommends BUNTE'S Cough Drops and uses them herself. They are good to taste, and good to the irritated membrane of a dry throat. In a few minutes, the pure cane sugar, menthol and horehound soothes and heals—and there is no danger of the irritation becoming inflammation. Cost only a few pennies.

For Breakfast—Lunch—Dinner

Spread Cranberry Jelly on toast or hot biscuits or muffins for breakfast and compare its delicious flavor and its economy with other jellies or any jam or marmalade. It is easy to make—little labor and less waste.

Try Cranberry Butter for lunch or supper in place of dairy butter, and prove how much more economical it is and how it puts an edge on appetite. Serve Cranberry Sauce at dinner with all meats, and learn how superior it is to any condiment.

And for desserts, you'll find Cranberry Pie, Cranberry Jelly Roll, Cranberry Pudding or Cranberry Ice so rich in flavor and yet without that cloying sweetness, that you'll vote Cranberries make the dessert par excellence.

Cranberry Jelly

Cook until soft the desired quantity of cranberries with 1½ pints of water for each 2 quarts of berries. Strain the juice through a jelly bag.

Measure the juice and heat it to the boiling point. Add one cup of sugar for every two cups of juice; stir until the sugar is dissolved; boil briskly for five minutes; skim, and pour into glass tumblers or porcelain or crockery molds.

6 lbs. of Cranberries and 2¼ lbs. of sugar make 10 tumblers of delicious jelly.

Cranberry Butter

Three pints cranberries, ½ cup water, 2 cups sugar (or 2 cups of white corn syrup).

Cook the cranberries and water until the skins of the fruit are broken; then press through a sieve, and cook this pulp until it becomes quite thick; add the sugar (and syrup if you use it), and cook for ½ hour over a very gentle fire, stirring constantly. When slightly cool turn into jars, and cover closely.

This makes a delicious and healthful spread on hot biscuits, bread, buttered toast, or cake.

Cranberry Meringue Pie

One and one-half cups sugar, two cups cranberries, one-half cup cold water, one tablespoon flour, two eggs, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, two tablespoons powdered sugar. Cook sugar and water to a syrup; add the cranberries. Cook until the berries have popped. Cool a little. Mix smoothly in a bowl the flour and yolks of eggs; add three tablespoons of the juice of cooked cranberries, then add to the berries and simmer for three minutes. Stir in butter and vanilla and set aside to cool. Turn filling into deep pie crust previously baked; cover with meringue made from stiffly beaten whites of eggs and powdered sugar. Place in cool oven to set and slightly brown the meringue.

Cranberry Pudding

Cream one cup of sugar with three teaspoons of butter. Add slowly one cup of sweet milk, two cups of flour, sift with two teaspoons of cream of tartar and one teaspoon of soda. Add one and one-half cups of cranberries and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Serve with any sauce.

White corn syrup may be substituted successfully for sugar, in whole or in part, except for Jelly and Pudding.

Always cook Cranberries in porcelain-lined, enameled or aluminum vessels. To keep throughout the year seal sound, raw Cranberries in jars filled with cold water. Put them up now. For a selection of the choicest cultivated varieties, be sure to ask for

WE BELIEVE that The SILVERTONE Phonograph is the equal of any phonograph on the market and that the price is lower than that of any other phonograph of the same size, quality of workmanship and material and musical excellence. This belief is based on the testimony of two hundred thousand satisfied owners of SILVERTONES. For this is not a new phonograph. It has been in the hands of our regular customers for several years—has been given every test and found perfect. The enthusiastic praise of these two hundred thousand owners has encouraged us to offer the SILVERTONE for your approval. We know that the best way to convince you of the truth of our claim to quality is to let you try this phonograph in your own home—the only place where a musical instrument can be given a satisfactory and convincing test. That is why we are making this liberal offer.

We will send you both the phonograph and the records, without the payment of one cent in advance. And this does not obligate you in any way. All we want you to do is to try the instrument for thirty days. Examine its mechanical features, cabinet work and finish. Compare its musical excellence with any other phonograph. Give it every test necessary to prove the truth of our claims for it. If at the end of this 30-day trial you are not satisfied with the instrument, if you do not believe that it is the equal of any phonograph on the market, and that the price is lower than any other instrument of the same quality, size and musical perfection, simply notify us and we will give you instructions for sending the outfit back at our expense. We will refund any transportation and cartage charges you have paid. This 30-day trial does not cost you one penny, nor does it place you under any obligation to buy.

Tone

Tone is the all important thing in a phonograph. Tone quality depends upon the reproducer, tone arm and amplifying chamber. Each must be correctly designed and proportioned and harmonized in its relation to the other two so that all will act together as a unit. This has been done in the SILVERTONE and that is what constitutes its musical perfection.

The SILVERTONE reproduces faithfully restores every tone quality that went into the making of the original record. It actually reproduces every delicate shading of tone, every minute variation of volume and density, every sound vibration, whether it be the strains from the violin of a master, the silvery tones of a the harp, the heavy instrumentation of a military band, or a vocal solo.

Tone Control

The SILVERTONE is equipped with a tone modulator which gives complete control of the volume of sound. It serves the same purpose as the doors on the Victrola or the shutters on the Columbia Grafanola. You may set the modulator at any desired point, giving a uniform volume of sound, either loud or soft as desired. Or the modulator may be manipulated while a selection is being played, thus enabling you to give your own interpretation to the music.

Powerful Silent Motor

The motor used in SILVERTONE Phonographs has been tested and improved and then tested again until it is now as perfect as mechanical and human efficiency can make it. It is powerful, silent, smooth running.

Plays All Disc Records

The SILVERTONE convertible tone arm permits the playing of any make or size of disc records, including the Columbia, Victor, Edison, Pathe, or any other disc record. And it plays them with the purity and richness of tone that marks the perfect reproducing instrument.

The Little Dinner in The Suburbs

By W. E. HILL

The very much unmarried Miss Dibble, who has played the shy and demure role for some forty-odd years without success, has adopted the "good fellow" pose and is going to fascinate the opposite sex or die in the attempt. She has nearly shocked the life out of proper young Percy Blish by asking if he has heard the one about the bride and groom on the Fall river boat.

"Why, Etta, I'm so glad to see you!" and Mrs. Jones, Etta's sister, who is listening, decides that there is something very suspicious about Mrs. Timmons' cordiality to Etta, at least in Mrs. Maud Trowl th lion of the occasion. Mrs. Trowl, who provides the artistic spirit of the community, is very literary, having written once a farce in eleven acts and two scenes.

"Now I want you to promise to tell me if you think the sleeves are in wrong!" Going up stairs after dinner to view the hostess' new dress.

"Sah! Sah!" Mr. Wiggins, the music loving host, is bound no one will get away without listening to the record from "Forza del Destino."

"Oh, go on, finish it! You won't shock us—do go on, please!" Sad plight of Mr. Beedie, who has forgotten the point to his after dinner anecdote and is floundering around hopelessly. The ladies think Mr. Beedie has decided the story a bit too risque, and are naturally wild to head the end.

Lady off in a corner, away from any chance breezes, having a terrible time lighting a cigaret.

The worst part of prohibition is that you never can tell how a cocktail is going to hit you, not being used to them these days. Joe, who used to be a "tank," is making funny noises and gestures at old Mrs. Cribbin across the dinner table.

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

NUMEROUS persons who have read and who admire John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" are uneasy in the fear that the American production of the play will suffer from an inadequate impersonation of the leading character.

They examine the catalogue of the known artists and they find none who seems even approximately fitted to essay the stupendous task. The personality, either real or counterfeit, great enough to suggest so vast a figure in the people's mind, appears missing from the theater; and desecration of a noble shrine is an evil possibility harassing the present meditations of many a highbrow.

What actor shall we recommend to Mrs. Harris, the producer, and to Mr. Drinkwater, the author? He, one suspects, grows sick at heart as he searches Broadway for an Abraham Lincoln. Can you see him inspecting the Lambs' or the Players' at teatime, hoping to meet the mummer Titanic? Cæsars he may encounter there, and Antonies, a Napoleon or two, Disraeli, Voltaire, Ulysses, Hamilton, Romeo and D'Artagnan, Lear, and at least one George Washington. But the bell boy, you imagine, after diligent paging, will return and say, 'Mr. Drinkwater, I can't find Mr. Lincoln."

William Hodge, who is gaunt and not noisy, might vaguely hint the rôle, but he is addicted to prosperous jujubes from his own confectionery. Claude Gillingwater of "Three Wise Fools" has long legs and is awkward and intelligent. Burr McIntosh, divested of his paunch; Ben Johnson, John W. Cope of "Daddies," Lionel Barrymore, all come to mind, and the actor, name forgot, recently here with Bertha Kalich, who played a southern planter with Guy Bates Post in "The Nigger" a generation or two ago.

Warfield is too short, Sothern too coy and rhythmic, Mantell to melodious, Louis Mann too detailed and minute, Arthur Byron too young and gay, Tom Wise too portly, Arliss too subtle and obvious. The list is nearly exhausted. Mrs. Harris is said to favor Frederick Burton, who, perhaps, in "The College Widow," spoke the famous line, "You're a hell of a Baptist!" Then there is the silent unknown who pictured Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation," and Frank Keenan, a fine imitator.

If you were confronted by this crisis of biography and the drama you would probably seek a practitioner of the despised art of imitation. An actor of impressive stature and individuality who has the intelligence to reproduce mentally the stereotyped Lincoln of the play, and the knack to imitate it, might be nearest the ideal. But the majestic and dynamic inertia of the St. Gaudens Lincoln in Lincoln park is a simple achievement compared to that demanded from the player of Mr. Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." And the public in Lincoln park is much wiser than the public in a theater. Think of an art fine enough to put false whiskers convincingly upon an impersonation of Lincoln!

Mr. Drinkwater's drama (in type) seems not to be the masterpiece its rhapsodists claim it to be. It is, in type, a simple and reverent illustration of Lord Charnwood's monograph, marred, however, for the American reader by the author's admitted ignorance of idiom and atmosphere. Though disclaiming, as an Englishman, any attempt at a local color of which he has had no experience, Mr. Drinkwater still descends to many of the frayed platitudes of the minor Lincoln tradition—the tall, shabby silk hat, the habit of reading Artemus Ward in public, the epigram about Grant's inebriety, etc. Complaint has been made of the invented character of Hook, one of his "ministers," but Hook is a dramatic expedient, epitomizing the opposition in Lincoln's cabinet, and seems to be legitimate. And you can forgive Gen. Grant for saying "My word" more easily than you can Mr. Drinkwater's chromo of him at Appomattox with the long cigar and the bottle of whisky. Lincoln is in the play, if they can find an actor to point him out.

The Roosevelt Memorial association announces that Mr. Drinkwater's visit to America is not so much to see "Abraham Lincoln" presented as it is to glean material for a drama about Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Drinkwater plans to attend several memorial services this week to collect data and atmosphere.

R. T. Parker of the Boston Transcript makes a gloomy survey of Mr. Hodge's new comedy, "The Guest of Honor." Concluding a column of masterly disparagement, Mr. Parker says: "Millions of persons peruse eagerly the publications of Cyrus H. K. Curtis; hundreds of thousands read the novels of Harold Bell Wright; tens of thousands look with pleasure upon William Hodge and his plays.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

MISS MARGARET LAWRENCE'S absence from the cast of "Tea for Three" was notable for its brevity. She left it on Wednesday night, remained away on Thursday afternoon, and returned on Thursday evening to stay indefinitely.

"The Five Million," one of the returned-soldier series, is heading in to the Princess. Because of the actors' strike its schedule became disarranged in New York and it was shifted from theater to theater until finally it found itself without a home. It is about one of our dreamy crusaders who returns heroic from the war and discovers the village flatfoot in possession of his sweetheart and his job. Ralph Morgan, the chap who was redeemed so neatly in "Turn to the Right," will be the noble sufferer in "The Five Million," which is by Guy Bolton and Frank Mandel. It is due at the Princess Oct. 27, replacing "The Bashful Hero," which will be on its way to the hospital.

Those who have searched for the Happy Isles and found them not among the dramas present, may cruise further this week and hope for better luck. Three new entertainments will appear upon the chart—two hailing from New York City and a third from somewhere in the Union Loop. They are known as "The Velvet Lady," "Daddies," and "The Dream Song."

"The Velvet Lady," which follows "The Canary" at the Colonial tonight, has verse by the late Henry Blossom and music by Victor Herbert. Miss Georgie O'Ramey, late of "Leave It to Jane," is in it, and so is Miss Fiorrie Millership, a pet of the varieties. It was cradled in the New Amsterdam theater, New York.

"Daddies" is one of Mr. Belasco's progeny. It is clean and joyous, according to the prospectus, and it treats of five misogynous bachelors who reluctantly adopt a war-orphan, thinking it is a babe. But it turns out to be a lovely English ingenue, under whose gentle ministrations they grow sweet and Belascoan. Some one named John Hobble wrote "Daddies" and among those who play in it are John W. Cope, Miss Jeanette Travers, Charles Hammond, and Miss Winifred Fraser. It was popular in New York. At Powers' tomorrow.

"The Dream Song" comes on Thursday night to Central Music hall, under the auspices of local cherubim. It is a slice of grand opera life, full of love, ambition, and music, with an old composer and his daughter, a songstress, as its principal figures. She loves Ivan, son of her parent's ancient Polish enemy, and he drives her from his door. Victor Herbert composed the aria upon which she swims back to her father's favor, and Edward Locke, who is intimate with the habits of the warblers, wrote the plot and incidental conversation. Miss Ferike Boros, who translated "The Seven Sisters" for Miss Laurette Taylor, is in the cast. Charles F. Horner, an entrepeneur of the lyceums and the Chautauquas, is the producer.

The Stage in New York

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the old days, come the first Monday after the first Tuesday in September, which is Labor day, Uncle John Drew used to emerge from his summer's siesta and open the regular dramatic season in New York at the Empire theater.

Nowadays Uncle John sits in a box with his family, including his daughter Louise and her young husband, Jack Devereaux, and watches his distinguished niece, Miss Ethel Barrymore, do the honors. But times have changed and there are now so many other openings in August and September that Ethel waits until the October days are here. The Drew family advent has lost nothing in importance, however.

This year Miss Barrymore's play was written by an American, though it is largely English in character. "Déclassé" is the title, and Zoe Akins of St. Louis the author. In it the actress has scored the most sweeping success she has enjoyed since "Mid-Channel" proved a triumph for her.

The part she plays is that of the proud Lady Helen Haden, a thoroughbred of the aristocracy who lives somewhat recklessly because she is unhappy in her marriage with the dissolute Sir Bruce, but never with more than a conservative disregard of the conventions. She is much in love with a young American, for instance, but when their affair promises to become serious she is ready to send him on his way. And when she catches him cheating at bridge in her home she does not hesitate to expose him before her guests, though she knows when she does so he will turn over to Sir Bruce the letters she has written him and that she will face both the notoriety of a sensational divorce and the social ostracism that is certain to follow. Which is exactly what happens. Lady Helen comes to America after that and lives, so long as she can on the money the sale of her jewels gives her, the life of the déclassé. She is, figuratively, like the derelicts of the Salvation army, "down but not out." Even when the last pearl has been sacrificed and she faces poverty and all that poverty means, she balks at an alliance with a rich Jewish-American because she feels that her acceptance of such a way out of her difficulties would be degrading.

In the end she is accidentally killed by stepping in front of one of New York's wildest taxis, and thus her problems are solved, as they were in "Mid-Channel," when she fell from a balcony to the pavement below. Her death may not be beautiful, but it is cleanly, seeing that the taxi did not so much as muss her white lace gown. Also it gives Miss Ethel an opportunity to complete the finest acting performance of her career with an effective death scene. She is absolutely superb in the more important scenes, rising grandly to the opportunities of the incident in which she exposes the card sharp and playing with the most delicate shading the touching episodes of her social decline in New York. Her local following has risen as one man to cheer her. Her company includes a particularly fine actor, Claude King, newly come from England and Vernon Steel, well known in pictures. King playing the millionaire she refuses and Steel the caddish American she exposes.

I suppose that to any one who does not make playgoing a business all theatrical weeks in New York are interesting. But you may accept it from one who knows that some of them are terrible. Week before last, for example, revealed four failures out of five new plays presented, and, though the impression is popular that it is great fun to uncover failures in the theater,

London Theaters

What they are doing in the London theaters is intimated in the following résumé by mail:

The Drury Lane theater reopened recently with a new melodrama called "The Great Day," by Louis N. Parker and George R. Sims. The great day in question is the 11th of November of last year as it unfolded in jubilant London. There are also scenes at and near Paris during the peace conference, one of which dips down into a den of the Parisian underworld.

"The scene," according to the forecasts, "is a night refuge for the fallen and degraded, an aspect of Paris life unfamiliar to the ordinary visitor, but full of human interest and tragic happenings. Situated near the Seine, the house attracts all the riffraff and scum of Paris. It is, of course, well known to the police, who regard it as a hunting ground to which criminals promptly fly for refuge when pursued. For a couple of sous you can obtain a night's lodging in the cellars below. The scene opens with a vivid picture of mock gayety and horrible ribaldry, presently to yield to drama of a realistically brutal nature."

All of which may please the ex-Tommy, but the ex-doughboy will want to know where the M. P.'s were and where the authors got that stuff about sleeping anywhere for 2 sous.

The London reviewers speak handsomely of "The Choice," a new play by Alfred Sutro, author of "The Walls of Jericho," which was recently presented in London with the much-admired Gerald Du Maurier in the leading role. "He was a captain of industry and a great man, so he fell in love with a flippery-gibbet." Thus the Daily Telegraph, while the Times concedes it to be a play "of high interest, very neatly written, and brilliantly played." The captain of industry is engrossed with the problems of labor (plausibly enough), and the flippery-gibbet goes off on the arm of "one of her old set, one of the 'boys,' who danced at the Savoy when home from being 'splendid' at the front."

Robert Loraine, who has not been seen here since the days of "Man and Superman," has just passed his 200th performance as Cyrano in London, and there is some talk of his crossing to America to continue the revival here.

London speaks patronizingly of "The Bird of Paradise," the Hawaiian play by Richard Walton Tully, which, after years of prosperity in the American provinces, has assaulted London with the aid of Lyn Harding.

The frisky story of "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM"
IT WAS an innocent chemise
Designed to please, perhaps to tease—
A garment famed in fact and fable—
Which GARY sent quite innocent,
With good intent to naughty MABEL.
He had no thought of trouble wrought,
And being caught in wiles capricious
Nor did he dream it would be seen
By GERALDINE his bride suspicious,
But women can annoy a man in more ways than the writers tell us,
And make this life a place of strife
With troubles rife when they are jealous.
SO GARY soon found life so soon,
His honeymoon was simply Maden.
His weeping bride a kiss denied,
Lured from his side by calming ladies.
His days were gloom—in MABEL'S ROOM
Reposed his doom—Oh! why conceal it?
He begged and cried, renounced his pride,
And then he tried at last to steal it.
That was the day his hair turned gray,
He found the way was not CHEMEASY.
What more to say? Go see the play.
YOU'LL FIND IT GAY AND BRIGHT AND BREEZY.

I can assure you that it is just about as funny as having your teeth filled.

This week, it happens, practically every one of the plays produced has proved worth while, and two of them inspiringly so. One was "Declasse" and the other an English light comedy, "Too Many Husbands," brought over by A. H. Woods. The author is W. Somerset Maugham, the novelist, whose "Moon and Sixpence" is just now a much discussed book in the east.

The combination of the title and Mr. Woods as a producer led naturally to the belief that "Too Many Husbands" was one more addition to the bedroom frolics in which this manager delights. To the surprise of everybody, and the keen disappointment of our Tenderloin artistocrats, it proved to be nothing of the kind. Most of the action occurs in a bedroom-boudoir, but the bed itself is a decorative instead of a practical property. No one climbs into it or under it.

The husbands of the title belonged to Victoria, a pretty, shallow, flirtatious little thing, who married Maj. William Lowndes before he went to war. When he was reported killed at Ypres with a bullet in his brain Victoria turned to his best pal, Major Frederick Cardew. Freddie and Victoria had been married two years and were proud of their 4 months' old offspring when word came that "Bill," far from being as dead as reported, was on his way home. He had intended, he explained afterward, to burst in upon Victoria at the dead of night, and, standing at the foot of her bed, shout, joyously, "Home!" But he afterward thought it might possibly shock her.

For an act after Bill's arrival Freddie and Victoria try to find words to explain the situation to him. Victoria, naturally, is placed in a terrible predicament. She can't remain married to the two of them, though she really loves both the dear old things, nor can she make up her mind to choose between them. Freddie and Bill, for their part, really something must be done, are equally determined to be noble. Bill insists Freddie shall keep Victoria, while Freddie is quite as insistent that Bill, having come first, should resume his old place. You may recall the late "Charley's Aunt" Case of the varieties, who reported the same sort of unselfish devotion on the part of Rochester and Syracuse. Both cities claimed him, in a way—Rochester insisting he was born in Syracuse and Syracuse that he belonged to Rochester.

It is delicious fooling after the English comedy manner, and, though the skating is frequently over the thinnest ice, it is always done with that air of good breeding the English affect, and is never either cheapened or coarsened for the sake of the laughs. It is also played with the utmost deftness and skill, Kenneth Douglass and Lawrence Grossmith appearing as the husbands and Estelle Winwood as Victoria, who, in the end, reluctantly agrees to divorce both her majors and marry a war-made millionaire who stayed at home. She has done her bit, she thinks, marrying two D. S. O. men. What more could reasonably be expected of her?

A third hit of the week was Charles Dillingham's production of a new musical comedy called "Apple Blossoms," with a good portion of the music written by Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, and the rest of it by Victor Jacobi. Here again the virtues of good taste and a wise selection of players are predominant.

The story is old enough, being an Anglicized version by William Le Baron [who wrote "The Very Idea"] of a Dumas story—that of the young people forced to marry against their will by their parents. Once married they agree to give each other entire freedom to live the unfettered or Greenwich village life, but discover before the evening is over that they much prefer an apartment built for two somewhat farther up town.

John Charles Thomas is the most popular as he is easily the best singing actor in light opera today. John Charles is quite well aware of this deserved prominence of his, but still he maintains a decent modesty and improves both as actor and singer with each passing season. A year or so and he will doubtless be embracing grand opera and large grand opera heroines in place of light opera and the svelt Wilda Bennett, who is the heroine of "Apple Blossoms"—a pink and piffling sort of title, but a charming entertainment. There are two good comedians in Percival Knight and Roy Atwell, and Fred and Adele Astaire, dancers, score an individual hit in the ensemble. Decoratively the production is both rich and handsome. The Kreisler-Jacobi score is above the average in quality, and the opening night Mr. Kreisler obliterated all memory of his having served in the Austrian trenches by responding graciously to the friendly calls of the audience.

Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern have begun their season's revivals of the Shakespearean repertoire with "Twelfth Night." They are both in the best of health again and earnestly interested in their return to the stage. Miss Marlowe put on a bit of flesh while she was wooing back her good health, but the handicap is slight. She is still a lovely Viola. Mr. Sothern, too, is stouter than he was. Their audiences have been enthusiastically demonstrative. They are to follow "Twelfth Night" with "Hamlet" and "The Taming of the Shrew."

"Why not?"

"A married man in particular should spend his evenings at home with his wife and children."

"Suppose he ain't got no children?"

"Well, suppose he has. Just think of a poor, neglected wife, all alone in the great dreary house, rocking the cradle of her sleeping babe with one foot, and wiping away the tears with the other."

(Absent minded.) "Yes, wiping away the tears with—(correcting herself she gives him a push). Why, certainly not; she doesn't wipe her tears away with the other foot."

"No."

"Of course not; she uses her hand."

"But suppose she's hugging another man with her hands?"

Lieut. Charles Girard & Co.:

"Will you come to the theater with me this evening?"

"Have you secured the seats?"

"O, come now, you're not as heavy as all that."

"Dearest, what would you do if I were to die?"

"I should go mad, my dear."

"Would you marry again?"

"I said I would go mad, not crazy."

"Why did everybody cry in that last death scene that I played last night?"

"Because they knew you weren't really dead."

"There have been times in my life when I was tempted to commit suicide."

"O, well, it's no use grieving over the past. We can all look back and see where we've made mistakes."

"Do you know the latest college cry?"

"What is it?"

"Worry."

"What did you worry about?"

"About losing my hair."

Smiles that are worth millions

When these stars of the film smile on the silver screen, thousands of theater goers in city and town and village smile with them. For their smiles are wonderfully contagious, and daily they are doing their part to make this a happier world.

And so it may be said that the smiles of this delightful trio—Doris Kenyon, Constance Talmadge, Virginia Pearson—really earn millions of dollars each year. Not alone in their individual salaries, which are large, but in the millions of nickels and dimes that pour into the box offices wherever these stars appear.

The secret of any smile

It is easy to understand why John Emerson, the brilliant director whom many credit with the "discovery" of Douglas Fairbanks, declares that there can be no success in pictures without clean, white, sparkling teeth. The true charm of any smile lies in the teeth that are revealed by the parted lips.

The fact that these three stars—and many more equally as famous—intrust their teeth to Senreco is a striking indorsement of this dentifrice. They prefer Senreco because it not only renders the teeth hygienically clean but also imparts to them a brilliant, pearly luster such as no other dentifrice gives. In addition Senreco keeps their gums firm and pink and healthy, which is so essential to beautiful teeth.

Why Senreco is preferred

Senreco is a dentist's formula combining the cleansing agents recommended as ideal by United States Army dental surgeons.

Senreco has no "druggy" action on the teeth, but cleans them by gently dissolving and removing the food coating that causes decay. By an equally gentle polishing and brightening action it brings out all the natural whiteness and luster of the teeth. In doing this Senreco does all that any dentifrice can do for the teeth.

Beneficial to the gums, too

But the beauty of your teeth depends upon the care of your gums as well as the teeth themselves. Senreco is wonderfully beneficial to the gums. With each tube is included a booklet that gives a Senreco treatment that helps to heal soft, spongy, sore, bleeding and receding gums and similar troubles. Use this treatment and in a few days you will notice the gradual strengthening and toning up of your gums—they will begin to take on that healthy pink color so necessary to really beautiful teeth.

Senreco is pleasant to use. The very first time you try it, you will actually feel it cleaning your teeth as no other tooth paste ever did. When you touch your tongue to your teeth you will know they are really clean.

Take home a tube of Senreco today. Learn for yourself why so many people will have no other tooth paste. Large tube, 35c, at your druggists' or toilet goods counters. Senreco, Cincinnati, Ohio.

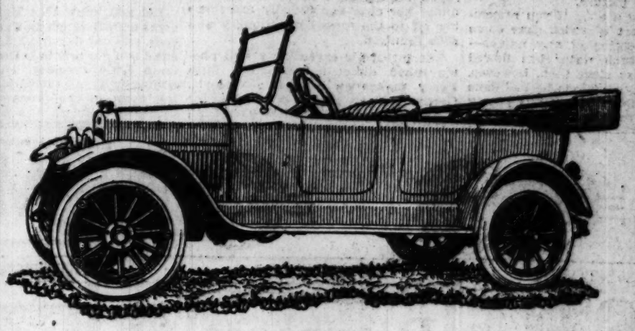
"See your dentist twice yearly, use Senreco twice daily."

Constance Talmadge
"I like Senreco because it tastes so good. And what clean, sparkling teeth it gives!"

Doris Kenyon
"If all my friends could share with me the delights of Senreco, I know they would feel like smiling, too. I would be lost without Senreco."

Virginia Pearson
"When people compliment me on my white, pearly teeth, I always want to tell them about Senreco. For Senreco is entitled to most of the credit for keeping them that way."

One Post-War Maxwell Built Every 1½ Minutes



ONLY 60% of the demand for this magnificent Post-War Maxwell is being filled at the present time.

Yet eight great plants are working to capacity; and 13,000 men are devoting their best efforts to provide enough Maxwells.

Today, one Post-War Maxwell is being built every 1½ minutes of the working day.

This is at the rate of 100,000 cars per year.

Imagine what this gigantic production means to a purchaser of a Maxwell car.

Think of the gigantic saving in money which the purchase of millions of dollars worth of materials means, and how the list price can be made so low.

Think of the accuracy, the sureness of the design of each single part, to take a chance on such rapid and enormuos movement of raw material through those great plants to completed product.

Then think of the endorsement by the public which this great demand indicates.

The basis for this demand is represented in the good will of 300,000 owners of Maxwell cars before the coming of the Post-War Maxwell.

And the public bought $200,000,000 worth. They will buy $100,000,000 more in the next twelve months.

Directed by Hugh Ford.
THE CAST.

Sheriff Jim	Robert Warwick
Kate	Eileen Percy
Her sister	Gertrude Short
Sister's fiance	Victor Potel
Sam	Monte Blue
Robert Travers	Robert Cain

By Mae Tinée.

I CAN'T see any reason why you shouldn't think "In Mizzoura" a pretty good picture.

There was a time, if you remember, when Robert Warwick gave some people—not mentioning any names—the willies. Much water has flowed under the bridge since then, however, and in recent productions he has done good work—sincere work. Any posing Maj. Warwick may have been guilty of heretofore he sloughed with his army uniform. You remember he served his country long and faithfully, don't you? Well, he did.

In this picture he's a small town sheriff. And the girl he has loved comes home from finishing school and "trues him down" for a slick gentleman who turns out to be all kinds of a yellow dog. All of which events give the sheriff opportunity for proving himself the diamond in the rough he really is. And we leave him tying his repentant darling's sunbonnet strings under her chin and proudly marching her off to the town confectionery and soda fountain.

The picture is exceedingly well photographed, directed, and acted. Miss Percy makes an agreeable vis-a-vis; Gertrude Short as the country sister is a plump and pleasant if not too sanitary little body. The male rôles are all peopled by men who know their business.

"In Mizzoura" may not be a world's wonder—but is a picture worth seeing.

"Broken Blossoms" will be shown at the Randolph theater for several weeks.

Florence Reed says that tragedy stalks through her life. She cannot cook.

Did you know that Kathlyn Clifford owns a fruit ranch in California? She does, and one day not long ago thought she'd run out and help the housekeeper do a little canning. After pouring boiling fruit in several jars and breaking them in the process, the patient caretaker advised the young woman to place a silver spoon in the jars and pour the contents over it. Done with great success. Only when dinner was announced, the maid scurried around anxiously, finally bursting out with the news that the spoons had been stolen. "Stolen? Fudge!" exclaimed Miss Clifford. "They're all sealed up in the fruit jars."

Overheard on the Wilson avenue bus: "We're going over to see 'The Miracle Man' tonight."

"My goodness—we've seen it twice!"

"Well, this will be our third time."

Kathleen Kirkham has a hobby all her own. She loves to make lamp shades.

Gertrude Selby is now Mrs. Townsend Netcher. You know—of the Boston store.

Bessie Barriscale wants to know what to call her new home. She requests her friends, admirers—and those who are neutral—to send suggestions to her, suite 902 Baker-Detwiler building, Los Angeles, Cal. The winner of the name contest will be awarded a prize to be named later.

Ask Me!

MERRILL: Sorry to disappoint you, but I'm your little motion picture editor, not your little city directory.

J. H. L.: Afraid you lose your bet. Elinor Fair, not Gloria Hope, was the sick girl in "The Miracle Man." Yes, Wheeler Oakman does look a little bit like Herbert Rawlinson. He was born in Washington, D. C., 189^. Y'wekku'

VITAGRAPH FAN: Harry Morey is from Michigan. He was on the stage before going into pictures. He did not play with Alice Joyce in "The Winchester Woman." Why? Search me!

AMERICAN AND ITALY: How do you do! Twins, you say? How I envy you. I've always pined to be a twin. Address Edith Johnson, care of Vitagraph, Hollywood, Cal. Carol Holloway is single so far as I know. Grace Cunard is married to Joe Moore. Here's the cast of "The Phantom Rescue": Capt. Armstrong, Elmo Lincoln; Lucile Gray, Grace Cunard; Rawden, Ivor McFadden; Steve Blighton, Frederic Starr; Granville Sear, Rex De Roselli; Mrs. Armstrong, Virginia Craft; Wong, Chai Hong; Richard Gray, W. A. Oriamond; Gray's Cook, Madge Hunt; the mystery man, James Cole. You're entirely welcome.

VOLA R. B.: Your "smiling lady" was sure glad to hear from you again. It's nice the kiddie is so well. We have no recent information regarding Betty Nansen, but if any news comes in I won't forget you.

A FRIEND: So that's what you call yourself! Funny ideas some people have, haven't they? One so friendly should surely sign one's name!

L. W. R.: Love to oblige you, but it isn't possible to do what you ask in the rotogravure section. If you want Miss Pickford's biography, I'll be glad to tell you all I know, provided you send me a stamped, addressed envelope. No trouble at all.

BROWN EYES: Bessie Barriscale will receive letters addressed to her in care of the Brunton Studios, 5341 Melrose avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

X. W. Z.: I imagine the Glah girl would write to you. Ask 'em. They're at 4500 Sunset boulevard, Hollywood.

E. W. N.: Sometimes it does take a long, long time to place a manuscript. If I were you I wouldn't be discouraged—yet. Think how wonderful after a long wait to receive an envelope with a check! O, I do hope this happens to you!

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

Observations on a Plan for German Opera in America

By W. L. Hubbard

TOMORROW evening there is to be undertaken the opening of a season of German opera given in the original at the Lexington theater in New York. Whether the municipal authorities or the populace will prevent the fulfillment of the plan remains to be seen.

When a similar undertaking was attempted some months ago soldiers and sailors backed up by the mayor prevented the consummating of the scheme. The same promoters who were responsible then are in charge now. It is probable that nothing will be done to interfere with the proposed season and that portion of the New York public which is pro-German in its sympathies and desirous of hearing German sung, will be permitted to enjoy performances given by singers many of whom were so outspokenly in the American enemy class during the war, that their services were immediately dispensed with in the opera and the concert world of this country. Our general spirit of leniency where enemy residents was concerned did not accomplish at that time their internment or their deportation, and therefore they now busy themselves even before peace is signed with the same propagandistic activities which they served during the war.

Whether such propaganda should be permitted, whether singing and teaching of German in this country is propaganda or not, whether permitting it weakens or strengthens our national well being and safety are questions which admit of much discussing and are affirmatively or negatively answered largely according to personal bias and belief. But the wretchedly bad taste displayed by such alien enemy musicians in thus flaunting in the face of the United States public their hatred of all that is American can but be evident to any one blessed with aught of fineness of sensibility and with appreciation of the fitness of things.

The Hun, however, has recently afforded the world only too ample proof that such fineness and such appreciation are not prominent elements in his makeup and therefore the acts of these ardent representatives in New York probably should cause no surprise. They are running absolutely true to form.

The question, however, is not that of the using or the not using of German music. That any one truly American in sentiment and ideal did not care during the war to listen to music of German original was but natural. A people which was heaping so much of suffering, inhumanity, and sorrow upon the world could not at that time be mentally associated with a folk capable of producing aught that could afford enjoyment, uplift and beauty. That feeling lingers still in the hearts and minds of many Americans, and its complete passing will require no inconsiderable time, especially where those are concerned whose immediate and personal losses in the wartime have been heaviest.

But the larger general public can afford the more indulgent view. Cherished hatred profits neither individual nor nation. There is no reason why the American music loving public should be deprived of the masterpieces of German music. There is every reason why it should not be deprived of them. For to deny ourselves of them is to limit our knowledge and our appreciation.

The message any music gives is largely if not wholly a question of the suggestion received from it by its hearer. And that suggestion depends upon the hearer's mental and emotional experiences, which experiences in turn form, when coupled with the immediate mood, his susceptibility and his receptivity. German music therefore needs mean only that which its hearer makes it mean. And to the majority of listeners it must contain chiefly beauty and uplift. The great treasure of German music should be kept open to us. To deny ourselves its riches would be to hamper and impoverish ourselves. All the instrumental music of Germany should be at our disposal. All its opera and all its song literature should be ours to use and to judge.

But, while we should welcome German music, there is no reason why the American public should be asked to listen to the German language. That idiom stands at the present time as too synonymous for that which has been hurtful to humanity both individually and collectively for the world to care to hear it. We have our own language and now is the time for us to come to realization of its worthiness as the medium of art expression and insist upon its using. The time is ripe in fact for the doing away with of all foreign tongues on the concert and opera stages. The French, the Italian, the Russian, the Scandinavian—all stranger languages were well banished, not because they are not languages of worth and of beauty, but because for us they are foreign, and we as an English speaking people should have songs and opera sung for us in the language we understand. German should be banished for an especial and well grounded reason, but all other foreign speech must also disappear from our entertainment halls if we ever are to become genuine and intelligent appreciators of grand opera and of the great song literature of the world.

Dai Buell
APEDA PHOTO

Miss Buell will be heard in a piano recital at the Ziegfeld theater next Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

Mischa Elman, who has been in the United States for the last twelve seasons, and who next year commences a tour of the world, which will claim his attention for three seasons at least, will be heard in recital in Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30. He has chosen for performance the D major sonata of Handel, Ernst's F sharp minor concerto, the Bach chaconne, his own paraphrase of Rubinstein's "The Dew Is Sparkling," Bruch's Kol Nedrel, the Brahms-Joachim Hungarian dance No. 7, a melody of Tschaikowsky, and Sarasate's "Basque Caprice." Josef Bonime is to be the accompanist.

Harold Bauer comes to Kimball hall this afternoon for a piano recital at 3:30. He will play Whiting's arrangement of Bach's toccata in D minor, the Schumann fantasia, op. 17, sixteen dances by Schubert, a group of Brahms made up of the D minor ballade, the A flat intermezzo and the E flat rhapsody; the Chopin barcarolle, Ravel's "Play of the Waters," and Alkan's study in perpetual motion.

John McCormack gives his first recital this season in the Auditorium this afternoon at 3:30, assisted by Winston Wilkinson, violinist, and his master accompanist, Edwin Schneider. The tenor will sing "Come se ti vedro" and "Mio caro bene" by Handel, Peel's "O Like a Queen," Foote's "The Red Rose Whispers," Marshall's "Sensitive Plant," Whiting's "A Birthday," a group of four Irish folk songs, Schneider's "Only You," two negro spirituals arranaged by Burleigh, and the Cradwick "Bedouin Love Song." Mr. Wilkinson's selections are a "Chant d'Amour," by Volpe, the seventh of the Brahms-Joachim Hungarian dances, Volpe's arrangements of Arensky's "The Little Fish's Song," and the Sarasate "Gypsy Airs."

Mischa Levitski comes to Orchestra hall Tuesday evening, Nov. 11, in piano recital.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler will play a recital program this afternoon at 3:30 in the John Marshall school, corner Adams street and Kedzie avenue, this being the first concert in the series arranged by the Civic Music Association of Chicago.

The Chicago orchestra will be heard three times this week in Orchestra hall. On Thursday evening the first of this season's popular concerts will be offered. the selections being of the lighter order and the prices of admission ranging from 15 to 50 cents. And on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening the second pair in the regular series will take place. The program for the latter consists of Berlioz's "Harold in Italy" symphony, which has not been heard here under Mr. Stock's direction; the "Melpomene" overture of Chadwick, Debussy's "The Sea," four Flemish songs by De Greef—the first novelty of the season—and Dvorak's "Carneval" overture.

Next Wednesday Mr. Kinsey inaugurates his series of morning recitals in Ziegfeld theater by presenting at 11 o'clock Dai Buell, the Boston pianist. In commemoration of the date being the anniversary of the birth of Liszt, Miss Buell has arranged a program devoted principally to the Hungarian master's compositions. The list includes the B minor sonata and the Hungarian rhapsody No. 13. With these she has grouped the Llapounow "Elegy in Memory of Franz Liszt" and three Schumann selections—"Papillons," intermezzo, and the finale from "Carnival Pranks in Vienna."

The Swedish Societies' Old People's Home association announces its annual concert for next Sunday afternoon in Orchestra hall. The program enlists the services of the United Swedish Singers of Chicago under the leadership of Gustaf Carlson, Martha Phillips, soprano; Ebba Anderson, violinist, and Florence Harvey and Edgar Nelson, accompanists.

Grand Opera will have its first hearing in Chicago one week from today, when Antonio Scotti and his company come to the Auditorium for an afternoon performance of "L'Oracolo" and "Cavalleria Rusticana."

John O. Sullivan, the Irish tenor, whose appearance with the Chicago Opera brought him favor last season, has returned from Paris. He will be heard here again this winter with the opera, but will give a recital in Orchestra hall Tuesday evening, Nov. 25.

The Aeolienne trio, composed of Richard Czerwonky, violinist; Burno Steindel, cellist, and Moses Boguslawski, pianist, announces a concert of chamber music to take place in the Studebaker theater, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 9.

The $100 W. W. Kimball company prize offered by the Madrigal club in its recent seventeenth annual contest for the best composition for the club's use, has been awarded to Adolf Weidig. The new work will be sung at the Madrigal's second concert.

The concert scheduled for next Wednesday evening as the second in the series arranged by the Central Concert company and taking place in Medinah Temple, has had to be postponed owing to Mr. Martinelli, the Metropolitan tenor, who was to have been the especial star of the occasion, not having returned from Europe in time to fill the engagement. The concert will be made good later in the series, but the next one now will be that on Nov. 11, when Anna Case and Maud Powell are to furnish the evening's music.

Will Marion Cook and his American Syncopated orchestra, which scored such success here last winter, returns to Orchestra hall for a concert Tuesday evening, Oct. 28.

The Sistine Chapel quartet comes for its second concert in Orchestra hall Sunday, Nov. 2, and the following evening at the Auditorium the Vatican choir, an organization of sixty vocalists from the leading churches of Rome and from the Sistine chapel, will be heard.

The Kinsolving musical mornings in the ballroom of the Blackstone have been arranged for the following dates: Nov. 11 and 25, Dec. 9 and 30, and Jan. 13. At the first, Tamaki Miura, the Japanese soprano, and Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist, will be heard; at the second, Nina Tarasova, contralto, and Maurice Dambois, cellist; at the third, Josef Lhevinne, pianist, and Paul Althouse, tenor; at the fourth, the Society of Ancient Instruments, assisted by Genia Zielinska, soprano, and at the fifth, Riccardo Stracciari, baritone, and John Powell, pianist.

How you can tell a Paramount Artcraft Motion Picture

Know before you pay—four ways how

1—in the lobby

The lobby of a theatre is usually covered with announcements of treats in store for you.

Many theatres, especially those who make a change of programme once weekly, announce Paramount Artcraft Pictures exclusively.

The days when Paramount Artcraft pictures are shown are the days to choose first. Those are the pictures you can rely on.

This is one of the ways to know before you pay—the lobby way.

2—on the billboards

On the billboards in the neighborhood of a theatre you will find a perfect maze of paper. This maze means something if you know what to look for.

The thing to look for, right under the title of pictures advertised, is the eternal sign of foremost entertainment, Paramount Artcraft.

If those two words are there you are all set for those shows—you can't go wrong.

This is another way to know before you pay—the billboard way.

WHATEVER is really first-rate in pictures comes to you under that name Paramount Artcraft.

Follow that name and you will never take a chance with your evening's entertainment.

You want to know what sort of pictures you are going to see before you go to the theatre—you want foresight, not hindsight.

It is the best theatres in every locality that show Paramount Artcraft, and it is the best theatres that advertise them as such with the name Paramount Artcraft right under the title of the picture.

3—in theatres' newspaper advertising

But after all the main outlet for all picture theatre advertising is the newspaper.

If you don't see the announcements in lobby, on billboards or in programmes, you are still very likely to see them in the newspapers—either in big display space or in the Classified Amusement Directory.

This is where the shrewd exhibitor makes the biggest noise about his show and this is where he would not dream of leaving out the name Paramount Artcraft whenever he is entitled to put it in.

Paramount Artcraft stands like a wonderful lighthouse amid all the ceaseless changes of the world of motion pictures.

The radiance pours steadily out and guides you to many a perfect programme.

4—in theatre programmes

Nearly every regular theatre sends out in advance each week a programme, booklet or leaflet, telling of coming attractions.

Unlike the lobby and the billboard, this comes right to your home where you have plenty of leisure to study it.

But the secret of success for your entertainment hours is just the same—for you will find that the manager has listed Paramount Artcraft Pictures as such.

He knows why, so do you. This is another way to know before you pay, the theatre programme way.

In the Far East, a potter with skillful hands molded a vase with infinite care; this was 1000 years ago. Such care was used, such strength built in, that even now in some museum's niche the vase still lasts.

And with such care, and similarly skillful hands, each Curtis "Hand-Built" Tire's made.

The strength we put in every one, by hand, will give you miles you never hoped to get with other tires which were made the other way. Yet Curtis "Hand-Builts" cost no more than other tires worth much less.

ART

Eyre Architectural Sketches Form a Charming Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett

IN these days when homes are at a premium and the number of houses to be turned into homes is negligible, it is with a feeling of envy mixed with a difficult to analyze satisfaction, much like that of a cream satiated cat, that one views the architectural sketches by Wilson Eyre, hung in gallery 256 of the Art institute.

First, possibly, in connection with these it might be of interest to give the slight outline of Mr. Eyre's career as it is hastily brushed in in the catalogue that details his work. He was born in Florence, Italy, in 1858, and lived in Italy until 11 years of age. He studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and from 1876 to 1881 he was associated with the architect, James P. Sims. In 1910 Mr. Eyre was elected to the American National academy. He is a member of the American Institute of Architects, the T Square club, the Philadelphia club, and the American Social Science association, and is represented by many buildings throughout the east.

After which delving into the technical data of our artist we can turn a conscious clear mind upon his exhibition.

The sketches are, for the most part, in color. A few are ink sketches, but the prevailing motif of the room is a warm, glowing mixture of russet, hazy blue, purple, and the green that leaves have just before they turn in the fall. It makes a remarkably comforting room. The warmth of it strikes beneath the chill veneer of an apartment made age to the struggling emotion we each possess of somewhere, sometime, owning our own exclusively, privately entranced doorstep.

The designs for the larger residences do not appeal to this emotion as forcibly as does the sketch of a cottage by the sea. To designate it more fully, "The Cottage at Jamestown, Rhode Island." It is a quaint little building with a driveway running through it, separating bedroom and parlor on one side from the studio, dining room, and kitchen on the other. The porch hangs over the water and from the sloping roof rise two sturdy chimneys, making one wish that the wind would blow strong from the north, bringing ruin or snow, as an excuse for their belching great clouds of smoke, symbolic of driftwood fires kindled and glowing on broad hearths within.

The water color sketch, No. 23, is that of a house built of roses and cream, a home for the housing of a summer idyll. The ink sketch of a seashore cottage is another lovely bit. In fact, as one passes around the room, one realizes that the "sketches," signified such in the catalog, are nearly more charming than the more pretentiously titled work. Look at No. 58, a group of six sketches, for example, or Nos. 139, 140 and 142. In group 139 the gallery audience is particularly good and the swan pond is a place of delight. In 142 the man, a student and a dreamer, musing over his book in the yellow light of a single, tall, white candle, makes one realize that all of an architect's talent is not concerned with the rule of thumb.

At the Palette and Chisel club is an exhibition of paintings by Karl Ouren. There are thirty-two canvases in all. A few we recognize as old friends, but a number of new faces greet us also. Until this exhibit I had seen only larger canvases by Mr. Ouren, but here there are several small sketches, and the charm of his brush does not diminish with the size of the painting. In fact one of the most delightful of these pictures is a tiny fragment of a thing—"Trumpet Vine," he calls it—and the scarlet flowers climbing over the dull brown outbuilding that gives support to the thick, green foliaged stalk, wave a cheerful danger signal to the daring soul who would attack their beauty.

I am personally sorry that Mr. Ouren has not painted any of his winter scenes in small. I like tremendously his feeling for snow, and the cold sensation that creeps from his canvas almost automatically down the unwary spectator's back is most uncanny. Try for yourself. Look long at the "Winter Afternoon" and "Winter" or "From Trondhjem, Norway," though this last is not as cold because of the red roofs giving a touch of warmth. If you look long enough at the snow banks, chilled stream, and naked, upstanding brown trees I wager a shivering will fall inevitably upon you.

From the Chicago Historical society comes the information that the Kenneth Sawyer Goodman memorial collection of portraits of Americans was collated early in the summer, hundreds of portraits being added to the index, and has been arranged in a series of twenty-five cases, covered in navy blue buckram bearing leather labels. Each plate is numbered and bears the above title. It is hoped the collection will be preserved in this way free from dust and yet be accessible to students, thus making of it a valuable addition to the society's records and a monument to the scholarly young naval officer who, as it is remembered, gave his life in service in the late war.

The Municipal Art league announces a lecture on "Memorials," by Walter Story of New York, to be given tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the clubrooms of the Art institute. During the hour Mr. Story will show war memorial panels gathered by the National War Camp Community conference. These will cover the ground of the memorial projects planned by cities and towns throughout the entire country.

President Poincaré, accompanied by Minister Lafferre of public education and the fine arts; Maj. Gen. Bliss and Paul Leon, director of the division of fine arts, opened the exhibition of nearly 200 works by Americans in the Luxembourg museum, Paris, Oct. 6. The exhibition was arranged by invitation of the French government. About 125 works were sent from the United States, twenty were given by artists in Paris, and fifty were owned by the Luxembourg itself.

The artists from the United States include Abbott Thayer, George de Forest Brush, Edmund C. Tarbell, J. Alden Weir, Frank W. Benson, Charles H. Davis, Horatio Walker, Cecelia Beaux, Philip L. Hale, Joseph De Camp, Charles Hopkinson, Charles W. Hawthorne, Childe Hassam, Robert Henri, J. C. Johansen, Richard E. Miller, Luis Mora, W. M. Paxton, Albert Sterner, Irving R. Wiles, Emil Carlsen, Ben Foster, Walter Griffin, Rockwell Kent, Ernest Lawson, W. L. Lathrop, Jonas Lie, E. W. Redfield, Robert Spencer, Charles H. Woodbury, Charles Grafly, Daniel C. French, Herbert Adams, Chester Beach, the Borglums, Paul Manship, Hermon MacNeil, Cyrus E. Dallin, and many others.

The painters abroad whose works are in the exhibition include Walter Gay, Alexander Harrison, P. O. Tanner, W. T. Dannat, E. C. Frieske, Eugene Ullman, John Noble, Mary Gassatt, Jules Pages, Aston Knight, Romine Brooks, Parke Dougherty, Elizabeth Nourse, Florence Este, C. H. Fromuth, G. E. Browne, Harry Lachman, George Howland, Leslie Caldwell, Cameron Burnside, George Oberteuffer, Lionel Walden, C. E. Pdowelski, C. H. Thorndike, W. S. ASTRONOMY

THE sun, the master and absolute ruler of a little family of planets set alone in black space, is a globe of fire almost a million miles in diameter. We owe our warmth, our winds, our very lives to the radiation of the sun. Without it the earth would be a frozen waste, a dead, stark world, a land of frozen air and solid water, a globe of frigid desolation.

The sun, which gives us life, is a ball of fire, and yet on it there is no burning. The substance of the sun is in a state of intense incandescence. Iron, copper, zinc, and all the metals we know on earth exist on the sun in the state of highly luminous vapor.

Looking down on the sun through a suitable telescope, one sees a vast boiling sea of flame. High up in the thin, invisible shell of gases which constitute the solar atmosphere fantastic shapes of rosy cloud flames can always be observed. Their bases rest on the layer of gas beneath them, and they frequently send down long coiling roots into the white surface below. Such clouds often hang in the same spot day after day, lazily turning on their stems like clusters of gigantic scarlet animalculae.

The surface of the sun is a sea of white hot clouds. It is in constant turmoil, ceaselessly tossing like the waves on the open ocean. Through holes in this sea of fire occasional glimpses can be had of a denser, still hotter layer below. But of bottom to this ocean of flames there is none. Deep in the sun, the gases grow denser and denser from the enormous pressure of the strata above, until at the center they are fluid and viscid like molasses or soft putty. Sometimes there come fierce explosions far down in the substance of the sun, like great depth bombs discharged under water. On such occasions huge masses of white hot clouds are erupted, like the bursts from a volcano.

Watching one of these explosions one sees a sudden turmoil under the surface, a violent boiling, the flames part and long tongues of twisting vapors burst up, expanding as they rise. They frequently attain great heights above the solar surface, reaching two and three hundred thousand miles in a few minutes. On rare occasions such an explosion takes place directly below a rosy tinted cloud, and when it does we see the red vapors scattered in every direction.

THE SUN

HOW A COMET MIGHT STRIKE THE SUN

Could an object like a comet strike the sun, what would be the result? While it is undoubtedly true that a considerable quantity of matter does fall into the sun, it is mostly in the form of molecules and small individual particles. There is nothing in the nature of a comet which would prohibit it from crashing into the sun; in fact, it could do just this thing while running in a definite orbit. A comet's path has the peculiarity that it passes nearer to the sun just as it is entering and leaving what is called its "perihelion passage," or circuit of the sun, that it does at the passage itself. If the orbit were fairly narrow it might graze and get by, but if below a certain limit it would certainly collide.

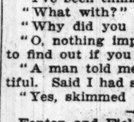
It might be said, to allay alarm, that no comet has ever been observed to strike the sun. Even if one did it is doubtful if the effects would be serious, for no comet, not even the largest, contains enough materials to appreciably alter even one day's radiation.

JEREMIAD—By Guy F. Lee

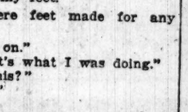
The honest voter homeward plods his way,
To find the landlord's once more raised the rent;
The grocer digs more deeply in his pay,
The butcher slashes in another dent;
The nineteen-thirteen overcoat must do,
The suit its third midwinter season plays;
He can't kick off the old shoes for the new—
It's hard to be an optimist these days.

One cannot get a haircut and a shave
The selfsame time and still survive the shock;
A show? Not any. One must pinch and save
To see a movie. All conditions sock
The ultimate consumer; he's the mutt
Who pays and pays and pays and pays and pays—
I'm of a happy disposition, but
It's hard to be an optimist these days.

How joyous were my feelings when the boss
Informed me he had whooped the weekly check;
Alas! my winning proved to be a loss—
The salvage merely added to the wreck;
The gents who sell the stuff that I must buy
Quadrupled where I doubled—hence my phrase
Profane, emphatic, vitriolic—aye,
It's hard to be an optimist these days!



THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE



MAJESTIC.

Eadie and Ramsden:

"I have acute indigestion."

"Isn't that nice?"

"Nice? Why, it's dreadful!"

"You just said it was cute, didn't you?"

"You know you are near a fool?"

"I'll move away then."

"I've been thinking."

"What with?"

"Why did you call?"

"O, nothing important. Just called to find out if you will marry me."

"A man told me today I was beautiful. Said I had skin like milk."

"Yes, skimmed milk."

Fenton and Fields:

"My brother just got sentenced to a year and ten days in jail."

"What's the ten days for?"

"War tax."

"I heard there was a new law. All the returned soldiers have to wear suits the color of their eyes. If a soldier has blue eyes he wears a blue suit, if he has gray eyes he must wear a gray suit."

"What if a fellow is cross eyed? What kind of a suit will he wear?"

"Cock eye [khaki]."

"What are you doing with that disconnected telephone?"

"I'm taking it to the man next door. He wants to use it."

"Where you going with that yardstick?"

"I'm going walking and I want to see how long I will be gone."

"He carries a yardstick with him as a rule."

"John, the garbage man is here."

"Tell him we don't want any."

"Where are you going with that cat in the cage?"

"I'm taking the neighbor's canary back to them."

"Where is the canary?

"In the cat."

"Keep off my feet."

"What were feet made for any way?"

"To stand on."

"Well, that's what I was doing."

"What's this?"

"A button."

"So it is."

"Sew it on."

"You are always buttin' in."

"This time I'm a button out."

Quality First

YOU command attention in a Hot Spot Chalmers whether you want it or not. The right kind of attention, not notoriety, but the silent praise of the man at the curb.

This tacit appreciation for a Hot Spot Chalmers has not been won in a day, but is the accomplishment of a superior laboratory, superior engineering mentality, the use of a huge sum of money—and time.

Today one need not look far in a Hot Spot Chalmers to find the underlying cause.

It's Hot Spot and Ram s-horn.

How two little devices could develop a motor car to such a high peak of efficiency is well worth knowing.

We shall be delighted to give you the "inside;" and after you've had one ride you too will say Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

The Quality of Your Tire Service

Dependable tire service is something more than mileage records. It must have quality as well as quantity—give you the same confidence in your tires as you have in your motor.

That is exactly the service a McGraw Tire yields. Its mileage is not only high; it is ASSURED, as far as humanly possible. The Duplex Method safeguards every McGraw Tire.

What the Duplex Method Is and Does

This is a McGraw method of vulcanization which prevents fabric buckles and mold pinches—the worst menace to tire life.

It consists in deferring compression of the tire in the vulcanizing molds until the rubber becomes heated and plastic. Then, when hydraulic pressure is applied to vulcanize the tire, the rubber "flow" is not stiff enough to pull the fabric out of place. The fabric layers "set" smooth and even. No creases can form. Pinches and buckles are avoided. The tire is a perfect structure.

Thus, McGraw Tires are remarkably free from manufacturing defects. They deliver continuously all the mileage inherent in highest grade materials, perfectly constructed.

County Road Plan May Be Broadened To Get City Aid

City, County, and Sanitary District Officials to Hold Conference.

BY JOHN L. SPELLMAN.

THE $5,000,000 road bond issue and other matters relating to the improvement of through city and country highways will be discussed at a meeting of county, city, and sanitary district officials at the Hotel La Salle, Thursday, at a conference called under the auspices of the Associated Roads Organizations of Chicago and Cook county.

William G. Edens, president of the association, will preside. Mr. Edens left last week for the south to address good roads meetings in Memphis, Chattanooga, and other cities, but will return in time for the Chicago conference.

"The purpose of the bond issue," said Mr. Edens, "is to put the Cook county roadbuilding program three or four seasons ahead of what it would normally be if we waited for the state to do the work under the $60,000,000 bond issue and state aid funds.

"At the present time the state highway department is spending all its energies and all available funds in the construction of federal aid roads, four of which, the Dixie highway, Illinois River way, Lincoln highway, and the Illinois-Wisconsin road, lead out of Chicago. It would be 1921, at least, before the state could be expected to get around to the construction of even one through state aid road in this county.

"The $5,000,000 bond issue proposal is presented as the last Cook county issue necessary to complete the state aid system in this county. Part of the roads are on the $60,000,000 state bond issue system and all the others on a state aid system. On the $60,000,000 bond issue system the state ultimately will pay all the cost and on the state aid roads one-half of it, refunding the money to the county for good roads purposes, or to retire some of the bonds.

"At the present time Cook county has to use about 120 miles of improved roads, with about seventy miles coming into use this year. We need at least 170 miles more to make our county road system complete, connecting up all main roads now constructed, completing new main line roads and laying out our highways, so that a traveler on the roads can go from one part of the county to another without unnecessarily long detours.

"If these bonds are issued, the county highway department can begin immediately to make its surveys and have the work ready to go ahead in the spring, otherwise the work in Cook county will lag and conditions on the roads will become unbearable, because the number of automobiles is rapidly increasing and the highways that are now improved are becoming overburdened with traffic.

"In addition to the improvement of the roads in the country districts, we are promised the coöperation of the city authorities in extending through route streets of the city up to the country pavements.

"A study of the roads to be improved under the $5,000,000 bond issue will show that when they are completed every part of the county will have its reasonable quota of permanent roads.

"There is an immense acreage of Cook county land under cultivation by truck gardeners, who still find it almost impossible to get into the Chicago markets at seasonable periods. Any one acquainted with the conditions on the roads already improved knows that thousands of city people can go out to the country districts and buy direct of these farmers at low prices. If we can facilitate the movement of truck gardeners' crops to the city markets and also help the city man to get out to the farmers, where he can buy at low prices, we are making a big step forward in a very necessary public movement.

"The signers of the petition under which this bond issue will be placed on the ballot indicate the wide range of interest in it. Not only are there motorists and bankers and real estate men, but labor leaders, farmers, teachers, and representatives of the great unorganized class of salaried people.

"The bond issue should carry by a big vote, inasmuch as it will hasten the completion of a county-wide road system and will not entail one additional penny of taxation on the home, the factory, or the farm."

AUTO BUSSES TAKE PLACE OF STREET CARS—When a few of the crosstown street car lines in New York City suspended business because of a court order Mayor Hyland gave permission for motor busses to be operated over the routes traversed by the street cars. The above shows a fleet of the busses waiting for the "rush hour" traffic. The busses were held in reserve at street ends to take care of the "peak load" traffic. Reports from the east said the busses were able to give as good service as was rendered by the street cars.

The Experts Say?

THE job of removing the wheel hub washer of the front wheel is often an almost impossible job, but it can be made easy by the use of a simple tool that can be made by any car owner. Take a pair of round jawed pliers five or six inches long. File a notch on the inside of each jaw near the end and then reduce the diameter of the jaws until they will just slip into the holes in the ends of the split washer. With this weapon it is easy to remove the washer. Simply hook the end of the pliers into the holes, close the pliers to contract the washer so that it may be drawn out of the groove, when it is easy to slip it out by running a screwdriver point around the edge.

Shackle bolts or spring bolts may be made self-lubricating by drilling six or eight 3-16 inch holes in a new bushing and packing them with graphite. The holes must be repacked about once in six months.

A cowl squeak may often be traced to a speedometer shaft which needs lubrication. The shaft should be repacked with vaseline or a very soft grease, and the operation should be carried out at once, because if the shaft is permitted to run unlubricated for more than a short time breakage will very possibly result.

Clutch trouble is one of the commonest complaints among car owners. The clutch throwout collar needs daily lubrication, and in many cars failure to give this, even for a single day, may mean clutch trouble. Give the clutch the lubrication it needs.

The car owner who does considerable of his own repair work will find a spool of spring wire a great convenience. When a spring is needed it is a simple matter to wind the wire around a bolt and then stretch the spring to the proper length.

A steel ring just the diameter of the cylinder bore at one end and tapered off at the other until it is just large enough to slip over the piston ring makes it easy to get a piston back in its cylinder, obviating, as it does, catching of the rings.

NELSON

FOUR TWENTY-NINE

The Car of the Future Is Here at Present

Have you read of the efficiency test conducted by the Automobile department of the Chicago American on September 27th, using a Nelson Five-Passenger Touring Car.

This is one of the most remarkable automobile efficiency demonstrations ever made.

Every effort was made to approximate the same conditions under which the average driver uses his car.

A reporter who had never before driven the Nelson took the demonstrator of a sub-dealer who did not know that the test was to be made and drove it 46 miles over boulevards, 35 miles over country roads and 35 miles around the loop—just the sort of service the average car is used in—no coasting, no down hill work, and this official report indicates an average for the 116 miles of twenty-nine miles to the gallon of gasoline.

Think of a car being able to show this economy, yet with a speed of 55 miles an hour, a car which will romp up the steepest hills, over mud and sand-filled roads without ever a gear shift.

All this is accomplished by the wonderfully simple light-weight design evolved by that genius known to every automobile man in the country—E. A. Nelson, desiner of the famous Hupp-20 and Hupp-32.

The Nelson is a masterpiece of automobile engineering.

Packard Trucks For All-Winter Transportation

No More Guess and Gamble in Trucking Costs—
Packard Figures Based Upon Severest Service

WHAT does it mean when thirty cities report demands for more housing construction and increased industrial building? What does it mean when members of the National Association of Builder's Exchanges promise to "attempt to carry on building all winter regardless of weather conditions"?

It means that if demands and plans are carried out, motor trucks must do their bit.

And motor truck users must know how big a bit they can do when cold is extreme and going is hard.

Winter building has always been more or less a gamble with the contractor. A man cannot work a system when the weather deals the cards.

In winters gone by, transportation has fallen down first. Materials were delivered behind schedule or not at all—expensive workmen were forced to slow down—costs were increased accordingly.

Replacement of horses by motor trucks helped to an extent. But reliable figures on winter motor truck performance have been hard to obtain. Consistent figures have been even harder.

Now the gamble is being taken out of winter hauling by Packard transportation figures.

Records of Packard trucks during last winter and the winter before are available.

Many of these trucks did not lose a trip or a minute's time during the winter.

Gasoline and oil consumption and repairs run at the same low average that Packard owners expect to find—

Average loads were hauled, even where they consisted of cement or gravel or other materials whose weight and bulk increased where wet or frozen.

Trailers and special dumping and loading equipment were kept in use according to schedule.

Packard transportation figures and Packard trucks necessarily go together.

For it is the extra margin of strength and stamina that enables the Packard to meet the emergency when it comes.

And it is that same margin—that extra factor of safety—which has kept Packard trucks in continuous service, some of them over ten years. We have yet to hear of a Packard truck going out of active service.

Building contractors and others will find valuable help in solving truck transportation problems by calling upon the Freight Transportation Department of the Packard organization in this city. Its services are without charge.

Shaft Manifolds Generally Used Now by Makers

Low Grade of Gasoline Causes This Radical Change.

BY HIGH SPEED.

ONE of the factors that contribute very largely to the efficiency of the modern automobile engine is the manifold. As a matter of fact the present types of manifold have been practically forced by the degradation of fuel which has taken place within the last few years. It is peculiarly appropriate, too, that we should consider the question of manifolding just now when we are standing on the verge of cold weather, because it is during the winter that the manifold exerts its greatest influence on engine efficiency.

In the now dim past, when we got a high grade of gasoline, it was all very fine to indulge in the long, sweeping manifolds that were then the rule. To get at the bottom of the problem we must bear in mind the fact that cold acts on gasoline just as it does on molasses—thickens it. With a long manifold, where the metal has a chance to get cold, the fuel, coming in contact with this cooled area, is quite likely to become so heavy that instead of gaseous vapor it is a fluid again. When we got very light, volatile gas this was not so likely to occur, but with the present grades, which are not very much lighter than kerosene, this precipitation is almost certain to occur if the manifold is long and unheated.

For this reason the modern tendency in manifold design has been all toward short passages leading directly from the carburetor to the combustion chambers. The long curved manifolds of the past have practically disappeared. Some designers hit upon the scheme of incorporating their manifolds in the cylinder block itself. This had the advantage of compactness of design and, better still, heated the manifold from its proximity to the hot water in the water system.

Today every authority recognizes the fact that it is necessary to apply heat in some form to the inlet manifold in order to secure efficient vaporization of the gasoline fuel. Many different ways of achieving this end have been worked out. One of the first methods tried consisted in putting a jacket around the intake manifold at some point near the combustion chamber and passing the heated gases of the exhaust around the intake. In this way the exhaust is made to furnish heat to keep the intake manifold at a proper operating temperature.

A second method consists in bolting the carburetor directly to the cylinder block and over the exhaust passage, so that the heat of the latter will keep the carburetor sufficiently warm to insure the delivery of a light and volatile fuel. This method is in very general use now.

There were still other schools of experimenters. One insisted that the fuel must be heated before it reached the carburetor. Another group heated the gas in the carburetor itself. The obvious trouble with both these methods was the fact that the fuel heated at such a distance from the combination chamber ran a considerable chance of condensing again before it got to the cylinders. With the constantly decreasing quality of our motor fuel this danger became greater.

It is almost obvious that if the fuel must be heated at all it is better to perform that operation when it is as near as possible to the combustion chamber, so the advocates of heating the fuel after it has left the carburetor have had the better of the argument.

The most recent designs in manifolds agree in placing inlet and exhaust in close proximity, so that the heat of the latter may be imparted to the fuel, keeping the fuel thoroughly vaporized until it is in the combustion chamber. Some of these designs place the inlet and exhaust together for a considerable distance, while in others the inlet passage simply passes through the exhaust at a given point.

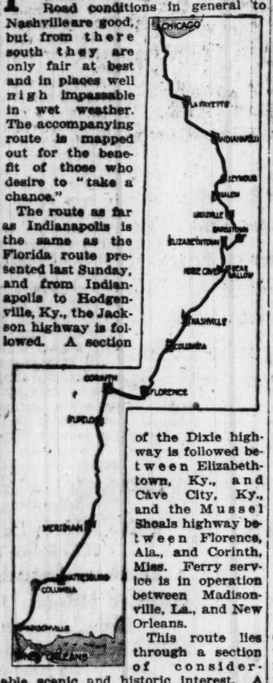
Last year there was a flood of fuel warming devices known as "hot spots." These were heated areas in the inlet manifold, the fuel passing over which was heated and vaporized on its way to the combustion chamber. Some commentators on motoring matters informed their readers that the hot spot contributed to securing easy starting in cold weather. It requires only a moment's thought to realize that the hot spot depends on the heat of the exhaust for its heating qualities and consequently does not get warm until the engine has been started for some minutes, so that its help in starting is purely imaginary.

Engineers have discovered that while our present grades of fuel must be warmed to a certain degree to obtain fuel efficiency, the heat must not be too great or the gas loses so much in volumetric efficiency that the net result is a power loss which can be ill afforded. If the fuel is properly warmed and is then mixed with cold air the result is a snappy fuel that gives a maximum of power. This is the reason for the use of a shutter permitting the admission of cold air after the engine has run long enough to reach a fair degree of operating efficiency. It may be noted, however, that with our present grades of fuel there is little likelihood of too high a degree of heat being reached in cold weather.

The problem of securing fuel efficiency is not a simple one. Some of the best engineering brains in the country are engaged on it at the present time. There are many diverse factors to be taken into consideration and each must have due weight. However, this we can say, that any car owner who has noticed a distinct falling off in engine efficiency during the cold months will do well to see whether the manifold design of his engine is not to blame.

TO NEW ORLEANS

FROM the standpoint of good roads, the trip to New Orleans is not to be highly recommended. Road conditions in general to Nashville are good, but from there south they are only fair at best and in places well nigh impassable in wet weather. The accompanying route is mapped out for the benefit of those who desire to "take a chance."



The route as far as Indianapolis is the same as the Florida route presented last Sunday, and from Indianapolis to Hodgenville, Ky., the Jackson highway is followed. A section of the Dixie highway is followed between Elizabethtown, Ky., and Cave City, Ky., and the Mussel Shoals highway between Florence, Ala., and Corinth, Miss. Ferry service is in operation between Madisonville, La., and New Orleans.

This route lies through a section of considerable scenic and historic interest. A side trip of a dozen miles may be made from Horse Cave, Ky., to Mammoth Cave, one of the "Seven Wonders" of the world. A stay of a day or two here will be fraught with many new experiences and impressions.

It was at Bardstown, the oldest town in Kentucky, that "My Old Kentucky Home" was composed, and Muldraugh's hill, near there, was used as a hiding place by the once famous bandit, Jesse James. Just south of Hodgenville is the Lincoln farm on which stands the little cabin in which Abraham Lincoln first saw the light of day. A structure has been erected over the cabin by the government and a park has been made on the grounds.

A Good Car?

Having decided to spend a week end with my parents, my wife and I boarded an interurban car and got off at the proper stop. My father was there with his automobile to meet us. We deposited our hand bags and ourselves in the tonneau, and started on the mile and a half ride home. When we had gone about a half mile the engine stopped and no amount of tickling the starter would induce it to go again. After some minutes of fruitless effort, father said: "We're out of gas, I guess. Nothing to do but go home and get some."

Realizing that this would take some time we all piled out and I started out manfully carrying those heavy grips, for we were afraid to leave them alone in the car by the roadside. Nothing particularly funny in all that, you say. Perhaps not, but wait. My brother got off the interurban car thirty minutes later, and coming up to that traitorous machine, seated himself behind the wheel, pressed the starter, and a few minutes later sailed serenely up the drive to the house where, hot and dusty, we were resting after our long walk in the hot sun. Unexpected Passenger.

While motoring in an Indiana town, in which a carnival company was exhibiting, I turned from a thickly wooded country road on to an open highway at rather too reckless a speed.

A gentleman in spangles helped to cut down this speed by dropping from the skies on to my radiator, and clinging desperately to the machine while something seemed to draw him toward the astonished ladies in the back seat of the car.

Investigation showed that I had acquired an extra brake in the form of a balloon man's parachute. R. S. U.

King Duck.

Last summer, while on my vacation, I was motoring to Starved Rock. I intended to spend the whole day in making the trip. It is well that I had not contemplated speed, as a handsome Packard continued directly in front of me at a snail's pace. The road was extremely narrow.

There was a small object in the car ahead which appeared to cause the occupants much concern and which appeared to be a sick infant, for frequently the car was stopped completely and I could hear the feminine occupants apparently fondling the child.

The next time the car stopped two daintily clad ladies alighted, carrying the small object, and made their way to a small and dirty pond to the right of the road. My curiosity was aroused. I watched.

Imagine my astonishment when the object was placed on the ground, its swaddling clothes having been removed. It proved to be a duck who took to the water with much gusto and quacking.

It appeared that the duck was a pet and indisposed and was taken for an airing. Every time the duck saw a pool of water it wanted to get out of the machine. Imagine following a machine for miles and miles, having it stop every so often to let "his excellency," the duck, get out and have a bath. It was the first time I ever heard of a duck being the guest of honor in a Packard. E. F.

He Stuck.

A North Dakotan, who was a member of the Nonpartisan league, stuck in a mudhole with his car. He had the slogan of the league, "We'll stick," pasted on the windshield.

A stranger, who was bitterly opposed to the league, happened by, and was summoned for aid. He just gave one glance at the sign on the windshield, and said, "All right, stick," and drove on. E. H. W.

Costly Parking Space.

Tired of being taken into court by traffic policemen, because at the time he goes to business his car has to be parked in the street, as day storage is at a premium and access to a public garage at those hours is difficult, Philip Rosenbach, art connoisseur of Philadelphia, has just paid $16,000 for a stable property which he will convert into a private garage for himself. It is near his place of business.

Oyster Shell Roads.

Two great oyster reefs in the Gulf of Mexico, one at Sabine, Tex., the other at the mouth of the Atchafalaya river on Point au Fer, La., are to be used for surfacing good roads. The reefs are valued at $65,000,000. A Galveston man has been awarded a contract to remove 1,000,000 cubic feet of shells from the Point au Fer reef for use on the roads in that section of Louisiana.

Half a Thousand Per Day!
— a Revolution Among Sixes

FOUR hundred to five hundred six cylinder cars a day!

There is an announcement that will reverberate around the motor world for years to come.

The high-priced barrier between the People and the Six is battered down.

The news might seem too remarkable to be true, but, coming from a concern with the strength of the Willys Corporation, it is instantly recognized as a fact—for the Willys Corporation is one of the big industries of the automobile world. Its president is John N. Willys, president also of the Willys Overland Company and builder and distributor of over 650,000 automobiles.

The new Six is a revolutionary car. New principles of construction—well proven by long testing slice away costly encumberances of car construction at point after point. More than that—they make quantity production possible. The completed Six will roll from the assembling platform at the rate of four hundred to five hundred cars per day.

Every detail, from raw materials to the finished parts, will be supplied by the Willys Corporation, or by subsidiary or closely allied industries. Economy is added to economy at every feasible point.

And economy does not stop at first cost:—the car is a light weight car, weighing approximately 2000 pounds. And the engine develops new efficiencies. These facts work together—and produce economy. The Six averaged seventeen to twenty miles per gallon of gasoline during two years of varied and drastic road-testing, totalling over 200,000 miles.

There are other revolutionary economies—and other new and revolutionary principles of engineering. The details are yet to be announced. But the Six is on its way—a smart car to lead with among classy company. Watch for it.

The Willys Corporation is putting its reputation into this car. Its products are known throughout the automobile universe. The Auto-Lite, lighting and starting equipment, lights up the roadway, from make after make of car—outnumbering other systems, two for one. It occupies extensive plants at Toledo, Ohio, and Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The Willys-Light, a complete automatic electric-lighting plant for farms and homes, has an immense field—the thousands of farms that need modern lighting today. In one month of this year alone orders for 20,000 outfits were booked. Every manufacturer of automobiles, trucks and motors knows New Process Gears. The industry is one of the big recognized leaders in the gear-cutting trade with a constantly increasing demand.

Anyone desiring further information about the plans and the new car program of the Willys Corporation should write for our booklet.

Auto Owners Must Keep Up to Date as to New Laws

Failure to Know of Legislation No Protection for Motorists.

BY CHARLES M. HAYES.
[President Chicago Motor Club.]

THE old legal maxim that ignorance of the law is no excuse seems to apply more especially to the motorist than to any other class of citizens. There are many laws and ordinances enacted to promote general safety of which the motorist is ignorant.

Each session of the legislature brings out new ones to meet the varying conditions, and in Chicago the city council constantly has under advisement some ordinance pertaining to the use of the automobile.

This article will touch on a few important laws. Have you noticed "Stop" signs such as are along our state roads? You have, of course, if you have done any touring in Illinois, but, in spite of the fact that they have been up all summer, still, there are many motorists who are in ignorance as to their exacting meaning. For one thing, they mean exactly what they say, and that is whenever you see the circular sign known as the approach sign, with the letters R. R. in black and a little further the semi-circular "Stop" sign, you are to bring your car to a complete stop

The public utilities commission has ordered the erection of these signs at every railroad crossing in Illinois deemed by the commission to be "extra hazardous." Remember that there is a very real danger wherever a stop sign is placed.

For the motorist who is not fully alive to the dangers that lurk at railway crossings a glance at the figures compiled by the United States railway administration will be ample warning. The administration put on a "no accident week" recently. Tons of publicity was given in the newspapers. But, notwithstanding, the records show that there were 151 grade crossing accidents that week, with a total of nine deaths and forty-five injuries. Remember, the auto must follow the tracks and can not dodge or turn, and always comes out with a whole skin in automobile accidents.

Another place where accidents frequently happen is at street car crossings. The city council, realizing the need for some action in this matter, passed an ordinance about a month ago which requires all vehicles to slow down to ten miles an hour crossing street car tracks. The existence of this excellent ordinance is not generally known and the police have not been very active in enforcing it. The careful motorist will appreciate its worth and comply with the requirements of the law. At the time this ordinance was introduced there was some talk of painting the globes at street car crossings red. This idea would greatly add to the effectiveness of the ordinance.

For the benefit of those who like to bet on it, we suggest, for the sake of economy—if not for safety—that they consider the speeders' court and the financial set-backs that lurk in that vicinity.

Follow the advice of the old timers—the boys who have been driving since the days of the side crank, and know the laws and obey them.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

THE fourth annual convention of the National Association of Motor Truck Sales Managers will be held in Detroit Nov. 7 and 8. Many important questions affecting the truck owner and manufacturer will be discussed.

Sam J. Cook, export manager of the Service Motor Truck company, Wabash, Ind., returned from the former war zone in Europe. He reported that the opportunity for American business is favorable. He said Germany was laying plans to be a competitor of American manufacturers.

The record made by the Republic entry in the national motor truck development tour, which completed the tour without even as much as a puncture, is being featured by the makers of the truck.

Everything leather covered but the fenders is what the Bird-Sykes company is showing in a Paige car. The claim is made that in time all cars will be leather covered outside as well as inside.

Paul W. Litchfield, vice president and factory manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, has written "The Industrial Republic." This traces the history of labor and industry and comes to the conclusion that autocratic capitalism must come to an end.

Arthur T. Murray, president of the American Bosch Magneto company, left for a trip abroad.

A. J. Banta, manager of the Chicago Maxwell-Chalmers branch, said that in a Maxwell-Chalmers Honolulu dealer's place a squad of "duster boys" doll up every car that leaves the place.

C. Y. Kenworthy, vice president and general manager of the Roamer company, sold his interest and resigned. He now heads the Kenworthy Motors company, newly incorporated under the Illinois laws.

Farmers are advised by the Bethlehem Motor Truck company not to put off buying trucks until good roads are provided. Get the trucks now, the roads will come later, said the officials of the company.

The Oneida electric truck has 1,000 less parts than a gasoline truck of the same size, the makers of the former claim. For short hauls the electric of the Oneida design outstrips the best a gasoline truck can do, the makers declared.

H. P. Branstetter, local Kissel distributor, pointed to the fact that many large industrial concerns have provided parking space for employés' automobiles as an indication of the large number of persons who drive to and from work.

The Dearborn Truck company recently announced that George F. Bailey, general manager, would assume the active sales management. C. O. Nerad, who, since his return from service overseas, has been service manager for the company, has been appointed sales manager of all the territory west of the Mississippi river. L. W. Coulson, advertising manager, has been appointed sales manager of the territory east of the Mississippi river. Charles E. Salter has been appointed export manager and R. J. Macdonald has been appointed southern sales representative. Mr. Bailey, in assuming charge of sales, relinquishes his duties as purchasing agent, which has been assumed by C. B. Blair.

TOURS TO THE BATTLE FRONTS

New York,
Oct. 6, 1919.

American Express Co.,
65 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Permit me to express my grateful admiration for the manner in which your foreign offices have cared for the interests of us war-time travelers in Europe. Whether our need was for money, good advice or practical assistance, your representatives could always be counted upon for help of the right sort given in the right spirit. Yours is more than a commercial enterprise — the American Express offices over there in sorely troubled countries of the Old World were during the War, and are still, like oases of promptness and efficiency in a desert of business delays and financial confusion.

Faithfully yours,

(Signed) BURTON HOLMES.

Spiegel's 54th Anniversary Sale

Fifty-four years ago Joseph Spiegel founded what was to be the greatest of all furniture companies. Little did he think at that time that such growth as 54 years has brought would be a direct and positive outcome of so simple a motto as "COURTESY—HONESTY—SINCERITY."

Today there exists a mammoth mail order department — four stores in Chicago and twenty-four other stores in twenty-two cities — the combined business being the largest in the world. The strict adherence to principle—the desire to do only that which was honest and fair has made the growth from the frame building of 1865 to the most modern of stores in 1919.

Now, as befits so remarkable an achievement, we announce our 54th Anniversary Sale, keeping in mind a policy that was adopted when "Spiegel's Furniture Store" was brought into being. You—your Father—your Grandfather has made the development of "Spiegel's Furniture Store" possible. You have given us your patronage—now is our chance to express our appreciation. As you have helped us—just so great will be our offerings. We will make this sale the greatest furniture event Chicago has ever known.

"SPIEGEL'S, AS YOUR FRIEND, EXPECT NO MORE FROM YOU THAN WHAT THEY GLADLY GIVE."

We can show our appreciation and express our thanks in only one way—we can offer you unequaled values in such Home-needs as we display. This we will attempt to do. Cost had not nor was it given any consideration when we priced every article in every department—in every store.

We must give you this opportunity and every effort will be exerted to make this, our 54th Anniversary Sale, a furniture event that will long be remembered. Also we will offer to you the benefits of our Extended Account system, which grants you the privilege of paying for your purchase in monthly remittances while you can enjoy it in your Home.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN, TWO SALES A WEEK OF $250.00 EACH WILL MAKE YOU $50,000.00 A YEAR.

Some time ago when we advertised for salesmen on a new sales plan, we stated that two sales a week of $250.00 each would make a salesman at least $25,000.00 a year. We have made a large number of sales on this plan, and have demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that two sales a week will make a salesman $50,000.00 a year.

This is not one or two instances that have turned out this way, but is a conservative general average. New men with us have already made over $4,000.00 this month. Some just getting under way have made upwards of $1,000 and others over $1,000.

To understand how this money is made by a salesman it is necessary to go into the details of our business at greater length than is possible in this limited space. At the same time there is nothing complicated about our business and nothing that you cannot comprehend at the first interview.

Our men in the field work on a strictly commission basis, but we pay an immediate bonus of $50 for each prospect qualified. Some of our men have qualified as high as five in a week and others are averaging better than two a day.

We believe that we have the most unique, strongest, most successful and biggest money-making sales plan that was ever inaugurated. Only one $250 sale a week will make you $23,000 a year.

To the men who respond to this advertisement we will give exclusive virgin territory from one hundred to three hundred miles from Chicago, containing from 500 to 1,000 logical prospects. Our sales plan puts you in direct touch with these prospects with the least possible loss of time—usually by the second day you are in the field.

This business enables men to make big money, and we are looking for big men for salesmen. For men who take themselves and their business seriously—who realize that to make big money it is necessary to know their proposition and to work intelligently and industriously—for men who are willing to spend from three days to a week in our office in order to properly and thoroughly equip themselves to make $50,000 a year.

This concern has been in business more than half a century, has a capital of several million dollars, and is engaged in a business that will stand the strictest investigation. We have six Sales Managers who know every angle of the business, and who cooperate with their men in every possible way to produce results. Each man in the field is requested to phone long distance, reversing charges, every day.

If you are determined to make big money, and have the courage and ability to do so, and are willing to keep on working after you start to make it, write, giving an outline of your experience and earnings, also your age, or call from 10 to 12 A. M. or 1:30 to 3 P. M. or 5 to 5:30 P. M., Room 301, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

THE BACK SLIDER.

What is more disastrous to a man's career than to work under conditions that are unsatisfactory. In the first place he is not putting in all six which means loss of PROGRESS.

When an engine is not running smoothly look out for a big breakdown in machinery. No man should expect SUCCESS if his work is not a source of pleasure. He should enjoy his work the same as he delights in seeing a good show.

Our 16 years of experience has enabled us to perfect a system of scientifically analyzing each man individually and assist him to get into the sphere for which he is best fitted. We obligate no man to accept any position—in the case where both he and the employer are sold on each other and all arrangements are confidential. Employers recognize the wisdom and accuracy of our methods, which accounts for the hundreds of high class positions that we are able to offer today. 200,000 satisfactorily placed has established the Business Men's Clearing House as America's strongest employing power. You cannot afford to experiment. See us Monday. It costs nothing to find out.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

IMPORTANT MESSAGE

TO LANDSEEKERS, WAGE-EARNERS, AND FARM RENTERS:

During the past twenty-one years it has been our good fortune to locate a large number of men on farm homes of their own in our fertile district in Michigan. Many of these men had small capital to start with but with our co-operation and assistance they were able to become land owners and successful farmers and are now independent of strikes, layoffs, high prices, etc. YOU HAVE NEVER RECEIVED A MORE IMPORTANT MESSAGE THAN THIS ONE.

YOU HAVE HEARD A great deal lately about high PRICES FOR WHICH FARMS ARE SELLING. If there was still plenty of good land left, farms we know of in Iowa, Illinois, and other States would not sell for $500 and some even as high as $600 per acre. It must now be evident to all that good land at a reasonable price is a very scarce article and more land cannot be manufactured.

IF YOU ARE PLANNING to buy land at any future TIME, OUR SINCERE ADVICE IS BUY NOW. If you don't you will regret it just as countless others have regret not having bought years ago. Food prices are up to stay and land prices are going up every day, higher prices will mean higher taxes. Every day may cost you several hundred dollars, so write today for our big free booklet telling you all about our lands and our wonderful easy way of getting a farm home of your own.

WE BOUGHT MANY thousands of acres before the PRESENT GREAT RISE IN LAND VALUES. That is what enables us to sell them at such reasonable prices today. That is one of the reasons no one can offer you a better chance to become a land owner. There are other reasons we will be glad to tell you about if you will write for them. Our prices are so low and our terms so reasonable that most men who are earning wages can easily buy from us. They can pay us a little each month to month. If you know how much business we are doing these days you would understand what a great bargain here is for our splendid hardwood lands in Antrim and Kalkaska counties, Michigan, and why you ought to act without delay.

THE SOIL PRODUCES practically all the crops GROWN IN ILLINOIS, OHIO, INDIANA, AND Iowa, and the delicious Michigan fruits below, grown throughout the country for their fine flavor.

ANY SIZE TRACT FROM 10 to 160 acres or more at $15 TO $30 PER ACRE, ON EASY MONTHLY terms. The chances are you are not able to buy land for cash, but our liberal credit system puts it within your reach. We know the problems of the working man and you have had 21 years' experience with the one fact that we are the largest company in the business. Some advantages we offer are free transportation from Chicago, paying for land; no taxes to actual settlers for five years; money loaned to build and to buy live stock. Advice and information by practical farmers. Our country is well supplied with good schools, churches, markets, railroads, telephones, and R. F. D.

POSITIVELY NO STONE OR SWAMPY LAND FOR SALE. SIT DOWN THIS MINUTE AND WRITE FOR OUR BIG FREE BOOKLET. REMEMBER IT'S ONLY $15 TO $30 PER ACRE NOW; IT WILL BE MORE IF YOU WAIT.

Ask for rates and dates of our excursions. Our two hotels furnish good accommodations for land lookers. Our autos take you over the lands free of charge.

TRACTORS—FOR AGRICULTURAL AND INdustrial purposes have proven themselves indispensable and are now in demand. Over 125,000 were built in 1919 and about 250,- 000 will be built in 1920, with the demand exceeding the supply. Foreign markets are becoming educated to their use and there is already a healthy export demand. Having been in the mfg., sales and service end of the automotive field for ten years, followed the development of both pleasure cars and trucks, I am confident that a wonderful opportunity for profit is now open on the ground floor of a new industry where the field is practically virgin and the possibilities unlimited. Have the design and manufacture of what I know will prove a popular type tractor—not new and freakish but simple and conventional, and yet somewhat different.
To produce and sell it requires good strong financing and the purpose of this ad is to place myself in touch with $15,000 to cover the preliminary financing of a big corporation.
If you are "sold" on tractors, can qualify,
and are prepared to make a quick decision, tell me where and when I can see you. References exchanged. Address F D 561, Tribune.

AN AUTOMOBILE ACCESSORY MANUFAC-TURING BUSINESS is putting out a product that has been sold in all parts of the United States and many foreign countries for nearly eleven years and given excellent satisfaction. The product is the original of its kind on the market and the demand is greater today than ever before. Another company in the same business will sell $10,000,000 worth of the product this year and only because they have finances to carry on advertising.
The present company realizes the fact that the product must be universally advertised and would take stock in the company taking over the product, allowing control to outside parties. The plan to manufacture in large quantities with small amount of labor and shows good margin of profit.
The present company has all necessary tools necessary for operating, and all raw materials are easily accessible. References regarding the company and the product gladly given. For further particulars address L.
W. LOCKWOOD, 1424 Hennepin-av., Minneapolis, Minn.

RESERVE BANKS HERE SHOW NEW LOAN INCREASE

Country Banks Borrowing from Chicago in Good Amounts.

Member banks in the Chicago Federal Reserve district showed a further increase in their loans in the weekly report of the Federal Reserve institution. Bills discounted on government obligations ran up $11,217,367, bringing the total to $130,879,371.

The banks made a small decrease, $2,748,908 however, in bills secured by other collateral. The net increase for the week by the member banks was $8,468,459.

Other Federal Reserve banks increased their borrowings by $3,380,000. The Federal Reserve note account was substantially stationary with an increase of but $50,980.

Country banks, it apears, are beginning to borrow in fairly liberal amounts from their Chicago correspondents, and the latter have in turn resorted to the Federal Reserve bank in order to increase their own loanable funds.

Only Buyers of Commercial Paper.

Country institutions continue to be the only buyers of comercial paper.

The comparative figures for the week follow:

The New York Banks.

The New York banks showed a reduction in loans of $60,546,000, the most significant feature of their statement. Cash gained over $14,000,000, while deposits increased $18,882,000. The cash gain resulted in an expansion in the excess reserve of $11,533,790, bringing that item up to $48,598,940.

The weekly figures did not in themselves suggest the basis for the increase in call money rate. It may have been that the desire to reduce loans caused the banks to ask more for their loanable funds. United States government deposits were about steady. The figures:

Uncertainty in Rail Market.

Continued work on the Cummins railroad bill appears to be getting the measure into such shape as to make it comfortable from the viewpoint of railroad and financial interests. Comment on the measure is now quite favorable. Apparently it embraces most of the substantial features of the several plans, aside from the Plumb bill, that have been submitted to the senate.

The market for railroad securities does not as yet reflect much certainty in the public mind over what the final outcome will be. Considerable legislation will be necessary if the roads are to be turned back to private ownership by the end of the year. A reversion under present conditions of income and outgo would suggest bankruptcy for many of the properties. The expenses have been so heavy since the government assumed control that the roads have not been able to earn the agreed return.

SATURDAY SETS WEEK'S HIGH FOR CORN AND OATS

Provisions All Higher, with Pork Up 75c @$1.00.

BY CHARLES S. MICHAELS.

Highest prices of corn and oats for the week were made and held yesterday, there being gains of 1⅞@2⅜c on the active trading futures of corn, with December leading. Oats gave a good account of themselves and have for several days, despite enormous selling, and gained ⅝@⅞c.

Rye had a good class of buying and closed 1¼c to 1⅜c higher while barley gained 2c to 2½c on light offerings. Outside markets were all higher, showing about the same gains as Chicago on corn and oats.

Provisions were unsettled, there being enough realizing pressure in the near futures of lard to close then 50c to 60c lower at the inside of the day, while January finished around the top at 17½c gain. Pork gained 45c and January ribs closed around the best of the day with gains of 17½c.

Despite the bearish attitude of many of the local traders who have been selling short for several weeks, prices advanced and closed around the top with corn up 4c to 4¾c on the distant futures with May leading. Oats gained 1¼c to 1⅝c, rye is 1c to 2¼c lower. October leading while barley gained 1½c to 2c. Provisions are all higher with pork up 75c to $1.00, lard 62½c to $1.72½, and short ribs 47½c to 72½c higher than a week ago.

Short Covering in Corn.

A more general move to cover shorts on the part of local and outside bears more than offset the effect of depressing news and prices moved up rapidly and closed at the top, with December $1.26⅛ and May $1.24⅜.

Sellers of daily and weekly offers were forced to protect themselves on the way up, while the most effective selling was by holders of the offers and by scattered longs who were securing profits. Prices at the top were up 4c from the inside figure of the week, although it took three weeks to get the December down to $1.20⅝.

The continued strike of the longshoremen at the leading ports and the forecast for generally fair and colder weather were ignored, as were the increased offers of new corn to arrive. Old corn, however, is getting a little scarcer, and sample values were up ½@2c. Receipts 125 cars. Shipping sales 65,000 bu.

Oats Close at Top.

Strength in corn and buying of futures by a house with seaboard connections that was the best seller the previous day gave oats a strong tone from the start. At no time were prices as low as the previous day's close, and the finish was at the top, with December 71⅝c and May 74⅝c.

Early there was selling by several cash houses that looked like hedging business, but the offerings were quickly absorbed, and sentiment was somewhat more bullish than of late, although the activity in corn detracted from oats. Domestic shipping sales were 90,000 bu, with 75,000 bu to the seaboard. Sample values unchanged to ½c higher, with receipts 145 cars. Country offerings small.

Millers Want Cash Rye.

A good class of buying was in evidence in rye and futures advanced 1⅝@1⅜c and closed at the top, with limited selling pressure. Millers were after the cash grain in the sample market, one firm taking 13 cars. No. 2 on spot sold at $1.39@1.39½. Receipts 16 cars.

Barley advanced 1@2c, offerings being small and demand better. Rumors that the wartime prohibition would be lifted this week was a factor. Spot sales were at $1.22@1.35. Receipts 25 cars.

Flax seed at Duluth closed $3.09 higher; October, $4.29; December, $4.24. Winnipeg, 17@18½c higher; October, $4.31; December, $4.02½.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, $8.50@11.25 per 100 lbs. Toledo unchanged; December, $5.67½ per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed strong. Country lots, $30.00@38.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, $1.00 higher; December, $31.00 per bu of 60 lbs.

Lard Prices Drop.

Buying of lard was not as sharp as for several days, and selling pressure from western packers in January increased. Despite this the January closed higher, while the nearby deliveries finished with losses of 50@60c. Ribs and pork were higher on light trading. Export inquiries were in the market from a number of countries, but the business is so scattered that it is difficult to sum up. Loose lard is 50c under October. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 31,131,000 lbs, against 34,512,000 lbs the previous week and 44,160,000 lbs last year. Packing here for the season to date, 4,696,000 hogs, or 61,000 short of last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A great many of the local professionals are bullish on corn and have bought enough to take the bulk of the surplus out of the pit. Although there has been an advance of around 6c this week, a number of the active traders said at the close that they expected values to go higher. The short interest, they assert, is larger than was generally believed and there has been a fair increase in the outside buying as a result of a stronger market. The shorts have been active buyers and that interest has been greatly reduced. A few traders expressed the belief that Monday might see the end of the advancing tendency unless there is a decided increase in the outside demand. They believe that the bulls will not support the market should there be a material increase in selling and an effort on the part of the longs to secure profits. A few expressed the belief that the advance will culminate some time during Monday.

Country offerings of corn yesterday were larger from Iowa. A few commission houses said their purchases were the best of the week on the basis of December price to 1c over, track Chicago, for No. 4 white and yellow, shipment by Dec. 15, and for all December shipment.

"The grain markets are certainly approaching pre-war or normal conditions faster than the trade anticipated," says Simons, Day & Co. "If it were not for the sharp price reduction already recorded, such conditions would produce declining prices, but this contingency has been removed to a great extent by reason of the value of the grains, particularly corn. The prospects of greatly increased receipts will have to become a reality before any pressure from the source will be a dominant feature. As to oats, the visible supply is decreasing gradually, with a prospect of material inroads when shipments east become heavier. The producer is a reluctant seller. The light weight of the season's crop will mean more feeding, hence a larger farm consumption than last year. It should not be overlooked that the government's estimate of the Argentine oat acreage is 2,300,000 against 3,091,000 last year."

"The latest reports from abroad indicate that the feeding demand for oats will not be as large as expected," said a Baltimore exporter who was here yesterday. "As to rye, I think it will sell around $1. There may be some exports, but there are few years in which we ever exported more than 8,000,000 bu."

Asked as to his opinion on all grains, he expressed bearish sentiments.

"Oats have given a good account of themselves in the last few days. The big selling on Friday did not have any effect and the houses which were the largest sellers then were the best buyers yesterday. All the big commission houses were on the buying side yesterday, Omaha houses taking December freely at 71¼c, cleaning up the surplus offerings. A great deal of realising was on at that figure, and all offerings were absorbed. European inquiries, which have not yet materialized into any extensive transactions, disturbed an oversold interest, in lard especially, and brought on erratic fluctuations, regardless of lower hogs and the prospect of increased receipts. The domestic cash trade in meats has been very large, but buyers have practically dictated the terms,' says W. L. Gregson & Co.

J. C. Knocke has applied for membership on the Board of Trade and E. B. Cox posted his membership for transfer.

Grain loadings in the northwestern regional zone for the week ended Oct. 14 were 14,916 cars, against 19,789 cars last year.

Scandinavian countries are said to be short of concentrated feeds, and local mill feed dealers report a better domestic demand the last week. Cotton seed and linseed oil cake meal is scarce and prices are higher. St. Louis reported an urgent demand there for all mill feeds.

A Minneapolis message to Bartlett-Frazier Co. said: "Very little corn was sold to arrive by the country until on Friday, when around 100,000 bu were bought on the basis of 1@2c over Chicago December, track Minneapolis, some for arrival by Dec. 15 and the balance by Dec. 25. Bids are now December price to 1c under, with fair offerings. Believe that the amount sold for shipment out of here has been overestimated."

A very close student of conditions, in discussing the corn market, said that some of the traders who turned bullish on the break and sold out on the bulge would probably regret it. He said there was always a tendency for the bulls to let go too quick when a declining market turned upward.

World's wheat crop for 1919-'20 is estimated by the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome at 3,392,000,000 bu, or 165,000,000 bu less than the previous year, and compares with a prewar average of 3,706,000,000 bu."

Hog receipts at 8,000 proved largest since May for Saturday, while arrivals for the week at 122,500 were largest in three months. Prices were largely 25c lower than Friday, top being $14.80, while some hogs purchased Friday at $15.05 resold at $14.80 Saturday.

The day's average price of hogs at $14.25 showed 25c decline, while the average for the week at $14.50 was lowest since closing week of February and $7.70 below record week established in July.

While receipts for the week at 122,500 were 7,200 larger than previous week, the average weight of hogs at 242 pounds was two pounds heavier than week previous. Shippers bought indifferently during the week.

Cattle Average Is High.

Improved quality and higher selling carried the average price of good beef cattle for the week to $16.65, there being only two weeks higher. The record was $17.30, established second week of August.

A total of 28,000 western range cattle arrived during the week, being largest of the season. Two years ago 31,500 arrived, which was the largest for any week that year.

Lighter receipts caused an upturn in sheep prices late in the week, but poorer quality carried the week's average price of lambs down to $14.60, being 75c below previous week, while sheep at $7.20 were 95c lower.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 31,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep, against 31,024 cattle, 32,904 hogs, and 27,228 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 90,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 120,000 sheep.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

BIG LEASES AND LOANS FEATURE OF REALTY MART

Another Large Clothing Manufacturer to Go to West Side.

BY AL CHASE.

Big leases, still bigger leases and one large purchase of vacant as site for a huge steel plant were the outstanding points in the week's real estate market.

The largest lease of the week was that made by the Chicago Tailors' association, which plans to move from the downtown district to the new rapidly growing center of clothing manufacturers in the vicinity of Jackson boulevard and Throop street. It has rented through Miltenberg & Guettel from Frank A. Hecht, the seven story building now being erected at the northwest corner of Van Buren and Throop, for ten years from Jan. 1, 1920, at a term total of $450,000.

The building will represent an investment of around $400,000, it is said. It is only a block south of the $800,000 twelve story building to be erected by the Ed. V. Price company, who also are to move from the downtown district.

North Side Lease.

A second good sized lease was made by the Anderson Electric Specialty company of the six and seven story building of the Ilg Electric Ventilating company, 100x100, at 154-60 Whiting street, for fifteen years from May 1, 1920, at a term rental of $315,000. They will occupy 75,000 square feet. The Anderson company at present are at 118 South Clinton street. The Ilg company are erecting a new plant on a ten acre tract at the southwest corner of North Crawford avenue and George street. J. H. Van Vlissingen and E. N. Duerlein & Co. were the brokers.

The purchase of a seventeen acre tract bounded by South Kedzie avenue, the south branch of the river and the tracks of the Chicago and Illinois Western railroad, by the Fitzsimons Steel & Iron company, involved over half a million dollars. A new plant to cost between $250,000 and $300,000 is to be built. The consideration paid for the property was not disclosed but it has been valued at 30 cents a square foot. The area totals about 745,000 square feet. It was purchased from Oscar Shur. A. J. Montague & Son were the brokers for both parties.

Apartment House Loans.

Four large north side apartment house projects were financed on Wednesday in the negotiating of loans aggregating $750,000. The total investment in improvements will exceed $2,000,000.

The largest of the quartet was the Monterey apartments, now under construction at the northwest corner of Surrendon avenue and Junior terrace. It is being built by William De Carl of Santa Barbara, Cal. Mr. De Carl insists that this is a "true Californian apartment building," claiming that the two and three room apartment house originated on the Pacific coast. It is nine stories and involves, with the land and apartment furnishings, around $2,500,000. The Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings band and H. O. Stone & Co. have underwritten a first mortgage serial gold bond issue of $325,000.

Mardie R. Plotke gave three trust deeds to the Chicago Title and Trust company for $150,000 each for six years at 6 per cent, one secured by 114x200 feet at 622-32 Cornelia avenue, another secured by the 110x200 feet at the northeast corner of Broadway and Cornelia avenue, and the third by the 100x125 feet at 3510-18 Pine Grove avenue. This $450,000 is to finance the erection of three court apartment buildings, each three stories.

Wabash Avenue Lease.

An echo of the deal made public week before last of the acquirement of the Kissel Car company's lease on the four story building at the northeast corner of Wabash and Twenty-sixth street, was the announcement that Harry P. Branstetter has purchased the 100x180 feet at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Twenty-sixth street, directly opposite and will erect a three story automobile building to cost $170,000 for the sale and service of Kissel cars.

Mr. Branstetter bought the property through Oliver & Co. from three different owners—the 32x180 feet on the corner from John Murtaugh; the 46x180 feet adjoining on the north from Grace Sherwood Trumbull, and the 22x180 feet next adjoining on the north from Howard G. Kornblith.

Sherburne M. Earling of S. M. Earling & Co., brokers, has given a trust deed to the Central Trust company for $250,000, six years at 6 per cent, secured by the three story Sherburne apartments now being erected at the southeast corner of Sheridan road and Rosemont avenue. The property fronts 146 feet on the boulevard and runs back to the Lincoln park boundary. The building occupies the entire frontage on Sheridan road and runs back 374 feet to the lake. It will have fifty-four apartments and will cost $650,000.

$200,000 Addition to Be Built by Stockyards Bank

Rapid growth of the People's Stockyards State bank, at the northeast corner of West Forty-seventh street and Ashland avenues, has led to the purchase of property adjoining their present bank on which they plan a $200,000 addition to conform architecturally with the older building.

The lot fronts 50 feet on Gross avenue and extends back approximately 100 feet to Forty-seventh, with an area of 5,150 square feet. This is the area of the present building. A reported price of $42,500 was paid to Anton Hallanda for the property. Work on the building will start in the spring.

Here is one of Chicago's newest Streeterville apartment houses—222 East Walton place—representing a total outlay of around $800,000. It is now under construction. There will be eighteen apartments of eight rooms and four baths, with an average rental of $300 a month. Every apartment will have real fireplaces where one may sit and watch real wood logs blaze.

On the roof will be a villa of eight rooms, with a terrace elaborately ornamented, with a pergola on one side for an outdoor dining room and another on the other side for an outdoor sleeping porch. There will be a thirty foot solarium with marble floor. It has been leased for $5,000 a year.

It is about two blocks east of the new Drake hotel and a few hundred feet from the lake, both north and east. It has 6 frontage of 110 feet. Harold Bradley & Co. are managers of the building.

30 ACRE SINGER TRACT IN INDIAN HILL IS SOLD

One of the most picturesque pieces of real estate on the north shore, the thirty acre tract owned for many years by Berthold Singer, Chicago consul for Spain, Costa Rica, Salvador, and Nicaragua, adjoining the Indian Hill club in Winnetka, has been sold. It is reported that the purchasers, W. C. Walling and R. D. Whitman, paid approximately $100,000.

In one corner of the tract is a two acre lake, sixty feet deep and stocked with black bass and other fish. The southwest five acres are heavily wooded with virgin timber. From a mound on the shore of the lake a broad view of the Skokie can be had.

The new owners intend to sell the property in tracts of five acres and up. The old Singer residence, used by Mr. Singer for his summer home, will be torn down. Several large residences have been built on the strip of property stretching along the east and south sides of the Singer tract between it and the club grounds.

Carl E. Swanson has sold the eighteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Seventy-sixth street and Calumet avenue to Margarete Redlich for a reported consideration of $60,000, subject to $37,500. SEEKS REMEDY FOR PARKLESS NEW SUBDIVISIONS

Rapid opening up of new subdivisions with no provision whatever for parks, playgrounds, or school grounds has led the Cook county real estate board to seek a remedy. Yesterday the special committee on resolutions of the parks and playgrounds committee sent an appeal to the city council to pass an ordinance providing that whenever a plat of a subdivision or addition of forty acres or more is allowed to be made a matter of public record, at least 5 per cent of the acreage shall be set aside for public use and dedicated to the city for public purposes without compensation to the owner of the subdivision.

It is suggested that in case the city fails to make use of the property turned over to it, within five years for park, school or playground purposes, the land revert to the original owner.

Harold Bradley Buys "Gold Coast" Residence

Another high class residence in the "gold coast" district changed hands during the week. COUNTY RECORDER ISSUES FREE BOOK OF REALTY DATA

Both real estate men and the general public probably will be interested in knowing that Joseph F. Haas, county recorder, has issued a pamphlet entitled "Torrens and Real Estate Data for Cook County." This pamphlet includes not only an explanation of what the Torrens system is and how to proceed, both before and after registration, but also includes a large amount of real estate information which is not generally available to realty owners and which is valuable to them, whether their property is under the Torrens system or not.

"I desire, if possible," writes Mr. Haas, "to bring the Torrens system closer to the people, and in order to do that it means that the people should really understand what the Torrens system is. My appropriation is limited and I can only mail a small proportion of the pamphlets from this office. The major portion of them will have to be called for. Copies can be procured free at 120 County building."

New York Expert to Tell What Zoning Really Means

Zoning as a comprehensive bettering of municipal conditions, both residential and industrial, is a subject which seems to be the least understood of present day topics. Apparently a majority of persons think it merely is the separating of factories from residences. Property owners vaguely fear it will hurt realty values; manufacturers hope just as vague an idea that it will harm industry. Its tremendous scope and its powers to improve living conditions, advance real estate values, and speed up industrial activities should be known, especially in view of what Chicago expects to do in zoning.

Other cities are years ahead—notably St. Louis, New York, and Newark. Chicago is ambling along to a goal. There are many pitfalls to be avoided in reaching the right goal. With that in view The Tribune has arranged for a series of articles on city zoning by one of the leading zoning experts in the country, Herbert S. Swan, secretary of the zoning committee of New York City. He will explain what zoning really is and what it really will do for the factory, the home, and for real estate values. He will tell some of the results in other cities, notably New York. He will warn of the dangers of piecemeal zoning and other experiments suggested.

The first article, which follows, is on "The Necessity for Zoning."

Herbert S. Swan

BY HERBERT S. SWAN.

[Secretary New York Zoning Committee.]

Millions of dollars will be spent within the next few years on new buildings in every city in the United States. This money may just as well be spent toward the permanent upbuilding of the community as upon hit or miss, haphazard growth involving endless construction, demolition, and reconstruction without ever achieving any degree of finality. It won't cost any more—indeed, it will cost considerably less—and at the same time it will produce a much better city to live in and to do business in for generations to come.

The time to zone our cities is now. Every year that is allowed to lapse without the adoption of zoning means that much less zoning in the end. Here is a quiet residential street improved with private dwellings. If zoned now, this street may be maintained for detached houses. Wait until next year to adopt a zoning scheme and the erection of two or three tenements will place it in the tenement house class. The erection of a factory or a garage may even put it in an industrial zone. We must have zoning to protect what we have got.

Gas Tanks Vs. Parks.

Zoning expresses the idea of orderliness in community development. Just as we have a place for everything in a well ordered home, so we should have a place for everything in a well regulated town. What would we think of a housewife who insisted on keeping her gas range in the parlor and her piano in the kitchen? Yet anomalies like these have become commonplace in our community housekeeping. In what city can't we find gas tanks next to parks, garages next to schools, boiler shops next to hospitals, stables next to churches, or funeral establishments next to dwelling houses?

What would be considered insanity if practiced in the ordinary house is excused as an exercise of individual liberty when practiced in the city at large. And yet misplaced buildings are to be condemned much more than out of place pieces of furniture.

To the owner of neighboring property the invasion of an injurious use often spells financial ruin—a ruin even more complete than if his building were destroyed by fire, for in that event his loss would be made good in part at least by insurance. But for the values destroyed in blighted districts there is no insurance; each owner must stand his own loss.

Loss to Public.

The individual's loss is also the public's loss. To the former the invasion of offensive uses spells depreciated values, increased vacancies, lower rentals, the calling of mortgage loans, foreclosure; to the latter, reduced assessments, unpaid taxes, tax sales.

The present high cost of labor and materials emphasizes as never before the necessity of orderly building. With two houses worth as much as three several years ago, there is much more to be lost now than formerly through uncontrolled building.

Mounting prices make it increasingly more necessary to conserve the value of all buildings, old no less than new, from premature and avoidable depreciation.

Taxes on real estate were so heavy before the war that many cities, hard pressed for additional income, were already searching for new sources of revenue. The tax on land and buildings, it must be remembered, yields all the way from 30 to 70 per cent of the total municipal revenue in different cities. Under these circumstances it is quite evident that the stabilization of real estate values is of fundamental importance to the improvement of the municipal revenue system. During the next few years the real estate tax promises to assume even greater importance. The tremendous financial demands of the war in forcing the national government not only to increase existing taxes but to impose many new ones have had the effect of shutting off many potential sources of revenue to the local governments and of throwing them permanently back upon the real estate tax as the continued mainstay of their revenue system.

The next article, "Zoning Benefits to Industry," will appear in next Sunday's real estate department.

Turn Verein Lincoln Buys Property from Brewery

The Turn Verein Lincoln, which has occupied the 250x150 feet of ground in Diversy parkway, forty-nine feet west of Sheffield avenue, north front, for the last thirty-five years, has purchased the property from the Primalt Products company, formerly the Independent Brewing association, for $40,000. CELEBRATE THE 40TH BIRTHDAY OF INCANDESCENT

Light Experts Here for 4 Day Session This Week.

The fortieth birthday of the incandescent light will be celebrated on Tuesday. In commemoration of the event more than 500 of the nation's illuminating experts, members of the Illuminating Engineering Society of America, will gather in Chicago for a four days' session to recount the transition in lighting in two score years.

It does not take old timers to recollect back to Oct. 21, 1879, when the world received with good-natured ridicule the announcement of Thomas A. Edison that he had perfected an incandescent lamp that would really "light." But the wizard of Menlo Park went ahead. So rapid was his development of the invention that Christmas eve of the same year saw a special excursion train "racing" down from New York to the little New Jersey town carrying a throng who were to view the wonders of the first community "lighted by electricity."

Electrical experts point out that it is only within the last ten or fifteen years that the use of this great invention has become general. Up to that time the kerosene and gasoline lamp, as well as candles, were widely used. Now not only are the cities flooded with light, but the development in rural communities has been remarkable, thousands of farmers' barnyards now having electric light.

Progress of Meeting.

The meeting of the illuminating experts, which is the thirteenth annual convention, was arranged especially to fall on the birthday of the incandescent lamp so that it might be properly celebrated. The sessions will open in the Crystal room of the Hotel Sherman, and will continue until Thursday.

Louis A. Ferguson, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison company, will deliver the address of welcome and the response will be by L. B. Marks, New York City. Dr. George A. Hoadley, Swarthmore, Pa., president of the society, will make his address, and there will be reports by the committees on progress and automobile headlighting specifications.

Program of Entertainment.

Entertainment has been arranged by the local committee. On Monday evening the president's ball will be held in the Louis XVI. room, Hotel Sherman; on Tuesday afternoon there will be a visit en masse to the electrical show in the Coliseum, on Tuesday evening there will be a theater party at the Studebaker; Wednesday afternoon an automobile trip along the North Shore has been arranged for visiting women; Wednesday evening a banquet is scheduled for the Hotel Sherman; on Thursday afternoon a shopping tour for the women through the State street stores and on Thursday evening there will be an excursion throughout Chicago to see the city "lighted up."

The extent of the development of the incandescent lamp in the short period since its birth, is shown by figures recently compiled by the Illinois Committee on Public Utility Information, which showed 8,900,000 homes in the country now lighted by electricity.

In Illinois the transformation from kerosene and candles has been exceptionally rapid, the compilation shows, this state ranking second in the nation. The total output of electricity for the state is approximately 2,500,000,000 kilowatt hours and there are approximately 370,000 homes in Chicago having electric lights. Millions of dollars have been invested by private capital in developing the electrical companies for the benefit of the public, in Chicago alone this amounting to over $95,000,000.

LAST OF AURORA'S WORLD CRUSADERS BACK FROM FRANCE

CORP. ERNEST R. SCHARSCHUG.

The last of Aurora's world war soldiers returned home from France on Friday. He is Corporal Ernest R. Scharschug, who was discharged from St. Andrew's Military hospital, Toronto, Canada.

Corporal Scharschug was a member of the old 3d Illinois, afterwards the 129th infantry, when the Mexican border mobilization was ordered. After serving through the Springfield concentration and while on a train for Texas, he was discharged for being under weight. In efforts to get back into the army he succeeded in getting as far as Jefferson Barracks several times, where again his weight barred him.

When he "joined up" with the Canadians, because of his weight the best he could get was a place in the railway contingent. On the black bread diet of the "hard labor" brigade he advanced to the engineers, and when the British started their big drive he volunteered and was accepted for the infantry. He won his corporal's chevrons for service in helping suppress the bolshevik riots at Rhyl, Wales.

CHICAGO FAST IN JOB GIVING TO EX-SOLDIERS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—With the peak of soldier unemployment now passed, the office of the assistant to the secretary of war has been able to catch up on the work started by Colonel Arthur Woods last March and now being continued under Major General William G. Haan.

The statistics show that Chicago has placed 90 per cent of all the soldier applicants through its bureau at 120 West Adams street, for a period of 24 weeks.

There have been 33,843 applications and 30,507 placed in jobs. Altogether 61,199 opportunities have been offered to returned soldiers and sailors. In a sample week, ending Oct. 4, there were 809 new applicants for work; help wanted totaled 1,818 positions; men actually placed and working, 1,296.

UNVEIL TABLET TODAY IN HONOR OF U. S. VETERANS

Sons of Revolution Mark Payment of Debt to France.

The Sons of the Revolution in the state of Illinois will unveil a bronze tablet this afternoon in memory of the American soldiers who fought in France. The tablet will be mounted upon one of the bases of the northwest corner of the federal building. Attorney Samuel B. King, president of the society in Illinois, will make the introductory address.

Gen. Collerdet, military attaché from the French embassy at Washington, and Prof. Francis Wayland Shepardson, formerly of the University of Chicago, will also speak.

Historic Day.

The society chose today for the unveiling because it is the anniversary of the surrender of the British army to the American and French army, which closed the revolutionary war at Yorktown, Va.

The tablet is inscribed as follows:

"The minute men of 1775, who left the plow and shouldered the musket that men in America may be free and equal, were beholden to France for the victory.

Debt Is Paid.

"To the men of 1917 in khaki and blue, the spirit of the minute men is beholden for the redemption of the debt to France that was made when the commander of the American army in France said:

"'Lafayette, we are here.'

"Erected by the society of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of Illinois, 1919."

The ceremonies will start at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

ENROLLMENT IN HIGH SCHOOLS SETS A RECORD

Shops and laboratories of the Lane Technical High school are being used as classrooms to seat the fall enrollment of 3,286 pupils. This is the highest number of pupils ever registered in a Chicago high school.

Hyde Park High school follows Lane with the next largest enrollment of 2,900. Senn, Schurz, and Harrison Technical High schools each have 2,700 pupils. All the high schools in the city are feeling the pressure of the 10 per cent increase over last year's enrollment.

The elementary schools have less than their usual yearly increase in the number of pupils attending. Only 7,500 more pupils than last year, an increase of but 2 per cent, have entered the grade schools this fall. The average yearly addition to the enrollment is 10,000.

RED CROSS NEEDS $1,700,000 TO AID WOUNDED HERE

Home Service Work Smooths Life Trials for Thousands.

Chicago will be asked for $1,700,000 by the Red Cross next month. Of this amount $500,000 is expected through the renewal of $1 yearly memberships by a half million citizens. The remaining $1,200,000 must come through contributions of corporations, companies, and individuals in the Chicago chapter's district, and is to be evenly divided between the local organization and the parent body.

"We're informed from Washington that this will be the last popular subscription campaign," Marquis Eaton, president of the Chicago chapter, said yesterday. "But, coming after the many wartime drives, we realize that it will be a tough nut to crack.

"Isn't there some way that 'Home Service,' the work now burdening the Red Cross finances and personnel, can be brought to the attention of the general public? If Chicago and her suburbs knew the full meaning of those words, I think we'd have better prospects."

Why $1,700,000 is Needed.

At the "Home Service" headquarters in the Garland building, 58 East Washington street, Mrs. Katherine Briggs directs a force of more than 800 under officers and clerks. There are thirteen substations. Typewriters clatter, messenger boys rush in and out, and the whole thing seems confusion until the hopper of the mill is looked into.

All day long a steady stream of boys, girls, and older people pour through the offices. They go carrying cash, clothing, or information that removes wrinkles from their brows. Government red tape is interpreted in many languages. But let Mrs. Briggs tell why that $1,700,000 is needed and where it goes by explaining the "machinery" of her offices:

"Here's where they come in to visit 'The Greatest Mother in the World.'" At each of these fifteen desks is an interviewer, trained to get at the bottom of things and directed to get all troubles, not just the one the ex-service man or his relatives think they have.

Aid Wounded Soldiers.

"Compensation for wounds in action or sickness resulting from service is the peak of troubles they hear. So many of the poor fellows come merely seeking medical assistance, not knowing that they are entitled to hospital care and pay for the time they are unable to work.

"It's all a terrible maze of red tape to them. We specialize for the trouble. Mrs. Joseph E. Phillips is in charge of this department. She and her staff prepare the proper applications and cooperate with the public health service in getting accurate reports of physical surveys. These reports and statements are sworn to and then forwarded to Washington.

"Nine times out of ten, if the soldier himself undertakes to prepare the applications he makes a slight error somewhere. Then his papers are sidetracked in Washington—for a time, anyway.

"While he's waiting for his money we take care of his family, advance him money, if needed, or clothing, through the Salvation Army. It costs to get these things done, to investigate dubious claims.

"Then, in addition to compensation, there's the matter of insurance. D. Roy Mathews, an expert insurance man, takes care of these cases. The poor fellow who can't meet his payments, but wants to keep up his government insurance, we help. Then there's the lad who wants to convert his into a 'civilian' policy.

"The medical department, which cooperates with the public health service in this building, is invaluable. The men who need immediate assistance from a doctor get it. We pay and settle with Uncle Sam afterwards. Mrs. Rosamond Patterson is in charge here.

Give Vocational Advice.

"Employment and vocational advice have set many a man on his feet. Transportation, location of relatives, legal problems, health questions, adjustment of personal affairs, discrepancies in pay and discharge papers, travel pay adjustments, foreign service cases, discharges, and attendant troubles, all come to our attention.

"Liberty bonds, bought and paid for in the service and lost in transferring from camp to camp or overseas are reclaimed.

"Then, there's the family, destitute because the 'man,' returning from service, can't find a job paying enough to live these days. His discharge papers pass him into our care and our investigations and agents set him on his feet.

"There's no atmosphere of charity connected with our work. We feel, and try to make every one of our aides feel, that the boys deserve it, whether he was a soldier, sailor, or marine and whether he served at home or abroad."

The Home Service workers are caring for 31,000 workers in this district. It takes money.

SELLS $650,000,000 WAR MATERIAL WITHIN 2 WEEKS

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Oct. 18.—Col. J. H. Graham, a member of the liquidation commission established by special act of congress in March to dispose of war material, announced today the completion within two weeks of the biggest liquidation ever undertaken. The United States received for supplies, it is roughly estimated, $650,000,000.

Included in the material sold to the French, Belgian, Serbian, Czecho-Slovak, and several Baltic governments were 1,500 locomotives, 18,000 cars, 70,000 motor vehicles, installations for railroad yards, camps, hospitals, docks, telephone and telegraph systems, and quantities of foodstuffs, while equipment, mostly artillery ordnance, valued at $100,000,000 was sent home. France was the biggest buyer, but Poland bought 1,500 motor vehicles and other material, amounting to $50,000,000.

"Considering that much of the material was of little value except for war, we have gotten a good price," said Col. Graham. "Our business dealings with the French and other governments were satisfactory."

After the accountants complete their tabulation the commission, including Edwin Sparker and Henry F. Hollis, will leave for America.

PLAN BOND ISSUE CAMPAIGN.

Efforts to unify support of the six bond issue proposals affecting the work of the Chicago plan commission will be made Monday. At a luncheon in the Hotel Sherman, Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the commission, will outline the plan of campaign to the heads of various civic organizations of the city.
